Lansing Note Links Wilson To Morgan's War Loans

J. P. Morgan, on Stand, Blames Germany for Conflict.

Aid to Allies Held Against 1914 Policy

White House, However, Gave Financiers Dispensation.

By Felix Bruner.

While J. P. Morgan sat before it in a witness chair, the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday wrote a new page in World War history with the revelation of a document purporting to show that Woodrow Wilson indirectly gave the word to international bankers in 1914 to go ahead with loans to belligerents, contrary to the publicly announced policy of the Government.

While crowds swarmed into the Senate caucus room for a glimpse of the head of the house of Morgan and five of the Morgan partners, the testimony of the bankers was overshadowed by the contents of the document introduced by the committee itself.

Principal witnesses were Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont and George Whitney, Morgan partners, and Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City Bank of New York. Other Morgan partners present were Thomas S. Lamont, S. Parker Gilbert and Russell C. Leffingwell.

Morgan Blames Germany.

At the outset of the hearing, Morgan read a prepared statement in which he declared that the warlike acts of the German government, and not financial arrangements with the allies, were responsible for forcing the United States into the war. He said, however, speaking for his company that "we agreed that we should do all that was lawfully in our power to help the allies win the war as soon as possible."

Vanderlip was even more emphatic in his statement that he never was "neutral in thought." He said he actively favored the allied cause "from the day the Germans marched into Belgium."

The hitherto unrevealed document concerning war loans was a memorandum written by Robert Lansing, then counselor of the State Department and later Secretary of State, on October 23, 1914. It bore the notation that its substance had been communicated to Willard Straight, whom Morgan identified as "a gentleman we used to get information." The memorandum quoted President Wilson as saying that there would be no objection to credits to belligerents, but said the Government should not be asked to approve such loans, because of its announced policy.

Bryan Announced Plan.

The policy of the Government had been announced on August 15, 1914, by William Jennings Bryan, then Secretary of State, who had said "In the judgment of this Government loans by American bankers to any foreign nation which is at war are inconsistent with the true spirit of neutrality."

It was not until March 31, 1915, five months after the secret communication to the Morgan firm by Lansing, that the Government's ban against loans was publicly lifted. Meanwhile, however, a number of loans had been made.

Another document put in evidence, a letter written by Bryan to Senator William J. Stone, then Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, on January 20, 1915, three months after the Lansing memorandum, said: "War loans were disapproved because of neutrality."

Thomas W. Lamont, from the witness chair, told the committee that while the Lansing document had

Plan of League For Ban on Oil Appears 'Dead'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 7.—The League of Nations virtually has abandoned a plan to vote an oil embargo against Italy, it was reported tonight in diplomatic circles.

These sources said this decision was "practically certain," since a poll of League council members showed the belief that existing sanctions soon will bring an end to Italy's ability to carry on the war.

Military and naval activity in southern France increased, while French and British military experts, officials said, carried on "normal conversations between two friendly nations."

Maj. Gen. Gustav Gamelin, chief of the army general staff, completed a military inspection of troops and fortifications along the Italian frontier today. The ministry of the navy announced the Mediterranean fleet is scheduled to hold a series of three maneuvers off Corsica.

The Mediterranean maneuvers will begin January 20, when the League Council meets.

French Fleet to Anchor.

At the same time France's Atlantic fleet is expected to anchor at Casablanca on a 45-day cruise near Gibraltar.

Unofficial commentators here reported the British general staff was pressing for application of an oil embargo against the Fascist "aggressor," in a move to stop the African war at any price.

The British general staff's motives for reportedly seeking to end the Italo-Ethiopian war quickly by means of an oil embargo were outlined as follows by Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, writing in the newspaper L'Oeuvre:

That an overwhelming Ethiopian victory over the Italians, or a victory of blacks over whites, might seriously affect other colonial nations; that any reduction in Italy's military power would upset the balance of Europe and that postponement of a settlement might mean that rearmed Germany would take a hand in the controversy and openly demand her colonies back.

Oil Deal Rumored.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 7.—A plan is being negotiated here to supply Italy with oil from an American refinery in Hamburg, Germany, before the coming session of the League of Nations can attempt an oil ban against the Fascist state, it was reported tonight.

The reported plan calls for exchange of Italian-owned real estate in Paris—a block of buildings on the Champs Elysees—for frozen credits in Germany, to be used to finance purchase of the oil by Italy.

The Hamburg concern was understood to be the Nitag Refinery, American-owned and directed by Davis Rudd. Rudd was said to have arrived here today, seeking to complete the reported oil deal before the League can act on an oil embargo against Italy. Should the property exchange plan fall through, Rudd will seek a loan to finance the oil shipments, it was said.

The oil would come from American-owned wells located outside of United States territory, according to the reported plan.

Morgan Corrects Lamont on Bible

"The Bible says that money is the root of all evil," said Thomas W. Lamont, Morgan partner, at one point in his testimony.

"It does not," interposed J. P. Morgan, "It says that the love of money is the root of all evil."

The quotation is from the tenth verse of the sixth chapter of Timothy. It reads:

Sea Death Toll Rises as Storms Ravage Europe

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 7.—Twenty-seven persons were known dead tonight in shipwrecks at sea and accidents in northern Europe since Sunday. France was ravaged by floods.

It was feared the death toll in the Irish Sea, where a hurricane struck over the week-end, may be at least a dozen more because of reports of the disappearance of coastal vessels.

Ten died in the foundering of the drifter Shore Breeze, three were killed aboard the Blue Funnel liner Ulysses by a big wave, and one person was washed from the fishing boat Feasible, all in the Irish Sea.

Nine Drowned in Finland.

Nine were drowned off Hangoe, Finland, when a military transport was wrecked. Four were drowned near Hamburg, Germany, in the collision of a tug and a launch.

The coastal steamer Dromaine, unreported since it took on a pilot off Newcastle, Northern Ireland, Sunday, returned to Newcastle tonight. She was badly battered, but the crew of six and the pilot were safe.

Flooded rivers menaced hundreds of cities and towns in France. There was only boat traffic in the streets of Nantes, where the river Loire was at its highest since 1910.

Seine Traffic Halted.

Parisian authorities halted all barge traffic in the Seine, where floods destroyed produce piled on wharves. The Seine, however, was expected to begin dropping tonight. Other rivers caused much damage to farms.

A mild flooding of some inland parts of England was not serious but more rain was predicted.

The Moor liner Pearlmoor, which sent out on S O S from the Irish Sea Sunday, reached Barry, Wales, safely. The Cunard-White Star liner Ausonia reached Tilbury Docks, Essex, although she was reported by the Exchange Telegraph Agency to have sent out S O S messages last night.

'Bountyless' One-Man Mutiny Aboard U. S. Flagship Bared

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 7.—Full details of the bold attempt of a seaman to rob the cash till of the Pacific fleet's flagship single-handed on a stormy, dark night at sea last November 14 were related here today.

The story tells how an officer, after being marched, pistol at his back, to the disbursing office of the ship, frustrated the attempt by quick thinking.

The fantastic robbery attempt occurred off the Pacific Coast aboard the California, flagship of Admiral Lanning, commanding the battle force of the fleet.

It was 3 a. m. The sea was heavy. Of the 1,100 members of the crew, only about 100 were awake, busy at their duties.

The story told here today continues:

"In his room far aft on the half deck, Lieut. Walter F. Prien, supply officer, was asleep. He was awakened by the glare of a searchlight in his face.

"As he raised himself a revolver was thrust into his face. Both (the light and revolver) were in the hands of a seaman.

"'Do just as you are told or you will be instantly killed,' said the sailor.

The story tells how the officer, under the threat of death, hurriedly dressed and was marched up to the disbursing office where a safe contained several thousand dollars. The door was locked and Lieut. Prien pleaded he did not have the key.

"'Where is the key,' the seaman was quoted as demanding.

Commissioners Delay Program For New Taxes

Present Budget Augurs Surplus, Hazen Says After Seeing King.

By James D. Secrest.

The District Commissioners late yesterday virtually decided to withhold all new tax proposals for the fiscal year 1937 after a conference with Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee.

The decision, concurred in by Senator King, was reached because of the anticipated surplus in District revenue which will be created if the Budget Bureau's recommendation for a $43,100,000 economy budget is not increased substantially by Congress.

At the same time the Commissioners decided, with King's approval, to finance the proposed construction of a new courts building in Judiciary Square out of District funds rather than through a loan from the PWA or other Federal agency as heretofore planned.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, said that the bill previously drafted to authorize the District to borrow $3,500,000 from the Federal Government for the courts building will be amended and an initial appropriation of $1,000,000 will be asked in the pending 1937 supply bill.

To Act Soon.

Hazen explained that the board has not had an opportunity to take formal action on the withdrawal of the new tax proposals but that it would do so at the next board meeting or as soon as Commissioner George E. Allen has recovered from a slight illness.

"Speaking personally," he said, "I see no reason why we should propose new taxes to raise additional revenue when we're not going to spend all we anticipate under present taxes."

Principal new taxes which have been studied by the District heads were levies on incomes and inheritance, the substitution of a motor-vehicle weight tax for the personal property assessment on autos, a 1-cent increase in the gasoline tax, and a higher scale of taxes on public utilities.

While the Budget Bureau announced that the District would have an "unexpended balance" of $9,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year 1937 under the $43,100,000 budget, Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, said yesterday that the actual surplus will be only about $3,500,000. The other $6,000,000, while not spent, will be contracted for.

An appropriation of $1,000,000 for the courts building will still leave the District $2,500,000 surplus for emergencies.

Hazen said that $1,000,000 will be asked each year for three years with possibly an additional $500,000 the last year. By financing the project out of District revenue, the commissioners will save the city the interest charges that would have to be paid on a Federal loan.

In deciding to withhold the tax bills, the commissioners are going contrary to the advice of Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the District sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee.

Blanton Silent.

It appeared almost certain yesterday that the District budget hearings in the House will be conducted this year by Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, rather than by Cannon.

Cannon said that though the matter has not been decided definitely he is "strongly urging" Blanton to take the job because the Missourian will have to conduct the agricultural hearings. Blanton declined to comment, but he indicated he would be in charge by stating that he would hold a press conference just before the appropriation bill is taken up by committee.

Senator King explained following his conference with the Commissioners that, though he still believes an income tax should supplant the intangible personal property tax, he is willing to have it withheld so long as the money is not needed and District residents apparently don't want it.

While the Mapes tax bills and the income tax measure introduced by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, are pending before the House District Committee, it is expected that Chairman Mary T. Norton will not bring them out of their pigeonholes, in view of the present attitude of the Commissioners.

The courts building, to relieve congestion and obliterate unsanitary conditions in the smaller District courts, appears nearer realization at this stage than at any time since the more ambitious Municipal Center was proposed more than a decade ago.

House Chiefs Push for Vote On Bonus Bill

Doughton Aims to Bring Veteran-Backed Plan Up by Tomorrow.

Poll Sought This Week; Senators and Service Leaders Confer.

By Robert C. Albright.

While the Senate awaited Administration guidance in shaping a bonus bill, House leaders yesterday jockeyed the Vinson-Patman-McCormack cash payment measure, backed by united veterans' groups, into position for a vote and probable passage late this week.

A report on the combined veterans' bill was filed last night by the House Ways and Means Committee, with four minor modifications. Chairman Robert L. Doughton will go before the House Rules Committee this morning for permission to consider the bonus legislation in the House tomorrow and Friday.

On the other side of the Capitol, a decision probably will be reached this morning on the course of bonus action in the Senate. Representatives of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans will meet in the office of Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, to hear Administration views on the bous.

Attending the conference will be Senators Frederic Steiwer, of Oregon, and James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, co-authors of a bill to pay the bonus in bonds, which could be cashed at once at 98 per cent of full value. Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson is expected to communicate with the conference on the outcome of bonus queries put to the White House.

Asked Delay.

Robinson was said to have promised similar information to the group on Monday, but asked 48 hours' respite. Whether Senator Clark, and possibly Senator Steiwer, will introduce modifications of the united veterans bill in the Senate was said to hinge on this conference.

Rumors meanwhile reached the Capitol that the Administration is considering a bond payment plan of its own, at variance with the Byrnes-Steiwer plan and with the Tydings bond payment plan proposed last year.

Although there was no White House confirmation, Senators heard that the President would like to ease the bonus financing plan that might otherwise be dropped on the Treasury by a novel bond issue that would carry over necessary financing into or beyond the next fiscal year.

Although reported details of this so-called alternative plan were vague, it was said to provide for bonds paying quarterly dividends, with veterans permitted to borrow against them in full or in part. Features said to attract the Administration would permit a veteran to cash only so much of the bond as he needed at once, leaving the rest to accumulate interest. It was said that enough veterans might prefer partial payment to defer the need for early huge financing operations.

Would Take Months.

Regardless of what bill is passed, it would take the Veterans Administration from 3 to 4 months to complete computations and make payments, it was learned.

The conference in Senator Clark's office this morning was said to be aimed at perfecting a measure that might run the full Congressional gantlet and become law, even if not accepted by the White House. So long as it is possible to meet Administration views to the extent that a veto might be avoided, however, interested Senators said they favored such a course.

The Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill, which will be carried before the House Rules Committee this morning by the Ways and Means Committee, authorizes immediate cash payment of the bonus, but offers 3 per cent interest as an additional attraction to veterans not cashing their certificates until 1945.

Although still open-minded on the subject, it was said that Senators Clark, Steiwer, Byrnes and others active for the bonus in the Senate may agree to accept this plan, with some modifications, this morning.

Fight Forestalled.

A serious fight on the measure in the House was forestalled recently when Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, author of a bill to pay the bonus in expanded currency, agreed not to oppose the united veterans' bill and accepted joint authorship in the measure. Patman, it is understood, will make his fight when the method of financing the bonus comes up in the future.

Several changes were written into the Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill before it was reported to the House last night. The original preamble was deleted and a section refunding all interest already paid by veterans on bonus borrowings was stricken from the measure. It is estimated this would have cost $7,000,000. Another section, canceling all unpaid interest on bonus loans, was permitted to remain.

A third change increased from 3½ to 4½ per cent the interest on bonds to be issued to the United States Government Life Insurance fund, in return for loans on bonus certificates. This change was said to have been requested by Veteran Administrator Frank Hines, who said otherwise the difference would have to be made up by an appropriation.

If present strategy is followed, the bill will be called up in the House tomorrow, displacing the independent offices appropriations bill. The bonus would be debated all day and a vote reached Friday.

Roosevelt Is Striving To Fill Place of AAA; Farm Leaders Called

President Declares U. S. Must Pay Its Debt to Farmers.

Uncertainty Marks Official Procedure

Plan for Constitutional Change Appears Unwelcome.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Shying away from proposals for a Constitutional amendment, President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday seemed intent on formulating some kind of legislation that will provide at least a stop-gap substitute for the AAA, struck down by the Supreme Court Monday.

Apparently uncertain as to what steps should be taken to meet the invalidation of AAA, except to say that farmers who have fulfilled their acreage reduction contracts should be paid, Secretary Wallace summoned some 70 leaders of the major farm organizations to meet with him here on Friday and Saturday.

Perhaps by that time the President and Secretary Wallace will have determined a course of action, which will be presented at this farm conference. But for the day, the President and his agricultural aids adopted an attitude of waiting to see the reaction of the country and the results of studies of the Supreme Court decision now being made by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and his staff.

Refuses Comment.

The President at his press conference declined to make any comment, despite repeated questioning, on such topics as the farm policy which the Administration will now pursue, whether a Constitutional amendment will be sought, whether the AAA staff will be disbanded and whether steps will be taken to prevent payers of processing taxes from seeking refunds from the Treasury.

Mr. Roosevelt said that all those concerned in his Administration were intently studying the Supreme Court decision to ascertain its sweep and effect on the AAA, as well as studying the existing farm situation.

The only decision made, he asserted, was that Congress would be asked to adopt an authorization for an appropriation, and later an appropriation to cover the cost of fulfilling in good faith and as a matter of decent morals, the Government's obligations under the acreage reduction contracts, in cases where the farmers had performed their obligations.

The President said he did not know the total of these obligations, said in other quarters to amount to approximately $250,000,000. Nor would the President say whether the appropriation of this sum would require a levy of additional taxes. In his budget message he asserted that any appropriations not already proposed there should be accompanied by taxes sufficient to produce the necessary revenue.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to elaborate on his statement, in his Friday night message to Congress, that Congress had the right and should find means to protect its prerogatives. Told that this statement was being interpreted as a suggestion for a constitutional amendment, the President said he could not comment on interpretations. He suggested that the language spoke for itself.

But on Capitol Hill suggestions were made in several quarters for a constitutional amendment. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, also revealed that he proposed to sound out sentiment among farm leaders on the feasibility of a joint farmer-labor movement in behalf of a constitutional amendment.

On Conference Program.

Mr. Green pointed out that this subject will head the agenda of the meeting of the federation's executive council in Miami, on January 15. He was not certain whether the Federal Government should be given increased powers or the authority of the Supreme Court curbed in such an amendment.

But whatever labor and farm leaders decide, it was clear yesterday that President Roosevelt is not yet ready to become the champion of a constitutional amendment, a decision which, if he makes it, may easily become the foremost issue of this year's Presidential campaign.

President Roosevelt's press conference yesterday strongly con-

Publisher Tops Treasury List at $500,000 in '34, With Blonde Siren Getting $339,166; Mrs. Roosevelt Draws $16,000 as Editor.

By the Associated Press.

The natural curiosity of man to know how much money the other fellow makes was partly satisfied yesterday with the Congressional disclosure of salaries paid all corporation employes in the country receiving $15,000 or more a year.

Such 12-month pay checks as $500,000 for William Randolph Hearst and $339,166.65 for Mae West were sprinkled among the 1934 salary lists made public by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Submitted by the Treasury, as required by the 1934 revenue act, the figures covered some 8,000 corporations, involving more than 18,000 pay checks.

High on the list in prominence, if not in size of salary, was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. As a "contributing editor" for the Crowell Publishing Co., she was shown to have received $16,000.

Hundreds of corporation officials were revealed as making as much salary in one year as most men dream of accumulating in a lifetime of work. Salaries of $100,000 and more were not rare.

$100,000 for Doherty.

Small sums add up, one proof of which was that S. S. Kresge, chairman of the board of the S. S. Kresge Co., received $107,000. Another proof that nickles run into money was shown in some of the salaries Mr. Kresge paid, among them $106,365 to C. B. Van Dusen, president, and $107,000 each to C. B. Tuttle, treasurer, and R. R. Williams, vice president.

Edsel Ford, president of the motor company and generally regarded as one of the Nation's wealthiest men, was listed for only $90,036. P. E. Martin, a Ford vice president, received $107,341 and Charles E. Sorensen, general superintendent, $103,435.

Bing Crosby, Inc., Ltd., paid Bing Crosby, listed as an actor, $104,449 in 1934. The crooner received an additional $88,499 from the Crosby Productions, Inc.

Baer's Salary $16,666.

The movie activities of Max Baer, one-time kingpin of the heavyweight fighters, netted him $16,666, in 1934.

Other movie salaries listed for 1934 included: Pandro Berman, producer, $129,924; Joan Bennett, $36,976; George Burns and Gracie Allen, who took their $88,791 jointly; Dorothy Parker Campbell, just plain Dorothy Parker to admirers of her pithy sayings, $16,000; Claudette Colbert, $85,000; Gary Cooper, $139,667; Marlene Deitrich, $145,000; W. C. Fields, $155,083; Miriam Hopkins, $71,145, and Sylvia Sidney, $110,583.

Harlem tunes of Duke Ellington and his orchestra netted the Duke $18,249 from the movies. Guy Lombardo and his orchestra picked up $18,249.

Budget Ruling Gags Federal, Local Officials

Bureau Must Approve All Proposals Before Any Public Discussion.

The most drastic and stringent gag rule ever laid on Federal and District officials became public yesterday.

No official, Federal or District, now may lay before any Congressional committee or discuss publicly any proposal which has not first been presented and approved by the Federal Bureau of the Budget. It had the approval of President Roosevelt, Bell said.

That rule was laid down in a notice signed by D. W. Bell, acting director of the budget, and sent to all responsible Federal and local officials. The notice was not made public by the Budget Bureau, although it was dated December 21.

The rule is expected to cause increasing tension and trouble in the Federal Cabinet and Federal departments. Administration heads are not concerned as to local repercussions. Designed to give the President more complete control over what is going on, the order is expected to have the reverse effect.

Adopted December 17.

The order was adopted at a meeting of the National Emergency Council on December 17. At that meeting Bell issued the following statement:

There shall be sent to the Bureau of the Budget, for consideration of the President before submission to the Congress, or any committee or member thereof, the original and two copies of each recommendation or report, concerning proposed or pending legislation (other than private relief legislation), requested from or advanced by any executive department, independent establishment or other Government agency (including the municipal government of the District of Columbia and Government-owned or Government-controlled corporations), or any officer thereof. When such recommendation or report thereafter is submitted to the Congress, or to a committee or member thereof, it shall include a statement as to whether the proposed legislation is or is not in accord with the program of the President.

Rep. Zioncheck Is Found Guilty Of Being Drunk and Disorderly

The misadventures of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), of Seattle, Wash., at 3:30 o'clock New Year's morning in an uptown apartment house here resulted yesterday in his being found guilty in Police Court of two charges—drunk and disorderly conduct.

In an hilarious trial, the witnesses told of Zioncheck's trying to operate a telephone switchboard at 2701 Connecticut avenue, of cursing a policeman, and of his crying, "You can't arrest me."

"Who were you calling on at the apartment house?" Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Lauderdale asked Zioncheck.

"His name was Hooligan," answered the statesman.

"What was his first name?"

If "Happy Hooligan" had been at home, Zioncheck probably would not have been arrested.

"I attended a party," Zioncheck testified, "and I had four or five drinks of gin—good gin. I had been playing bridge."

He didn't say where that party was, but went on to tell how he called on a friend at 2701 Connecticut avenue. He said he went to the friend's apartment on the third floor. There was no response to his ringing, he said, so he went down to get the janitor.

The janitor, D. V. Perry, colored, testified that it was the ringing of the telephone bells that brought him running on the scene. Zioncheck, he said, had plugged in

Richberg Calls On U. S. to Curb Lower Courts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 7.—Assailing the "assertion of supreme authority" by the judiciary, Donald R. Richberg tonight called on lawyers to urge that Congress prevent lower Federal courts from passing on the constitutionality of laws.

Making his first public address since retiring as NRA administrator, Richberg told the Bar Association of New York:

"Regardless of the conceded character and ability of the judges, it is, to put it bluntly, a travesty upon representative, popular government to empower one man, serving as the judge of an inferior court, to annul, even temporarily, a law which has been enacted by a body of 531 men, constituting the supreme legislative assembly of the Nation, and approved by the Chief Executive who is elected by all the people."

"Seriously Wrong."

Asking the "more conservative members of the bar" to recognize that there is "something seriously wrong with the present procedure," Richberg said:

"Unless they advance a reasonable program to meet a reasonable and growing complaint, what forces can be expected to check an inevitable demand for sweeping amendments that will either expand unwisely the powers of the Federal Legislature or contract unwisely the powers of the Supreme Court itself?"

Saying Congress had authority to deny lower courts power to pass on Federal laws, Richberg suggested it might change the procedure so that those courts would merely take evidence and then certify the cases directly to the Supreme Court for a quick final ruling.

Hits Bench, Bar, Press.

In his address the former Government official attacked sections of the bench, bar and press which he said—by encouraging the "intolerate use of political and economic power"—were helping movements aimed at making Constitutional changes which "might be profoundly injurious to our institutions of Government."

Because millions of "bewildered people" were "beginning to lose faith in a natural leadership of brains and experience and to distrust the integrity of either the facts or arguments" furnished by newspapers and magazines, he said the "panacea promoter now has conditions ripe for a national debauchery of public opinion."

"The methods for organizing a fantastic movement and steadily expanding its force," he said, "have all been worked out; and a successful technique has been established in such campaigns as those of the Ku Klux Klan and the Anti-Saloon League. Today a series of such movements are in progress, of which the most menacing is the Townsend plan."

Stockman Hits New Deal.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 7 (AP).—Charles E. Collins, president of the American National Livestock Association, assailed New Deal agricultural policies today and pleaded that the cattle industry be permitted to find its own salvation.

He said he was at a loss to understand the hopes and objectives of the Department of Agriculture's administrators.

"In all history there is no record of such a wild, extravagant demonstration of government supporting the people as exists at the present time in our country," Collins declared in his annual address.

Sharecroppers Pleased.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 7 (AP).—H. L. Mitchell, executive secretary of the Southern Tenant Farmers' (sharecropper) Union, today said "the cotton reduction program was a landlords' code and brought nothing but increased hardship to the sharecropper and tenant."

Voiding of the AAA by the Supreme Court brought "no regret to members of the union," he said. "The benefit payments of millions of dollars have largely gone to the plantation owners, but not to the real producers of cotton."

Talmadge Demands Refunds.

Atlanta, Jan. 7 (AP).—Gov. Talmadge called on Congress today to refund all processing and ginning taxes collected under the AAA.

He advised Georgia farmers to write President Roosevelt and the Georgia Congressional delegation demanding payment.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Refusing immediate comment on the Supreme Court ruling voiding the AAA, former President Herbert Hoover indicated upon his arrival today he might make it the subject for another broadside against the New Deal.

Cleveland, Jan. 7 (AP).—Hog prices went up 50 cents a hundredweight in the wholesale market today, presumably because of the Supreme Court's unfavorable decision on the AAA.

Dealers said they were uncertain concerning the future of the market. The top wholesale price for hogs rose to $10.50 a hundredweight. Prices of wheat, flour and sugar remained unchanged.

At Pittsburgh, pork on the hoof jumped 65 cents a hundred pounds. The livestock exchange attributed the "by no means normal increase" to the Supreme Court decision invalidating the AAA.

On the Hustings

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT yesterday indicated that he is not nearly as enthusiastic to lead a fight for a constitutional amendment, as a result of the Supreme Court's invalidation of the AAA, as he was last May when the high tribunal struck down his NRA. Indeed, Mr. Roosevelt had the appearance of a man who dreaded such a fight.

Yet many observers here believe that the President will be forced to propose that the Constitution be amended. He is seen on the horns of a dilemma. If he does not propose such action his New Deal surely is wrecked and his sincerity in espousing that program as essential to the future welfare of the country is impaired. If he proposes amending the Constitution, Mr. Roosevelt will find that he has on his hands one of the hottest political battles ever to take place in this country—with the outcome extremely uncertain.

It is becoming clearer every day, however, that President Roosevelt will have to make a hard fight for re-election. He and his advisers may decide that it is far better and more honorable for him to go down to defeat fighting for a principle in which he believes than to be defeated anyway in a campaign of expediency.

If the President believes that the best interests of this country can best be served by empowering the Federal Government to control agricultural production, mining, the relations between employer and employe and other broad economic and social questions, it is his duty to let the country vote on that question.

Certainly such a course of action is far more honorable and would be a greater contribution to the processes of democracy than to undertake to achieve such ends in contravention of the Constitution or, as some critics do, to assail the Supreme Court as a group of "old men" seeking to block all progress and as a judicial oligarchy solely because that tribunal performs the duty imposed on it of determining whether legislation squares with the Constitution.

* * *

Much of the current criticism of the Supreme Court is based on the assumption that by declaring New Deal measures unconstitutional it is thwarting the will of the people. That such an assumption is fallacious was demonstrated by the promptness with which the country forgot the NRA. Moreover, it is extremely doubtful whether a majority of the country approves of the AAA.

* * *

It is just so much tommyrot to argue that Congress is expressing the will of the people in everything it does and everyone familiar with how things are done on Capitol Hill knows it. The average Congressman seldom thinks of the country as a whole. He thinks and acts as he believes his particular constituents would want him to act, without thought to the national effect.

When he finds that a majority of his colleagues do not think the same way he does, he joins with them in a log-rolling movement, voting for their pet schemes in exchange for their votes for his proposals. That is, he acts that way, if he does not act blindly out of a sense of party loyalty or under the party lash of patronage. The fact that many members of Congress have voted for bills without reading them or knowing what is in them is too well known to be repeated.

Thus it does not follow that the Supreme Court is nullifying the will of the people when it finds that such a measure undertakes to invest the Federal Government with powers which the people for a century or more have served to themseves or to their State governments. Indeed, by declaring invalid such a measure the court forces the issue to the people for a decision and thus strengthens the Democratic process instead of destroying it.

* * *

And it should be rather disconcerting to those who talk about the "old men" on the Supreme Court blocking progress by rejecting everything the New Deal does to have Justice Owen J. Roberts, the youngest man on the tribunal, lead the majority which invalidated AAA while Justice Louis D. Brandeis, the eldest member, voted to uphold it.

* * *

House Supply Bill Effects Savings Without Denying Agency Requests.

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee handed over to Congress yesterday an independent offices supply bill $47,601,861 below budget estimates.

The committee, following the previously announced intention of Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, to keep ordiary expenditures within the approximately $5,000,000,000 expected in revenue for the 1936-1937 fiscal year, recommended an outlay of $879,743,905 for the 24 or more commissions and boards lumped in the one supply measure. That was $74,509,747 greater than the 1936 fiscal year allowance.

The committee contended that savings over budget requests were effected, with one exception, without denying the agencies the amounts approved for them by the Budget Bureau. This was done by reappropriations out of the Treasury by a corresponding amount.

The plans were to take the bill up in the House today, but it was possible consideration of the bonus bill would intervene.

Ignores Request.

The committee, in accord with the Budget Bureau, ignored the request of the Federal Power Commission for $3,600,000 to carry out the section of the utilities law dealing with enforcement of rates, surveys of electric production, distribution costs and the like.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch had told the committee that without this amount the commission could not hope to determine the cost of utility companies' plants, which he said was vital to finding out the cost of electricity and promoting lower rates. The bill allowed the commission only $1,709,000 in new appropriations and a $16,000 re-appropriation.

Some of the new Government activities for which money was provided were: Interstate Commerce Commission, to administer airmail rate-making and motor vehicle regulation, $1,860,000; securities commission, for administering holding company provisions of utilities law, etc., $1,980,506; railroad retirement, National Labor Relations and Central Statistical Boards, all new agencies, $47,645,000, $735,000 and $175,420, respectively.

Inquiries Scheduled.

Previously, E. L. Davis, Federal Trade Commission chairman, had told an appropriations subscommittee the economic, or investigational division would have to be abolished if money was not forthcoming. The commission has milk, textile, steel and price inquiries scheduled to carry over into 1937, he said.

Appropriations Committee members said, however, that some money provided was not earmarked for specific purposes, and that the commission should still be able to continue its economic division, by using such funds.

Since 1790, the United States has disbursed for pensions and compensation a total of $12,185,682,752.97.

General Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administrator, so advised a House Appropriations sub-committee in a report of his appearance before the group, issued yesterday.

Hines said pensions or compensations are now being paid to 857,429 veterans and their dependents of six wars in which United States troops have engaged. Of this total, 601,750 are living veterans and 255,679 dependents.

Four dependents of the war of 1812 are still on the pension rolls. No veterans of the Mexican War are listed, but 282 of their dependents are receiving Government funds.

Hines cited the following figures on other war veterans: Civil War, 12,150 living veterans, 96,915 dependents, 109,065 total; Spanish-American War, 178,245 living veterans, 42,981 dependents, 221,226 total; World War (war-time), 376,756 living veterans, 103,446 dependents, 580,202 total; World War (peace-time), 30,808 living veterans, 7,298 dependents, 38,106 total.

Appeal Is Up Today In PWA Power Case

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals tomorrow will hear arguments on the appeal of the Public Works Administration and Greenwood County, South Carolina, from a district court ruling giving the Duke Power Co. an injunction against the proposed construction of a publicly-owned hydro-electric plant at Buzzard Roost, S. C.

Regarded by New Dealers as an important test case, the suit involves the constitutional right of the PWA to lend funds for publicly owned power plants which will compete with private power interests.

Small Re-enters Politics in Illinois

By the Associated Press.

Kankakee, Ill., Jan. 7.—Len Small, one of the most widely discussed political figures in the country a decade ago, re-entered the political wars today by announcing his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor of Illinois. He is 73.

His decision to seek the post he held from 1920 to 1928 assured a scramble for the nomination. At least ten candidates will be in the field. Seven have announced intention to run. In spite of the fact that Gov. Henry Horner, Democrat, is winding up his first term, a contest looms for the Democratic nomination. Evidences of a breach between Horner and the powerful Cook County (Chicago) Democrat organization have been apparent. Predictions are that the Cook County group will sponsor a candidate in opposition to Horner, although no announcement has been made.

Small swept all before him in the 1920 and 1924 campaigns. Since 1928, when he was defeated for the nomination, he has lived on his farm here.

$36,000,000 Project Lays Off Workers

By the Associated Press.

Eastport, Me., Jan. 7.—A reduction in the working force on the $36,000,000 Passamaquoddy Bay tidal-power project, expected ultimately to affect 75 per cent of the 5,000 employes, began today.

With announcement of the suspension, hundreds of workers began leaving Eastport, Lubec and other Quoddy site sections for their homes in other parts of Maine and the Nation.

At Washington, Lieut. Col. Philip B. Fleming, director of the huge project, attributed the cut in employes to the completion of work on buildings and "that we are getting down to winter status."

Fleming expected a return to normal employment in the early spring, and Army engineers here said the workers might receive a call to return in approximately six weeks.

Tacoma Waterfront Fire Destroys Milling Plant

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 7 (AP).—Fire following an explosion today destroyed the waterside milling plant of the Balfour-Guthrie Co., with a loss estimated at $250,000.

Gay Kageler, 35, an employe trapped in the mill, was seriously burned. More than 30 workers eating lunch on a dock when the blast occurred, escaped injury.

ICC Requests Water Carrier Rate Control

Also Recommends Congress Authorize Commission Reorganization.

A suggestion that Congress put water carrier rates, as well as those of motor vehicles and railways, under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission was included in that body's annual report yesterday. The commission also suggested its own reorganization to provide for appellate divisions which would be composed of 5 or more of its 11 members, and would consider applications for rehearing.

Rejected, however, was the suggestion made last year by Joseph B. Eastman, transportation co-ordinator and a member of the commission, that it be enlarged to 16 members.

The commission's request for jurisdiction over waterways is a repetition of one made last year. A bill embodying the suggestion was introduced during the last session of Congress but failed of passage. The bill included in this year's report of the commission gives it substantially the same powers which it now exercises over motor carriers and railroads.

The commission, it was pointed out, already has some jurisdiction over water rates, but only in cases where joint water-land rates are made by carriers, where water and land carriers have common ownership or a working arrangement with each other.

Foresee Controversy.

Those who are interested in suggestions that the commission adopt a policy of enforcing "total costs" as a rate-making basis for railroads and other motor vehicles, as opposed to occasional "out of pocket" cost rates which now are permitted, expected controversy when water carriers come under the commission's rate-making powers.

The cost of maintaining right of way for railroads is reflected in their total costs. Similar charges on motor carriers are represented, in most States, by special taxes on buses and trucks. Charges for dredging and maintaining inland waterways are frequently heavy, but they are borne by the Federal Government, with the result that they would not be reflected in the "total costs" of water carriers, in the view of some observers.

Although railways frequently protest against this Government subsidy for a competing form of transportation, others point out that cheap water rates are more than offset by the slowness of water travel and delays in delivery.

In its report the commission also asked increased authority "to protect employes from undue financial loss," resulting from rail abandonments, unifications of relocations of shops. Recent legislation giving railroads permission to effect these economies also provided that no employe should suffer as a result.

60 Per Cent Reduction.

It is estimated that this last provision reduced by 60 per cent the potential economies which railroads might have made under the change, as labor costs represented the largest item in those operations which were curtailed.

The commission reported that while some carriers have protected their employes, it has had to impose protective provisions on others.

The report also asks of Congress penalties on railroads who submit incorrect figures to the commission. The present law penalizes only carriers who fail to make "specific reports." The commission, according to its report, would also like to be relieved of the burden of regulating street cars and suburban railways which cross State lines, provided they are not operated as links in steam railroads, or do not interchange freight and cars with them.

According to the figures on railroads' operating income included in the report, while earnings are now above the depression's low point, wage and material costs have risen almost as rapidly as railroad revenues. "It has become increasingly plain," said the report, "that the emergence from the unfavorable situation" is dependent upon both business revival and the adaptation of rail methods to "conditions created by other forms of transportation."

Brewers Challenge FAA Definitions

By the Associated Press.

The American Brewers Association yesterday challenged the authority of the Federal Alcohol Administration to set up definitions of beer, ale, stout and other malt beverages "with the full effect of law."

George McCabe, in a statement read to the FAA during its hearing on proposed brewery regulations, asserted that the difference between beer and ale "is a matter of proof in each case." Dr. Leo Wallerstein, New York brewery chemist, supported his claim and defined the difference as far as the consumer is concerned as "a slight difference in taste which can't be put in specifications."

He was opposed in this contention, however, by Conrad Oberdorfer, Lowell, Mass., brewer, who said the difference in taste between beer and ale "is determined, in part, by the type of fermentation used."

2 Things to Do
TO EASE COLD INSTANTLY
Discomfort and Aches Go Almost Instantly This Way

1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.
2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets in ½ glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness instantly.

THE pictured directions above show perhaps the quickest, simplest and most modern method yet discovered to combat cold and sore throat.

Your own doctor will approve this way. Millions of people have discarded "cold killers" and patent nostrums for this modern way. It relieves the average cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in ½ glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat. The Bayer Aspirin you take internally acts to fight a cold almost instantly. AND — eases the aches and pains that accompany most colds.

Try this way. You will be amazed at how quickly you can ease a cold. Be sure, though, to get Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets. They dissolve almost instantly in the stomach. Hence start working almost instantly. And also, dissolve thoroughly enough in water for use as a gargle.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast
Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water.
By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.
In 2 Seconds By Stop Watch
A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

Jackson Dinner Is Called 'Fraud On Democracy'

Tennessee Representative and Liberty League Issue Separate Attacks.

The lash of sarcasm cracked twice over the Jackson Day dinner idea yesterday, as Representative B. Carroll Reece (Republican), Tennessee, and the American Liberty League issued separate statements, scourging this means of replenishing the Democratic Party coffers.

The statements came on the eve of Jackson Day, for tonight throughout the Nation loyal Democrats will become stout trenchermen around several thousand banquet tables as the party attempts to eat its way out of the red.

In Washington the Democrats will pay $50 per ticket for admission to a Jackson Day dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, which will be addressed at 10 p. m. by President Roosevelt in person, with a radio hook-up carrying his address nationally, while the Young Democratic clubs of the District of Columbia will wield tableware at $10 per plate in the Willard Hotel.

League Hits at Farley.

The Liberty League blast began: "The bed-time story of the Democratic national committee, relating that Postmaster General Farley has had nothing to do with the solicitation of Democratic campaign funds from other Federal employes through the medium of the Jackson Day dinners throughout the country tomorrow night does not harmonize with the actions of Democratic National Chairman Farley as announced by the publicity bureau of the Democratic national committee."

The attack continued by recalling that the criminal code outlaws the solicitation or participation in any manner in solicitation or reception of funds for any political purpose whatsoever by Government employes.

Since W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the Democratic national committee, has made it plain that $45 of each $50 ticket will go as a contribution to the party treasury, the Liberty League statement further attacked Mr. Farley on the ground that he did personally solicit such contributions from at least five Federal employes.

Radio Address Cited.

The league deduced this from the fact that Mr. Farley in a radio address urged State presidents of Young Democratic clubs recently to work out the price of the dinners on a basis which would permit forwarding of part of the ticket charge to the Democratic national committee. Coupling this with the fact that five Young Democratic Club presidents are Government employes, the league statement said that any explanation offered would be "interesting."

Representative Reece confined his blows to a comparison of the principles of Andrew Jackson and President Roosevelt, saying that such comparison "shows that the alleged honoring of Jackson is a fraud on real Democrats."

He charged that the President once adhered to Jacksonian principles, but has now "violently departed" from them, particularly in seeking to "deprive the individual States of their rights under the Constitution."

Final Plans Made.

Final plans for the dinners, which will be the first actual Democratic campaign step down the long road to the 1936 elections, with the wiping-out of the party deficit of $378,615 as the immediate financial goal, were polished yesterday. All the Democratic luminaries, including high officialdom from Vice President Garner on down, will attend the local affairs, with Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Florence Jackson Stoddard, nearest living relative of Andrew Jackson, as honored guests at the Willard Hotel dinner.

Czechoslavian Youths Held as State Enemies

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 7 (AP).—A group of students between 18 and 20 were arrested tonight at St. Catherina near Klatovy, Czechoslovakia, for alleged antistate activities in regions bordering the Bavarian section of Germany.

Police said they found material which indicated the youths, allegedly led by one named Klima, had connections beyond the border.

Blimp Locates Overdue Steamer

Blimp Locates River Steamer Delayed by Fog

A fog that must have come from London lay over the Potomac River yesterday. Capt. George H. Nowell, white-haired skipper of the steamer Northland, didn't like it; he could hardly see beyond his forecastle. Near Colonial Beach, Va., he decided to drop anchor.

The Northland was scheduled to dock at the wharves of the Norfolk & Washington here at 7 a. m. An hour passed; two hours, three, four, five, but there was no sign of the steamer.

She has no radio, so there was no way to communicate with her.

Wild rumors flew about town. The Northland had struck a tanker near Indian Head; the Northland had gone aground. From Quantico came reports that a ship was sending out distress signals.

Blocked at every turn in trying to get information about the steamer, newspaper reporters sought the help of the Goodyear Tire Co., owner of the "Enterprise," the blimp which has become almost a fixture in the sky over Washington. The company agreed to send them with the blimp on a searching expedition.

And that was how the Northland was located and word flashed back to Washington by radio that she was safe on her way.

The captain of the craft, Verner L. Smith, nosed the blimp down the Potomac. Flying at an average height of 1,000 feet, the blimp commanded a clear view of the river until Mount Vernon was reached.

Then a thick blanket of fog enveloped the river. Capt. Smith piloted the ship into the fog and dropped to 800 feet altitude. Visibility was poor and he lifted the ship until he found an opening.

Again he nosed the craft down, until he was scarcely 25 feet above the water, and cruised through the fog-bound area in search of the steamer. Failing to locate the boat, he continued down the river until Indianhead was reached.

The Northland was sighted about 5 miles downstream, apparently well under way. Capt. Smith approached the boat, throttled the motors and shouted to the skipper.

"Did fog delay you?"

"Everything o. k.?" asked Smith, and again Capt. Nowell answered in the affirmative.

Then Co-pilot Walter Massic tuned in his short wave radio and sent the welcome news to the ground station, where it was relayed to the company offices, relieving the tension of six hours of worry.

Capt. Nowell later explained that fog in the lower river compelled him to anchor for seven hours near Colonial Beach. He docked here at 3:30 p. m., eight and half hours late.

Bad as was the fog over the Potomac, it was worse at the Virgina Capes, where Chesapeake Bay joins the Atlantic Ocean. There was no movement of ships in or out of the capes after 6 a. m., so far as Government observers could determine.

The battleships Arkansas and Wyoming, scheduled to sail in the morning for Guantanamo, Cuba, were held in port.

Dionne Quintuplets Worth $24,000 Each

Between them, the little sisters have $120,000 in government bonds in a trust fund. The money has been accumulated since the Ontario government took charge of their affairs a year ago.

The sisters now are 19 months old. If they live to be 3 years of age they will have about $300,000 under present contracts.

Then, officials explained, the interest from the fund alone will support them.

Labor Disputes Grow on Coast, Cause Concern

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 7.—Spreading maritime labor disputes on the Pacific Coast caused increasing concern today as William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, joined Federal officials in urging seamen to resume work.

Green and Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, appealed to striking seamen of the Panama-Pacific liner Pennsylvania to take the vessel out of port here and submit to mediation their demand for West Coast pay schedules ranging from $45 to $62.50 a month instead of the East Coast scale of $35 to $37.50.

Two off-shore freighters, the Robert Luckenback and William Luckenback, were caught by crew walkouts here. The seamen of these vessels also demanded West Coast pay.

Fifty-five coastwise steam schooners, involved in a dispute over pay and working conditions, remained tied up at various ports despite a request by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins that the seamen submit to mediation before striking.

Replying to the Labor Secretary's appeal, Harry Lundberg, president of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, declared the shipowners had refused to meet with representatives of the maritime unions to consider proposed changes in the working award made by a Federal board.

Nurse Menaced On Sterilization Case Affidavit

San Francisco, Jan. 7.—One of three nurses who attended Ann Cooper Hewitt, 21-year-old heiress, after a sterilization operation for which she now is asking $500,000 damages from her mother, tonight reported she had been threatened with death.

The nurse, with the two others in the case, previously gave affidavits in support of the heiress' charges.

Russell P. Tyler, attorney for Ann, also said Grace Wilkins, one of the nurses, had received a letter warning her not to testify regarding operating room details of the sterilization.

Investigation Proceeds.

Meanwhile criminal investigation of the purported plot whereby Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, Ann's mother, allegedly sought to gain control of a $2,000,000 estate, proceeded tonight. Police said Mayhem charges might be filed against those responsible for the sterilization if facts uncovered by the investigation warranted.

"If we find enough evidence, the case will be taken before the grand jury for indictment, and criminal charges will be pressed against the person or persons responsible," Inspector George Engler said.

Engler and Assistant District Attorney August Fourtner conferred throughout the day with Russell P. Tyler, attorney for the "forgotten princess" in a suit asking $500,000 damages for the sterilization operation.

Answers Statements.

Ann, daughter of Peter Cooper Hewitt and descendant of Peter Cooper, "America's first millionaire," insisted that her mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper-Hewitt, had ordered the operation in an unnatural plot. In an affidavit presented late today she defiantly answered the counter-statements and assertions which swirled around the case immediately after it became public Monday.

The small, pale-faced, full-lipped heiress said in the affidavit that while she was convalescing from the operation in August, 1934, a nurse told her:

"Be careful, your mother and Dr. Tilton Tillman are both interested in having you established as an incompetent."

Dr. Tillman, old family friend and co-defendant with the mother, Dr. Samuel Boyd and State Psychiatrist Mrs. Mary Scally in the $500,000 suit, admitted yesterday that he had approved sterlization of the girl.

"I would have done the same thing if it had ben my own daughter," he said.

Cites Schooling Lack.

Ann said in her affidavt that her entire education was due to diligent reading, and that in all her life she had but one tutor—a teacher in Paris who was dismissed when she was six.

She denied charges made by her mother in an affidavit filed in New Jersey courts, where Ann has demanded an accounting of the mother's handling of her estate.

The mother's affidavit described how Ann became infatuated with a chauffeur who encouraged her to carry on a romantic and intimate correspondence, and finally to run away with him.

"The letters cotained locks of Ann's hair and a great many references to things she should not have written about," said the mother, dashing figure of European and American society resorts. "I paid thousands of dollars in currency to secure those letters and to break up this infatuation. From time to time since that date I have had to use special means for blocking what seeme dto be infatuations on Ann's part. Mostly these have occurred with men in uniform, regardless of their station."

Hauptmann Death Date Jan. 17; Shave Goes on as He Is Told

By the United Press.

State Prison, Trenton, N. J., Jan. 7.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was sitting in cell No. 9, a towel around his neck and his face smothered in lather, when through the bars came a voice saying: "The execution has been set for around 8 o'clock the night of Friday, January 17."

The prison barber lifted his razor quickly off the face of the man who murdered the Lindbergh baby. Most men jump when told the day and hour of their death. Hauptmann merely turned his head toward the corridor of the death house. There stood Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling.

Kimberling wore a dark suit and had horn-rimmed glasses high on the bridge of his nose. The barber's razor scraped away again at Hauptmann's face.

In that tense moment Hauptmann was calmer than Kimberling. The principal keeper told about it later today.

"I can't remember whether Hauptmann said anything or not," he explained. "Maybe he thanked me, but I'm not sure. I know he didn't show any signs of emotion, there wasn't a change in his face or appearance."

Th barber finished his job, wiped the lather out of Hauptmann's ears and went away. Kimberling left, too, and Hauptmann was in his cell alone, free to calculate the number of hours, minutes and even seconds that are left for him to spend among the living.

It was a melancholy place and manner for a person to receive news of his death. The sun never shines in the death house because there are no windows. Light coms in indirectly from a skylight, but it is so placed that even at noon it conveys only a gray, thick gloom to the prisoners below.

There is legal recourse left to Hauptmann—the New Jersey Court of Pardons meets Saturday morning to consider his plea for clemency—but the plans of prison officials are based on the supposition that he is going to be executed a week from Friday.

As the days wear on, Prison Officials become more certain that Hauptmann never will talk—not even when the big dynamo hums and the man who was shaving his face today comes down the corridor to shave his head. If there is any secret about the Lindbergh crime that the law has not ferreted out, Hauptmann is going to take it with him to the chair, officials believe.

There are 18 thick volumes in cell No. 9—The 1,000,000 words of testimony spoken at Hauptmann's trial. The prisoner reads them constantly, thumbing the pagse in search of some paragraph or sentence that might save his life.

Every day Kimberling comes down the corridor to see him, thinking that maybe Hauptmann has changed his mind and wants to confess or to name accomplices.

"There is nothing to confess," Hauptmann always tells him.

"He is still confident that something will happen to save him," Mathieson said. "He is perfectly calm."

Not until Friday will Hauptmann know whether the Pardons Court will grant his request to let him make his plea in person. At that time the board will announce where it will meet. If it meets at the prison, Hauptmann will be allowed to appear; if the meeting is held in the State House, the decision will be made without a personal plea.

Reporter Mooney Loses Court Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7.—The New York State Court of Appeals ruled today a newspaper reporter has no right to withhold the source of confidential information from officials prosecuting a criminal inquiry.

The ruling of the State's highest court was on the appeal of Martin Mooney, reporter for a New York City newspaper, who had written a series of articles on the so-called "policy racket." Mooney sought remission of a 30-day jail sentence and fine of $250 imposed for contempt of court by Judge Morris Koenig, of the New York Court Special Sessions.

Mooney's conviction followed upon his refusal to reveal before a grand jury and a judge the source of information on which he had based his articles. He appealed from the sentence by applying for a writ of habeas corpus to compel his release from the New York County Jail. The order was voided by both the Supreme Court and the Appellate Division.

Coal Miners Firm For British Strike

By the United Press.

London, Jan. 7.—Leaders of 750,000 British coal miners stood their ground tonight as they prepared to meet colliery owners tomorrow in an eleventh-hour effort to avert a national strike which would paralyze the nation's greatest industry.

The miners, hurling charges of "starvation wages" at both the mine owners and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's government, which refused them a subsidy, are ready to leave the pits at midnight January 26, unless granted a wage increase of 50 cents a day.

Operators, anxious to avoid what undoubtedly would be the greatest industrial upheaval in Great Britain since the disastrous general strike of 1926, granted varying sectional increases to the miners a week ago.

The Mine Workers Federation promptly ridiculed the increases, not only because the maximum was only half their demand but also because the owners refused to grant a uniform increase throughout the country.

Suspect Forced To Help Dig Up Body of Victim

'My Conscience Is at Ease,' Says Prisoner as Shovel Bares Corpse.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.—Buried 6 feet in the sand of a southern New Jersey beach police today found the body of a man whom Adam Ambrose, Philadelphia sugar refinery worker, is accused of strangling in a plot to collect $10,000 insurance on his own life.

Ambrose, digging under the surveillance of police and Coast Guards, uncovered the body after he was taken to the beach at Townsends Inlet, from Philadelphia, where Detective Capt. Matthew H. Clark said he admitted the killing. Later, however, Ambrose denied the crime.

He was charged with murder. His son, arrested at the same time, was held as an accessory after the fact.

The victim, who Ambrose said he knew only as "Joe," was tentatively identified by authorities as Joe Gimbugus.

The slaying is alleged to have occurred in October, 1934, in Ambrose's cottage near Sea Isle City.

Capt. Clark said that during questioning here, Ambrose told authorities Gimbugus bore a slight resemblance to the suspect, so Ambrose decided to do away with him and make it appear he, himself, had died. He wanted the death to seem accidental, Capt. Clark said, so he might collect $10,000 on the double-indemnity clause of his $5,000 insurance policy.

The plot fell through, Capt. Clark explained, when Coast Guards recognized Ambrose a short time after the slaying.

The detective, describing the killing, said Gimbugus was strangled and his body placed in a bathtub filled with water. Later it was removed from the cottage and buried in the beach.

Authorities questioned Ambrose here for four hours before taking him to Townsend's Inlet to point out where the body had been buried. He was given a shovel and ordered to dig at one spot, while detectives and Coast Guardsmen dug at other places nearby.

When the body was dug up, Clark quoted Ambrose as saying: "My conscience is at ease now."

Fairbanks Due to Wed; Is 'Free Agent' Jan. 10

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—Speculation over the marital plans of Douglas Fairbanks, sr., was keen today as the date approached for his final decree of divorce from Mary Pickford.

Now 52 years old, but still the dashing "swashbuckler" of his Hollywood days, Doug becomes a free agent January 10—and Mayfair gossip has it that the blonde and pale-cheeked Lady Ashley, his more or less constant companion these many months, will shortly become the new Mrs. Fairbanks.

Perry testified he warned Zioncheck that he would call the police unless he kept quiet. The lawmaker, he said, requested him to call them.

Policeman J. T. Ensor, of the Eighth Precinct, one of those who answered the janitor's appeal, said he found Zioncheck "very drunk." He began cursing, Ensor said, and continued it even when they encountered a woman in the police station. She was there to bail out her husband, a lieutenant colonel in the Army.

Ensor said that, disregarding Zioncheck's claim that he could not be arrested, he took him to the Eighth Precinct Station, where he was booked by Policeman William M. Kolb.

Kolb testified that Zioncheck was smoking a cigar and blew the smoke in his face.

Zioncheck denied he was drunk and insisted he made no attempt to avoid arrest.

"I learned early," he said, "that one could not enjoy the few years of life by getting drunk."

Representative M. C. Wallgren, a Democrat from Everett, Wash., called as character witness, said Zioncheck's reputation for character and sobriety was of the best.

"Do you think he would have polled 85,000 votes if it wasn't?" he asked.

Judge Walter J. Casey found Zioncheck guilty, but offered to suspend sentence. This decision, while excusing Zioncheck from paying a fine or serving a jail term, would result in a conviction being recorded against him.

Attorney Miller objected to suspension of sentence and filed a motion for a new trial. Meanwhile, the $15 collateral which Zioncheck posted at the time of his arrest insured his freedom.

Anti-War Stand Of U. S. Hailed By Methodists

2,000 Now in Session Here Voice Concern Over Ominous Events.

Two thousands churchmen, representing the parishes of the Southern Methodist denomination, expressed themselves as unalterably opposed to war yesterday as they opened the annual meeting of their missionary council in Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South.

Unanimous passage of a vigorous anti-war resolution, introduced by Dr. Elmer T. Clark, of Nashville, was the first act of the conference.

The resolution voiced "deep concern over various events and movements which seem to threaten the world," and commended "every effort being exerted by the President and the Congress to keep our country out of war and to prevent or restrict the same among other nations."

The Methodists, however, passed no opinion upon any of the President's specific recommendations on neutrality. "We follow the One who came to bring peace on earth and we believe His way the right way for men and nations," it said.

Pledge President Aid.

"To the President and Confress, on whose shoulders rests the responsibility of developing and applying methods and agencies of securing peace, we extend sympathy and pledge support in their efforts to this end. We desire to urge upon them as their first duty the banishment from the world of the scourge of war. We commend them to God for guidance and shall pray without ceasing that their efforts to this end shall be crowned with success."

A committee of 12 delegates will carry the resolutions to the President. This group is to be named at today's sessions.

Increased military budgets by important world powers were deplored by Dr. John R. Mott, International Missionary Council president, at last night's session.

"The Golden Rule," he said, "is just as applicable to nations as to individuals. Colossal military equipment will not spread good will. The only program that will bind the world together is the program of Christ."

67 Times Around World

The speaker recalled he recently ended his sixty-seventh trip around the world and added:

"I never did believe more profoundly in the permanence and vitality of Christianity around the world than I do right now."

He praised missionaries for their services in curbing epidemics of sleeping sickness, for aiding in the elevation of womanhood throughout the world, for reducing the opium traffic abroad, for stamping out slavery and for preventing women in the Orient from binding their feet.

He urged greater emphasis on rural missionary work to spread Christianity "free from formalism and hypocrisy."

Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador, extended greetings to the clergymen on behalf of his countrymen and praised Dr. Mott.

"During Dr. Mott's recent visit to Japan," the Ambassador said, "he met many outstanding Japanese leaders and the ideas entertained by Dr. Mott for the promotion of better relationship between our countries commend themselves to thinking Japanese as tending to promote better international relationship.

"The calling to which Dr. Mott is devoting his life is the noble work of working in the interest of peace and good-will for all men."

Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, Tex., president of the Board of Missions for the denomination, will address this morning's meeting on "The Unbounded Horizon of Christianity." Bishop Paul B. Kern, of Greensboro, N. C., will speak on "Our Next Step in Foreign Missions," and Dr. A. W. Beaven, president of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, Rochester, N. Y., will give an address on "The Pastor's Place in Foreign Missions."

Foreign missionaries in the States on furlough will bring first-hand accounts of their work. Among these speakers will be Dr. John C. Hawk, veteran missionary in China; Mrs. Ethel Shuler Smith, missionary in Africa, and Dr. D. L. Betts, missionary in Brazil.

Dr. Sao Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Ambassador, will bring greetings from China, in a talk before the delegates tonight.

Two Deer at Zoo Are Slain by Dogs

Two Virginia whitetail deer were killed at the National Zoological Gardens late Sunday by dogs, William M. Mann, Zoo director, announced yesterday.

Dr. Mann said there were eight deer in the inclosure. The survivors were badly bruised from charging against the fence in their attempt to escape the dogs.

Some of the animals in the inclosure were from Mount Vernon, Dr. Mann said. The two killed, a male and female, will not be replaced, he said.

Dr. Mann recalled that several years ago a pack of dogs killed seven deer of the same variety within five minutes. The Virginia deer are rather rare, being difficult to keep in captivity.

Notes Linking Wilson to Morgan War Loans

The Senate Munitions Committee yesterday made public the text of a memorandum, written by Robert Lansing, then counsellor of the State Department, and communicated to J. P. Morgan & Co. on October 23, 1914. The memorandum was in direct conflict with the publicly-announced policy of the Government at the time.

The text follows:

"From my conversation with the President, I gathered the following impressions as to his views concerning bank credits of belligerent governments in contra-distinction to a public loan floated in this country.

"There is a decided difference between an issue of Government bonds, which are sold in open market to investors, and an arrangement for easy exchange in meeting debts incurred in trade between a Government and American merchants.

"The sale of bonds draws gold from the American people. The purchasers of bonds are loaning their savings to the belligerent government and are, in fact, financing the war.

Opposed to Trade "Obstacles."

"The acceptance of Treasury notes or other evidences of debt in payment for articles purchased in this country is merely a means of facilitating trade by a system of credits which will avoid the clumsy and impractical method of cash payments. As trade with belligerents is legitimate and proper, it is desirable that obstacles, such as interference with an arrangement of credits or easy method of exchange, should be removed.

"The question of an arrangement of this sort ought not to be submitted to this Government for its opinion, since it has given its views on loans in general, although an arrangement as to credits has to do with a commercial debt rather than with a loan of money.

"The above are my individual impressions of the conversation with the President, who authorized me to give them to such persons as were entitled to hear them, upon the express understanding that they are my own impressions, and that I have no authority to speak for the President or the Government."

Bryan Note Read.

The Munitions Committee contention was that was a signal to bankers to go ahead. The announced policy of the Government, which was not publicly changed until March 31, 1915, nearly five months after the date of the memorandum, was contained in a memorandum by Secretary of State Bryan, also put in evidence in the munitions hearing.

The memorandum, addressed to President Wilson and dated August 10, 1913, said:

"I beg to communicate to you an important matter which has come before the department. Morgan company, of New York, have asked whether there would be any objection to their making a loan to the French government and also the Rothschilds—I suppose that is intended for the French government.

"I have conferred with Mr. Lansing and he knows of no legal objection to financing this loan, but I have suggested to him the advisability of presenting to you an aspect of the case which is not legal but I believe to be consistent with our attitude in international affairs. It is whether it would be advisable for this Government to take the position that it will not approve of any loan to a belligerent nation. The reasons that I would give in support of this proposition are:

Money "Worst Contraband."

"First: Money is the worst of all contrabands because it commands everything else. The question of making loans contraband by international agreement has been discussed, but no action has been taken. I know of nothing that would do more to prevent war than an international agreement that neutral nations would not loan to belligerents. While such an agreement would be of great advantage, could we not by our example hasten the reaching of such an agreement? We are the one great Nation which is not involved and our refusal to loan to any belligerent would naturally tend to hasten a conclusion of the war.

"We are responsible for the use of our influence through example and we cannot tell what we can do until we try, the only way of testing our influence is to set the example and observe its effect. This is the fundamental reason in support of the suggestion submitted.

"Second: There is a special and local reason, it seems to me, why this course would be advisable. Mr. Lansing observed in the discussion of the subject that a loan would be taken by those in sympathy with the country in whose behalf the loan was negotiated. If we approved of a loan to France we would not, of course, object to a loan to Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Austria or to any other country, and if loans were made to these countries our citizens would be divided into groups, each group loaning money to the country which it favors and this money could not be furnished without expressions of sympathy. These expressions of sympathy are disturbing enough when they do not rest upon pecuniary interests—they would be still more disturbing if each group was pecuniarily interested in the success of the nation to whom its members had loaned money.

Feared Propaganda.

"Third: The powerful financial interests which would be connected with these loans would be tempted to use their influence through the newspapers to support the interests of the Government to which they had loaned because the value of the security would be directly affected by the result of the war. We would thus find our newspapers violently arrayed on one side or the other, each paper supporting a financial group and pecuniary interests. All of this influence would make it all the more difficult for us to maintain neutrality, as our action on various questions that would arise would affect one side or the other and powerful financial interests would be thrown into the balance.

"I am to talk over the telephone with Mr. Davison, of the Morgan company, at 1 o'clock, but I will have him delay final action until you have time to consider this question.

"It grieves me to be compelled to intrude any question upon you at this time, but I am sure you will pardon me for submitting a matter of such great importance.

"With assurances of high respect, I am, my dear Mr. President,

"Yours very truly,

"W. J. BRYAN (Signed).

"P. S.—Mr. Lansing calls attention to the fact that an American citizen who goes abroad and voluntarily enlists in the army of a belligerent nation loses the protection of his citizenship while so engaged, and asks why dollars, going abroad and enlisting in war, should be more protected.

"As we cannot prevent American citizens going abroad at their own risk, so we cannot prevent dollars going abroad at the risk of the owners, but the influence of the Government is used to prevent American citizens from doing this.

"Would the Government not be justified in using its influence against the enlistment of the Nation's dollars in a foreign war? The Morgans say that the money would be spent here, but the floating of these loans would absorb the loanable funds and might affect our ability to borrow."

135 Railroads Seek to Enjoin '35 Pension Act

Court Asked to Test Constitutionality of 'Confiscatory' Law.

The Nation's leading railroads, 135 strong, and three affiliated companies—the Pullman company, the Railway Express agency, and the Southern Express Co.—joined yesterday in District Supreme Court to ask:

That a permanent injunction be granted to halt operation of the 1935 railroad retirement act, drawn by Congress last year in an effort to amend unconstitutional weaknesses of the 1934 act and that the 1935 act be tested for constitutionality.

Thus the railroads and their affiliations leagued themselves against commencing railroad pensions with the assertion that their contributions would grow from a first year's "pot" of more than $58,000,000 to $269,000,000 by 1960, in annual increases.

Hope for a decision before March 1 motivated the carriers in refraining from asking at this time a temporary or restraining injunction of the two laws, which would grant Federal annuities to retired employes, raising such funds by taxing railroads and employes.

The railroads assailed the legislation as "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable," and pointed to constitutional barriers against taking property without due process of law as a background for their charges.

The railroads are directed by law to pay 3½ per cent on pay rolls, and employes are required to contribute 3½ per cent of incomes to make up the annual annuity fund. Neither carriers nor employes would have to pay taxes on compensation in excess of $300 per month, however. After the completion of 30 years of service, workers would be retired at the age of 65, receiving pensions up to $120 a month based on previous earnings.

One hundred and thirty thousand employes are eligible for pensions, according to the suit, which was prepared by a committee of rail attorneys.

Basing many of their arguments on the same grounds accompanying their complaints against the first bill, the carriers described the tax law as "a seizure of funds," and the acts together as a "spoliation and confiscation" of railroad property. They charged that their revenues were being taxed not for Government support but for the purpose of paying pensions.

not been made public, the change in policy of the Government had been no secret. He quoted a Washington dispatch to a New York newspaper in which it was stated that it had been learned that the Government policy toward loans had been changed.

"It is surprising to me," remarked Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, a member of the committee, "that J. P. Morgan & Co. would act on the strength of a newspaper story."

Lamont replied that it did not act on a newspaper story, but that it was receiving some information about the official attitude in Washington from French Ambassador Jusserand. In this connection the following telegram from Jusserand, dated October 25, 1914, two days after the date of the Lansing memorandum, and addressed to a vice president of the National City Bank, was introduced:

"I think it is appropriate for me to confidentially tell you that from information, the accuracy of which I can not doubt, you will find the competent authority ready, not of course to grant 'permission,' which is neither asked for nor wanted, but to abstain from objections."

Four days later the National City Bank floated a $10,000,000 French loan, the first of a long series arranged by New York bankers.

Vanderlip told the committee that it was his recollection that Bryan had indicated to a representative of his company that there would be no objection to extending credit to belligerents.

"Did J. P. Morgan & Co. strive to alter the attitude of the Administration on loans?" Chairman Nye asked Morgan.

"I don't know of anything of the kind," the banker replied.

Lamont said that he believed loans were advisable to stimulate export trade and pointed to the large amount of unemployment at the time.

"We wouldn't have thought of extending a loan over the opposition of the Secretary of State," Vanderlip told the committee in answer to another question.

The committee adopted the unusual procedure of seating three of the witnesses, Morgan, Lamont and Vanderlip, at a table facing the committee members and firing questions at one after the other, instead of hearing one witness at a time.

Among other documents introduced in evidence was a cablegram from Henry P. Davison, then a Morgan partner, sent to Morgan, Grenville & Co., British connection of the Morgan firm. The company was instructed to relay the message to the British chancellor of the exchequer. It declared that Davison had "information that United States Senator Stone for years has been intimate with the German government which now probably is inspiring his actions."

Another message from Davison, marked "for information of the Chancellor" referred to an export embargo bill introduced in the House and quoted Senator Elihu Root as saying it had no chance of passage.

"Was it your habit to report to foreign officials concerning American public official?" Nye asked Lamont.

"We were not in touch directly with foreign governments," Lamont said.

"Did the State Department know what you were doing?"

"Not that I know of."

Morgan, accompanied by Lamont and Vanderlip, arrived at the hearing 15 minutes early and quietly submitted to being photographed scores of times. A few minutes later, other Morgan partners and John W. Davis, Morgan attorney, arrived.

Neither Morgan nor Lamont could remember the assets of the company in 1914 or in 1917, but they produced a statement showing assets on December 31, 1935, of $537,000,000 and liabilities of $490,000,000. The testimony then went into the set-up of Morgan companies in England and in France.

Morgan then read his statement, followed by an objection by Senator Clark to "any more stump speeches."

Morgan said that in spite of Wilson's injunction at the outset of the war to be "neutral in thought," his company had "found it quite impossible to be impartial as between right and wrong."

"When the United States came into the war," he said, "it was not driven into it by any individual or individuals or by any class. It came in because Germany had made it impossible for the United States to refrain any longer. Germany drove the United States into the war by a series of insults and injuries."

He declared that "the fact that the allies found us useful and valued our assistance in their task is the fact of which I am most proud in all my business life of more than 45 years."

Morgan, in answer to questions, emphasized that his company had always acted within the regulations laid down by the Government.

Lamont added that "we rigidly adhered to regulations laid down by the State Department.

Lamont said an informal request came from France for a loan in August, 1914. A cablegram from De Rothschild Freres, Paris bankers, suggesting a loan of $100,000,000 was put in the record. The Morgan firm replied that such a loan was impossible at the time, "but after a little while it might be a very possible and desirable thing to do."

Testimony and documentary evidence showed that Morgan, Harjes & Co., the Morgan connection in Paris, repeatedly urged a loan and one message suggested that "another government" might obtain a loan from some firm "such as Kuhn, Loeb & Co."

"What other government?" Nye asked.

"Very likely Germany," Morgan replied.

Nye suggested that possibly the Paris bank was afraid the allegiance of the American money market might go to Germany if quick action was not taken.

Lamont said a $10,000,000 loan was then considered, but that the Morgan Co. announced publicly that it would not be made if the administration had the slightest doubt in the matter.

Both Lamont and Morgan said they had forgotten many details of what went on in the early days of the war.

"We can't make up a memory," said Morgan as the questioning persisted.

"When the Government changed its policy we changed with it," he said.

Vanderlip at one stage of the questioning said that "neutrality never did exist in my mind."

Explaining his motives in making loans to the allies, Vanderlip told the committee:

"If we had shut off exports to all belligerents the course of America's financial position might have been different. The end of the war might have been different."

"Would the position of the bankers have been different?" Nye asked.

"It would have been less satisfactory," said Vanderlip.

Vanderlip said that his motives in making loans were sympathy with the allies and the desire to stimulate American trade.

Vanderlip was asked whether he believed Great Britain would have defaulted if it had not been victorious.

"I don't think so," he said.

"Better tell that to the United States Treasury," said a committee member.

"The Treasury doesn't seem inclined to listen to my views," Vanderlip said.

States Hostile To League Act To Join Hands

Rome Due to Recognize Manchukuo, Auguring New Rapprochement.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Shanghai, Jan. 7.—An anti-League of Nations group in the international family of nations was foreshadowed tonight by significant rumors that Italy plans recognition of Japan's puppet-state of Manchukuo in the near future.

Unofficial speculation on reported diplomatic developments indicate a possible economic, if not military, rapprochement among Japan, Italy, Germany, Manchukuo, San Salvador, and possibly other smaller nations.

The arrival in Tokyo today of Leone Weilschoit, former counsellor to the Italian Embassy, with the designation of minister plenipotentiary, caused wide speculation that Italian recognition of Manchukuo is imminent, as part of a general plan for closer economic relationship between Italy and Japan.

Japan Out of League.

Japan is out of the League of Nations. Italy virtually is out, with economic sanctions in force against her by League nations. Germany, rumored to have signed a military agreement with Japan recently, is out of the League and antagnostic to the League policy and program.

The gravest need of Italy, Germany and Japan is for raw materials not obtainable within their own borders, and markets for their manufactured products. Manchukuo's natural wealth is immense and she has a population of 30,000,000 consumers.

Weilschott denied that he had been assigned there to arrange details of Italian recognition of Manchukuo. He said he merely was vacationing.

Meanwhile, reports that Italy would extend to Japan her shipping lines, ending in the Far East now with China, added to the belief that an Italian-Japanese trade agreement was brewing. The Chinese attitude toward Italy's campaign in Ethiopia was said to have a bearing on this reported plan.

Italy Seeks Markets.

Business circles pointed out that Italy is seeking markets in countries not members of the League where she may purchase needed commodities and sell her own products. The report regarding extension of Italian ship lines goes so far as to name the Conte Verdi as the first vessel which will be placed in regular service to Japan.

It is common knowledge in diplomatic circles that Japan desperately desires recognition of Manchukuo, the huge corner she sliced off China, by one or more world powers.

San Salvador and Japan are the only countries which have recognized the puppet state as an independent nation, and until other nations of some importance recognize Manchukuo, the international standing of the Japanese-created empire, nominally ruled by Henry Pu-Yi, is almost nil.

New Water Source Ends Shortage in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Jan. 7 (Palor Agency).—After 2,000 years of water shortage, Jerusalem began today to receive water througha 38-mile pipeline which carries the fluid from the newly-built reservoir at Ras-El-Ain on the coast, 2,600 feet below Jerusalem. The water is lifted by pumps.

The line cost almost $2,000,000 to build. The new supply supplements the water available in the Solomon's pools, ancient reservoirs believed to have been built by the third king of Israel.

New Tariff in Honduras Hits Japan; Favors U. S.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Jan. 7 (AP).—Congress today approved a new tariff law which strongly hits Japan and greatly favors the United States.

The measure creates a scale of three tariffs, maximum, medium and minimum. The lowest is applicable to countries which buy most Honduran exports.

Hitler's Boss Once; Yust a Tailor Now

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7 (AP).—Peter Yust may be just a little-known tailor now, but he can look back at the time when he was boss of Adolf Hitler, dictator of Germany, he asserted today.

Military rank gave him authority over Hitler during the World War. The tailor was a sergeant major in the Hungarian army, the present German chancellor an infantry corporal in the Bavarian forces.

For eight weeks in 1916, while the Hungarians and Bavarians lined up artillery in the vicinity of Trubchevsk, Russia, Yust was Hitler's superior officer. Soldiers of all the central powers frequently fought side by side at that time, Yust said.

"Hitler was a good soldier, but had few intimate friends," Yust said, adding that Hitler demonstrated none of the qualities of leadership which later made him a world figure.

6,500 Troops Added to Italy's Army in Africa

Mussolini Creates Units of Militia to Preserve Home Strength.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Jan. 7.—Premier Mussolini fed more manpower to his war machine in Africa tonight. Several thousand members of famous Alpine divisions left for the plateaus of Ethiopia.

Four thousand Alpine troops were aboard the Conte Grande, which sailed last night, and it was followed tonight by the Conto Rosso with 2,500 Alpine artillerymen.

To replace them, Il Duce created new militia units for duty in this country.

Italian anger toward President Roosevelt because of his message to Congress simmered more quietly, but the press still took shots at the President.

The newspaper La Tribuna said the President had attempted something like Fascism, but failed "through the fault of the democratic regime."

Il Lavoro Fascista said: "It is absurd for Roosevelt to revive the Monroe Doctrine of European non-interference with American affairs while setting himself up as a judge of regimes he defines as 'autocratic.'"

Reliable sources disclosed that the attacks against Washington's neutrality program were made with the full knowledge of the Italian government.

Among those joining the attack were the Popolo d'Italia of Milan, Premier Mussolini's own newspaper, and Il Popolo di Roma. The latter said the President's address showed a "necessarily imperfect and not profound knowledge" of European problems.

Belgrade Observes Yule With Fanfare

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 7—Belgrade celebrated the Serbian orthodox Christmas today with fireworks reminiscent of America's fourth of July.

A year of mourning for the assassinated King Alexander was over, so 12-year-old King Peter II was the center of ceremonies at the palace, where he performed the ancient ceremony of receiving the Yule log.

The log was dragged up by four white horses and custom required that the boy monarch sprinkle it with sweet corn and nuts before it could be brought to the fireplace.

Peter is interested in mechanics, so the present which pleased him most was a motion-picture outfit from his mother, Queen Mary. He forgot his royal dignity to get down on the floor and tinker with the apparatus.

Ethiopians Mark Christmas; Rains Hailed as Blow to Italy

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 7.—Continuous heavy rains in the north cheered the Ethiopian people today as they celebrated their Christmas.

Natives were confident the rains, bogging up the soil, will compel the Fascist invaders to fall back from their advanced positions about Makale.

The day is known as "Ganna" by the Ethiopians. An imperial service was held in the little church of St. Gabriel in the lower palace compound.

Crown Prince Asfa Wosan represented his father, Emperor Haile Selassie, at the service, which lasted for five hours. The emperor attended services at his field headquarters at Dessye.

Ethiopia's foreign "brain trust" was strengthened today by the addition of another American, John H. Spencer, 30, formerly of Grinnell, Iowa.

Spencer, a specialist in international law, arrived last night. He will be an assistant political adviser to the government. Everett Andrews Colson, an American, is the Emperor's financial adviser.

Two European advisers, Gen. Eric de Vergin and Jacques Auberson, recently departed, leaving Colson's tasks even more arduous.

Spencer, who has spent the last three years in Europe, was recommended for the post by Prof. Pitman Benjamin Potter, American, who was an Ethiopian representative on a commission which sought to conciliate the dispute between Italy and Ethopia before the war broke out.

4 British Destroyers Arrive at Greek Port

Piraeus, Greece, Jan. 7 (AP).—Four British destroyers—Escort, Electra, Express and Exmouth—arrived today in the harbor of this seaport of Athens.

Unconfirmed rumors circulated that Greece has been approached to provide harbor facilities for British ships in case a conflict should result from application of League of Nations war penalties against Italy.

Three other British destroyers, the Escapade, Esk and Eclipse, arrived off Poros Island in the Gulf of Aegina.

France, Britain Complete Plan For Mutual Aid

By the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 7.—Plans for instant co-operation by British and French land, sea and air forces comprising the entire war strength of the two nations if either is attacked were completed today.

France and Britain are ready for any emergency, whether an attack comes on the sea against the British fleet in the Mediterranean or against France from across the German, Austrain or Italian frontiers.

Technical plans have been completed in such great detail by the general staffs of the two nations that if anyone attacks either, staff officers need only reach out to a pigeonhole and take down a definite, scientific plan of military co-operation which represents the last word in modern machine warfare.

Both nations were careful to stress that this co-operation is not a secret military alliance—merely technically getting ready for any emerengcy in full accordance with mutual assistance obligations outlined in the League of Nations pact. Six weeks were spent in perfecting the plan for joint action.

Under the plan, France has designated arsenals, ports, airfields and concentration camps for the use of British forces in France. If, for example, Italy unwarrantedly attacks Britain in the Mediterranean or in Africa, British planes could land the next day on designated French landing fields, where provisions would be ready for housing and refueling and for accommodations for fliers and technicians; the British Mediterranean fleet would have designated for its shelter, refueling and repairs certain French naval bases on the Mediterranean, and any British troops bound overland toward an enemy objective could land at designated French ports and find waiting for them special trains with steam up.

Egyptians Attack Briton Who Shot Workman

Paris, Jan. 7 (AP).—A Cairo dispatch to the Paris-Soir said today a British officer narrowly escaped lynching after he had shot an Egyptian workman in the city.

The incident led to new anti-British demonstrations, the paper said.

5 Slain in Riots In Buenos Aires Trolley Strike

Federal Troops Called Out; Street Cars and Buses Burned in Streets.

By the United Press.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 7.—Federal troops were called to avert further disorders today in the 24-hour general transportation strike after five persons were killed and several wounded in clashes between police and strikers.

At least 15 street cars and several buses were burned by the strikers in violent demonstrations against the Anglo-Argentine Co., operating the street railway system, for not joining the walkout. A tramway station also was burned.

Strikers' activities were limited for the most part to the downtown section and the rest of the city was reported relatively quiet.

Battles between police and the strikers occurred when the latter attempted to destroy the street cars and buses.

Police claimed to have the situation under control.

More than 2,000 persons were reported arrested and the chief of police announced all street cars would operate with armed soldiers aboard if necessary to keep them running.

Interurban service also was suspended temporarily.

The strike, which is scheduled to end at 5 a. m. tomorrow, was called in sympathy with construction workers who walked out in demand for increased wages.

The director general of railways said two passenger coaches of the Central of Buenos Aires Railroad were burned near Villa Devoto. Some stations were stoned.

Plan to Trade Data on Navies Cheers Parley

London Hopes 3-Power Program Is Basis for Negotiation.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 7.—Some optimism that the international naval conference may at last have found a pathway to success was evident tonight.

Delegates studied three markedly similar proposals for the exchange of naval information. These plans were suggested by the British, French and Italians in an effort to prevent failure of the parley.

The Americans and British, while aware that much depends upon the Japanese viewpoint, are hopeful, nevertheless, that some simple plan would be acceptable to all and could be used as a framework upon which to build a new limitation treaty.

Co-Operation Expected.

General opinion appeared to be that the conference has reached a point where it is dealing with a subject on which it would be difficult for any power to refuse to co-operate.

The Americans are known to favor the information exchange idea in principle, feeling it is a step in the right direction. The essential object of all three plans is to eliminate suspicion and distrust caused by secret building and to avoid the element of surprise which would contribute toward competition in armaments.

Britain's delegation is hopeful that an acceptance would unlock the door to further agreements, at least on limitation of the size of armament ships within various categories.

Japan Asks Parity.

Any agreement on total tonnages is held up by Japan's unbudging demand for equality with America and Britain.

The three plans are secret, but the British said all agree upon essential provisions, varying only in minor details, which probably are adjustable.

The British proposal, embodying the exchange provisions of the existing Washington and London naval treaties, also is understood to contain far-reaching requirements for further building details which must be communicated in regard to each ship.

It was predicted in authoritative quarters that the session would end within a fortnight if the current proposals fail.

Improvement Promises Made to Association

Promise of highway improvements and the purchase of 500 acres near Clinton, Md., by the Navy for a radio research laboratory, led to revived interest in the southern Prince Georges' Citizens Association, the membership committee announced yesterday.

One hundred new members are to be initiated by the association at its meeting in the Surrattsville High School today at 8 p. m.

The association said it was promised several curves on Route 5 from the District Line through Silver Hill, Md., will be straightened.

Reno, Nev., Jan. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Frances Colby Rogers, daughter of Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Wilson, was granted a divorce here today from Robert Cameron Rogers, social registerite publicity man for a steamship line in New York City.

The decree was granted on grounds of separation for more than five years. They were married June 16, 1925. Property rights were settled by agreement, terms of which were not disclosed.

Inner Mongolia Civil War Near, Peiping Report

Japanese Protest Attack on 'Imperial Army' in New Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Jan. 7.—Japanese officers protested to the new semi-autonomous North China government today against what they called an "insult to our imperial army."

A note to the Chinese officials demanded "suitable retribution" for what was called the firing on Japanese officers by Chinese soldiers.

This incident followed reports that civil war was imminent in inner Mongolia between troops of the Governor of Suiyan Province and the Mongolian Prince Teh Wang, who heads the "Mongolian Autonomy League," allegedly Japanese-controlled.

(A dispatch from Kalgan, Chahar Province, said an invading Manchukuoan army had most of northern Chahar under its control. The army is installing a Manchukuoan administration and the Japanese-advised invaders ordered taxes paid from now on to Manchukuo.

(The dispatch said Manchukuoans were taking over postoffices and that Chinese officials have been negotiating fruitlessly for the return of lost territory.)

The Japanese protest charged Japanese officers entering Peiping Sunday night were shot at by troops of Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, chairman of the semi-autonomous political council for Hopei and Chahar provinces.

Chinese newspapers described the incident differently, asserting the Japanese fired on Chinese soldiers on guard at the city gates when the latter kept the Japanese waiting for the gates to open.

Six Hurt as Strikers Battle Deputy Sheriffs

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 7 (AP).—Six men, including a deputy sheriff, were injured in a battle between striking employes of the Vermont Marble Co. and deputy sheriffs at the West Rutland plant of the company today. Ten alleged strikers were arrested, including the five injured, who were taken to Rutland Hospital and placed under police guard.

The clash occurred, deputies said, when a group of strikers attempted to stop the loading of a truck at the West Rutland plant. The deputies said they were obliged to use their clubs to protect themselves, and tear gas was used to disperse the men. Employes of the company have been on strike several weeks demanding higher wages and better working conditions.

Mystery Pipe Blast Kills Couple on Hunt

Shreveport, La., Jan. 7 (AP).—A mysterious explosion of a gasoline pipe line that occurred while they were hunting rabbits in a woods last night caused the deaths today of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hamilton.

Harold Lyle, 18, their nephew, said he was 200 yards from the couple when there was a "big flash of fire and when it died down the grass and woods had begun to burn. They were lying in the circle of fire."

Lyle pulled them out and summoned aid.

He said "no one fired a shot and there was no smoking" as they passed over the pipeline.

Drunken Holdup Men Kill 2 in Beer Taverns

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Drunken holdup men killed two waiters in Brooklyn beer taverns early today. As two reeling youths, waving pistols, were leaving a tavern on Fulton street with $105 loot, Ralph Misco, 32, a waiter, lowered his hands as if to resist the pair.

Shortly afterward, Julius Davidson, 40, a waiter in a tavern a mile away, lost his life in a similar holdup. The police expressed belief the same pair committed both crimes.

Big Gain Shown In Assessments For Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Real estate assessments in Arlington County due to improvements added in 1935 will show an increased assessed valuation of $2,002,600, according to a survey just completed by Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green. The added assessed valuation for 1934 due to improvements were $463,500. The increase due to construction during 1935 220 per cent greater than for the same period of 1934, Commissioner Green reports. The taxes on 1935 improvements will be payable next December.

The report shows the commissioner located 712 buildings ready for assessment, several small apartment houses and the Colonial Village development consisting of 276 apartments. The estimated cost of all construction during 1935 is about $6,000,000.

About 100 new buildings were found just started and not ready for assessment as of January 1 and will be assessed for 1937. A second unit of the Colonial Village development, consisting of 462 apartments, is under construction. This item alone will add considerably to the assessed valuation of real estate for 1937.

First Unit Assessed.

The first unit of the Colonial Village apartments, situated on 11 acres in Fort Myer Heights, has been assessed for $380,000. This unit represents an expenditure of more than $1,000,000 on which a Federal Housing Administration loan of $875,000 was obtained.

The total assessed valuation of real estate in the county for the year 1935 was $21,738,640. New assessments for 1936 will bring the total real estate valuations to the assessed value of $23,831,240. This is an increase of about 10 per cent on total valuation, which is the heaviest increase in real estate values ever experienced in a single year in the history of Arlington County, Green stated.

At the present rate of taxation of $2.70 on the $100 assessed valuation, the added improvements on real estate for 1936 will produce a revenue of $56,500. The increased valuation on new improvements for the year 1935 was $463,500, with an estimated increase in taxes of $11,124. The increase in taxes for 1936 over that of 1935 on real estate improvements is about 20 per cent. The commissioner estimates the total assessed valuation for Arlington County for 1936, including personal property assessments and public service corporations, will amount to $28,544,932. With a tax at the present rate of $2.70 it will produce $770,713.16, or an increase over 1935 on the same classifications of $60,805.47.

Comparison Is Made.

While the rate of taxation in Arlington County is higher than that of the District of Columbia and adjoining States, the rate of assessments is much lower and consequently taxes on real estate in the county are considerably less.

Commissioner Green pointed out that if real estate in Arlington County were assessed at its full market value the rate of taxation could be cut to $1 on the $100 assessed valuation and still produce as much as, if not more than, the present rate of $2.70.

Miller to Head Shriners Again In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
307 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

Leonard J. Miller was re-elected president of the Alexandria Shrine Club at a Monday night meeting in the George Mason Hotel.

Other officers elected were Clyde C. Lamond, sr., first vice president; Dr. William Meyer, second vice president; Harry H. Newton, third vice president; Samuel E. Wade, secretary; Claude W. Fletcher, treasurer, and John H. Trimyer, chaplain.

The Shrine Club has indorsed the present set-up of the Alexandria Health Department, opposing a recent movement by the Alexandria Medical Association to have two physicians appointed to care for the indigent sick in the city, thereby relieving the health officer from this work and allowing him full time to devote to the work of the health office.

Thomas Chauncey, Claude W. Fletcher and Harry H. Newton were appointed a committee to appear at the next meeting of the city council indorsing and advocating the present health department.

The George Washington Birthday Association has voted not to sponsor a George Washington's birthday parade this year, as at first proposed. The last parade held by the association was in 1932.

Mark L. Price was named chairman of a committee to visit the Tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon and place a wreath, in accordance with the established custom. Price will select other members of the committee.

William Albert Smoot, former mayor of Alexandria, was re-elected president of the association at the meeting held Monday night, with Harry F. Kennedy as executive vice president. Martin E. Greene is secretary and J. William May, treasurer.

R. B. Lyon, district organizer for the Townsend old-age pension plan, will hold a meeting at 8:30 p. m. tonight in the Elks Lodge room to perfect organization in Alexandria. One hundred members are required to organize.

Mrs. James Rowland, president of the George Washington High School Parent-Teacher Association unit, presided last night at an interesting meeting of that body when various clubs within the school presented skits outlining the school activities. Skits were given by members of the Spanish Club, the library club, the etiquette club, the art club and others.

The Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Catholic Church will observe the Feast of the Holy Name with a special celebration Sunday at 7 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Members of the society will attend mass and communion in a body in the morning. The evening service will feature reception of new members.

The Rev. M. J. Hartigan will be celebrant of the mass. Reception of new members will be followed by a special sermon by the Rev. Michael J. Cannon, formerly of St. Mary's parish.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the circuit court, has named Everett A. Hellmuth and J. Herbert Taylor as jury commissioners in the circuit court for 1936. They will select a list of 10 names from which to draw juries during the year.

The Alexandria Ministerial Association will hold its annual meeting at 10 p. m. today in the Westminster Building. The meeting will be presided over by the Rev. William B. McIlwaine, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church.

way to the storekeeper's quarters, the officer caught the seaman off guard, grappled with him and called for help as the two rolled to the deck. A Marine guard ran up as the seaman was beating Prien on the head with the pistol and the officer was rapidly losing consciousness.

The would-be robber was identified as George A. Boyog, second-class seaman and a radio striker. It was alleged that in addition to the revolver, a large knife, a bayonet and a long rope were found in his possession. The story continues:

"Under questioning, Boyog confessed that he had been planning to rob the disbursing officer for four months. * * *

"Prien was to be killed * * * his body thrown overboard. Thus, the sailor thought, it would be concluded that Lieut. Prien had robbed the safe and committed suicide, while he would escape suspicion.

"The court-martial which tried Boyog sentenced him to serve 20 years in prison. The sentence has been approved by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, who, however, lowered the prison term to 15 years."

Prince Georges County Collects $168,044 Taxes

A total of $168,044.28 was collected in taxes in Prince Georges County during the past three months, it was revealed yesterday by Ernest R. Smith, county treasurer.

In his quarterly report to the Board of Commissioners, covering the period from October 1 to December 31, the total figures showed:

General tax collections for the period: $155,781.35; interest, $4,487.82. Amount collected on stocks and bonds, $858.29; interest, $21.25. Amount collected on bank stocks, $2,562.04; interest, .06. Amount collected on corporations $4,520.33; interest, $13.22.

A report from the police court, filed by Clerk Thomas R. Henault, showed that during the month of December the court received $2,573 in costs and fines.

The court during the month also handled 264 motor vehicle cases, 11 State game cases, and 132 miscellaneous cases, Henault said.

It was decided that Commissioners Joseph D. Blanford of Brandywine, Md., and Vinton D. Cockey of Laurel, Md., should represent the board at the Western Maryland County Commissioners Association meeting, to be held at Frederick Thursday, January 16.

A University of Maryland Alumni Association was organized in Washington yesterday as an "independent body" with the announced purpose of "advertising the university in name and in fact."

The organization meeting was held in the Harrington Hotel and Fred B. Linton was named temporary president.

Joe Deckman, the university's all-American lacrosse player, started the advertising. He said he was tired of hearing the university called a "cow college" and had made up his mind that the world should know that he had obtained at the school "as good an engineering degree as could be offered by any university in the country."

William H. Press was named temporary vice president of the organization, and Charles V. Koons was chosen secretary-treasurer.

About 50 members of the university alumni attended the meeting. A second meeting will be held in the Harrington Hotel January 21.

Miss Pearl McCall, attorney; Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, chairman of the county Republican committee, and J. Wilson Ryon were named yesterday as speakers for the luncheon of the Federation of Republican Women of Prince Georges County next Tuesday at 1 p. m. in the Community Kitchen at Riverdale, Md.

Mrs. Edna Pitts is chairman of the federation and Mrs. Eva C. Chase is in charge of luncheon arrangements.

Ralph W. Powers, president of the group, said the new community would stimulate business in the county and the chamber should co-operate in every way with the Resettlement Administration.

The project drew criticism from Walter F. Mulligan, chairman of the chamber's roads committee. He charged that Prince Georges County would be called on to bear the burden of an alien population having none of the county welfare at heart.

Belief that the residents of the new community would put much more into the county than they would take out was expressed by C. D. Anderson, secretary of the chamber. He said the county would receive more in taxes than previously, as soon as the community developed.

Daniel Cox Fahey, former president of the chamber, termed the project commendable in its purpose, but expressed doubt as to its practical development.

Walter L. Green, chairman of the public utilities committee, reported the recent reduction of rates by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in line with the chamber's drive in that direction. Nothing has been done, he reported, on the one-man street car program.

Study of the proposed placing of Prince Georges County schools on the "6-3-3" basis—6 years of elementary, 3 years junior high and 3 years of high school—will be resumed this month by the county's Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations.

Dr. R. C. Wiley, of College Park, Md., president of the federation, said last night a meeting will be held at the Berwyn Graded School within two weeks to discuss the matter.

Schools of the county are now on the "7-4" basis, or seven years of elementary school and four years of high school.

The Laurel (Md.) Woman's Club will meet today at 2 p. m. in the organization's clubroom on Main street.

Mrs. John Paul Troy, chairman of club institutes for the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, who will preside, has announced the session will take the form of a club institute. Mrs. George W. S. Musgrave, president of the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs, also will attend.

Legislation for birth control, which the General Federation of Women's Clubs indorsed for study at its triennial meeting in Detroit last year, will be discussed by a speaker of national prominence, it was stated.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Resumption of service early next summer on the Kensington-Sandy Spring Railway, which suspended operations when the Capital Transit Co. changed from street car to bus service on Constitution avenue, was forecast yesterday by R. H. Phillips, the owner, at a meeting of the Montgomery County commissioners.

Phillips appeared to ask that assessments on his railway be reduced because the road has not operated for several months. He said he was virtually sure of beginning operation again, but did not say what plans he had made to obtain power.

The county commissioners were asked by the Woodside Park Civic Association to obtain rights of way for the extension of Sixteenth street. The association informed the commissioners that the Blair Management Corporation and other landowners are disposed to donate the necessary land.

The commissioners will meet Friday at 10 a. m. with representatives of 12 other counties to discuss ways and means of combating the tax appeal by the Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., which has been filed with the State Tax Appeals Court. The company wants its $14,900 assessment in Montgomery County reduced to $13,695.

The county commissioners will attend a meeting of the County Commissioners of the Western Shore Association January 16 at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, Frederick, to discuss legislative programs to be presented to the State Legislature in February.

The Montgomery County Press Association yesterday voted to hold a St. Patrick's Day dance March 17 at the Indian Spring Country Club from 10 to 1.

More than 300 persons are expected to attend the Jackson Day dinner to be held tonight at the Kenwood Country Club under the auspices of the United Young Men's Democratic Clubs of Montgomery County. Representative James M. Mead, of New York, will be the principal speaker. State Senator Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, also is scheduled to speak.

Efforts of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce to block any move to review county real estate assessments advanced a step farther when the chamber adopted a resolution vigorously opposing proposals to authorize the county commissioners to carry on an equalization program.

The chamber also continued its campaign for lower gas rates in the county by adopting a resolution calling upon the Maryland Public Service Commission and the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Companies to make permanent the 8½ per cent temporary reduction that has been in effect for more than a year.

Other resolutions adopted place that body on record in favor of widening and paving the Old Georgetown road from Wisconsin avenue to Alta Vista; purchase of the abandoned right of way of the Capital Transit Co. between the Old Georgetown road and the Rockville pike for highway purposes; rerouting buses bound for Chevy Chase, Kensington and Garrett Park from Connecticut avenue to Wisconsin avenue, and an investigation of the action of the Potomac Electric Power Co. in erecting towering and unsightly poles on Wisconsin avenue.

Paul Walker, professor of economics at the University of Maryland, will be the speaker at the dinner meeting of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce January 17, it was announced yesterday by O. W. Anderson, president. Prof. Walker, who has made a study of the Maryland tax situation, will discuss the tax problem from a research standpoint.

Pupils of the Glenmont School will hold their annual spelling bee tomorrow at 8 p. m., following the business session of the Glenmont Parent-Teacher Association. There also will be a spelling bee between all former pupils at the school.

The Silver Spring (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department has appointed a committee to investigate the feasibility of purchasing a truck, equipped with a 65-foot junior aerial ladder, costing aproximately $8,000.

A joint meeting of the directors of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau and the Farm Bureau Supply Co. will be held Friday at 2 p. m., it was announced yesterday by J. W. Jones, president of both organizations.

Widow to Get Entire Estate Of Sen. Schall

Children 'Intentionally' Omitted; Their Care Entrusted to Wife.

The entire estate of Senator Thomas D. Schall (Republican), of Minnesota, was bequeathed to his wife, Mrs. Margaret H. Schall, it was revealed yesterday when his will was probated in the Prince Georges County (Md.) Orphans Court.

The blind Senator, who died from the results of an auto accident in Cottage City, Md., last December 19, said he "intentionally" omitted his children from the will.

He explained that he had "the utmost confidence" that his wife would "tenderly, well and carefully feed, clothe, educate and provide a comfortable home for our children, Thomas D. Schall, jr., and Richard B. Schall, during their minority."

Written in the Senator's handwriting on a piece of foolscap paper, the will was dated December 3, 1913—6 years before the birth of his youngest child, Padgett Ann, who is now 16. Thomas is 25 and Dick 23.

The inventory filed with the will showed only the property held by the late Senator within the county. This consisted of his 7½-acre estate at Berwyn, Md.; a $65 bank account, and $900 in debts.

Young Schall said the bulk of his father's estate was tied up in real estate in Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota.

Fairfax Board Picks Armfield As School Aid

Several appointments in the public schools of Fairfax County, Va., were made yesterday at the regular monthly meeting of the county school board.

J. Bynum Armfield, of Herndon, was appointed as secretary to the county superintendent of schools to succeed James C. King, who resigned to accept a position as an assistant to the executive officer of the Federal Archives Building. Armfield was educated in the Herndon school and a Washington business college. At present he is working for the Federal Resettlement Administration at Raleigh, N. C. He will report for work in Fairfax within the next few days.

Miss Evelyn F. Burkhart, of Fairfax, was appointed assistant commercial teacher in the Fairfax High School and Mrs. Emma O. Moore as supervisor of negro elementary schools.

A letter was received from John Q. Rhodes, State motor vehicles commissioner, informing the county board that under the present State law it was impossible for county-owned school buses to obtain a refund on the gasoline tax paid for fuel consumed in the buses. The school board contends that the State is taxing money raised by local taxation and for a purpose that is a governmental function.

Mrs. J. Hunter Mack and Mrs. Melvin Hobson, representing the Parent-Teacher Association of McLean, appeared before the board asking that more courses be offered in the McLean High school and for improved school facilities.

F. W. Richardson, recently retired veteran county clerk of Fairfax County, Va., will be the guest of honor tonight at the Jackson Day dinner sponsored by the Young Democratic Club of Fairfax County, Va., in the Herndon High School. He will be tendered a testimonial parchment from the club by its president, Franklin S. Gicker, jr.

Representative John Flannigan, of Bristol, Va., will be the principal speaker. Randolph Leigh, of McLean, Va., a candidate for the Democratic nomination as United States Senator from Virginia, will also speak.

Judge Walter C. McCarthy, of the Fairfax County Circuit Court and all county officials will attend the dinner which will be served by the Herndon Parent-Teacher Association. The dinner will begin promptly at 7:30 p. m. according to the committee in charge of arrangements.

W. Lewis Leigh, of Fairfax, stated last night that a few more reservations are available, but no tickets will be sold after 6 p. m. today. More than 200 tickets had been sold by last night.

The Falls Church last night at its annual congregational meeting re-elected the following vestry members: Charles A. Stewart, Dr. E. B. Stiff, Samuel H. Styles, Gordon Nicolson, Gen. Rufus Lane, Mayo Herring and Julian Slade.

Reports were read by the church treasurer, Samuel Styles, and the registrar, Gordon Nicolson, and by the officers of each of the Sunday School and church organizations.

The Falls Church Women's Club program for its January meeting, to be held Friday at 2 p. m. in the library, will be a round table discussion of social security legislation. The forum will be led by Mrs. R. B. Rollinson. Mrs. A. H. Barbor will act as hostess.

Fred Brenckman, National Grange legislative representative in Washington, last night installed the new officers of Providence Grange in the Oakton School auditorium. The meeting was open to visitors and installation ceremonies were followed by a talk by Mr. Brenckman on aspects of rural life.

C. C. Carr announced that the Friendship flag, presented to the Virginia State Grange several months ago, will be taken to North Carolina, January 16, by a delegation from Mt. Vernon Grange and representatives from the other Fairfax County subordinates.

Judiciary Unit Of House Given D.C.-Va. Report

Park Commission Reviews Attack on Boundary Group's Findings.

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday was assigned the task of studying the disputed report of the District-Virginia Boundary Commission after Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, had introduced a bill calling for approval of the recommendations.

Public hearings will be held by Chairman Sumners, of Texas, or by a sub-committee chairman he may name.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which has taken the lead with the Justice Department in opposing the commission's division of property on the southern side of the Potomac River, yesterday renewed its attack.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary, predicted that the National bird sanctuary at Roaches Run will be replaced with gasoline filling stations, cheap restaurants, and other small commercial establishments if the boundary report is accepted by Congress.

The commission has instructed its chairman, Frederick A. Delano, and its executive officer, Arno B. Cammerer, to appear before the Congressional committees in opposition to the report.

The recommendations of the boundary commission would award all the more valuable property in dispute to Virginia and would leave only a thin strip of land adjacent to the Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard in the name of the United States Government.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee and ranking majority member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, is engaged in gathering data to fight the report when it reaches the Senate.

Sabotaging Local Government.

The absurdity of the fiscal system imposed on the District has never been more pointedly illustrated than in the emasculated estimates sent to Congress by the Budget Bureau. That Federal agency has slashed every one of the carefully prepared estimates of the District Commissioners and the local budget officer, without the slightest regard for actual needs of the community or for revenue available. Responsible local government under such outrageous obstruction is impossible.

Washington's needs for schools, playgrounds, court buildings and branch libraries, as well as more effective public health service, police protection and municipal relief, are unquestionably urgent. After analyzing these needs, the responsible heads of the local government cut down estimated expenditures to the lowest reasonable minimum. Their budget could be fully financed, with a comfortable surplus, even if the Federal contribution should remain at the extremely low figure of the last few years. In spite of that fact, it has been ripped to pieces by a Federal bureau whose essential duty is to analyze and revise proposed national expenditures.

Details of the budget as it was sent to Congress are insignificant beside this intolerable encroachment upon the essential prerogative of local government. The pretense that Washington is a municipal corporation, responsible for local welfare and the conduct of community functions, is given a farcical twist by thus denying its executive officers even the opportunity of fairly presenting their case to Congress. That body has just been rebuked by the Supreme Court for exercising unconstitutional control over local functions reserved to the States. If it does not recognize the irony of the complete subordination of the only local government over which it has constitutional jurisdiction, it should at least give heed to the gross injustice of this system to local residents and taxpayers.

Fortunately, the District Commissioners have prepared a bill to relieve the Budget Bureau of all control over Washington's fiscal policies. That measure should be vigorously pushed in the present session of Congress. For the District will be hampered in trying to work out a reasonable fiscal relationship with the National Government, as well as in the exercise of its municipal functions, so long as its purse strings are in the hands of a Federal bureau. Until this measure can be passed Congress should completely ignore the arbitrary mutilation of the Commissioners' estimates. It is not economy to deny a city urgent requirements when it has a prospective surplus of $10,000,000 in its treasury. Whatever zeal for reduced expenditures exists in Congress may be far more profitably applied to the Federal budget.

When Doctors Disagree.

Dr. Oscar Riddle's significant conclusions regarding the origin of life are obscured in some degree by his charge that "the worthy facts concerning man's origin and destiny" are either denied pupils in American schools or else are seriously distorted by traditional religious concepts. It appears from Dr. Riddle's address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science that he is moved by this situation even more than by his claim that the gap between inanimate matter and living things has been bridged.

It is unquestionably true that the advance of scientific knowledge is frequently retarded by traditional beliefs, prejudices and even superstitions. In combating these influences Dr. Riddle will have the support of every true educator as well as every intelligent layman. Nothing save worthless illusions can be destroyed by a full presentation of the facts of life as they are divulged by science or from any other source.

But when Dr. Riddle says that "the present restrictive influence of organized religion on the teaching of the best of biology is intolerable" he reveals a very serious weakness in his accusation. What is "the best of biology?" On this issue Dr. Riddle himself disagrees with some other scientific investigators. For, after denouncing religious teachings on this subject, he declared: "We are all aware that some high authorities in one or another branch of biological science persistently ignore the greater biologic accomplishment, and on some points they, too, still speak with tongues of a day that is gone. We may as well have it out with them."

In other words, the biologists disagree among themselves on the mystery of life. Some research students jump from simple facts to extremely complicated conclusions in a way that is no more justified than the clinging to traditional concepts in face of conclusive scientific proof to the contrary. Nothing is to be gained by the substitution of unproved theories for so-called obsolete beliefs. Would it not be more effective if Dr. Riddle's efforts were first directed toward achieving a "unity of the faith" among biologists?

Our Federal Union.

An insufficiently realized contribution of the Supreme Court, particularly when the tempo of national life discourages reflection, is that its opinions facilitate public consideration of the form and character of American government. In a democracy, dependent for successful functioning on a general understanding of the political structure, this is an invaluable asset.

Tremendous as is the immediate importance of the Hoosac Mills case, by which the AAA has been found unconstitutional, the long-range educational value of both the majority and minority opinions are likely to be more important still. For in these the vital principles behind our governmental organization are brought to the attention of the average citizen, and argued out again much as they were in the days when the framers of the Constitution were debating the form under which "a more perfect Union" should be established.

It is particularly interesting to see how the fundamental issue which divided the Federalists and their opponents in 1787 underlies all the reasoning in this great contemporary decision. Every superficial aspect of the Nation has changed, but still the question of whether this country should be federal or unitary—the United States or a united state—continues. And the conflicting thought of Hamilton and Madison is cited this week as a basis for argument on undertakings which neither of these men could ever have foreseen.

Viewed in this historical perspective, which is the only way in which any official interpretation of the Constitution can properly be examined, it becomes impossible to take exception to the argument of the majority of the court. These six judges are far from upholding the original States' rights position. It is the Hamiltonian and not the Jeffersonian school which they espouse. But if the Federal form of government is to remain, there is a point at which disintegration of the powers reserved to the States must stop. And that point, in the opinion of the majority, is reached when the general welfare clause is regarded as superior to every other part of the Constitution, regardless of the specific enumeration of Federal powers which makes such an interpretation obviously untenable.

To this cogent yet simple analysis the three minority judges reply by citing the opinion of Chief Justice Marshall that: "Let the end be legitimate * * * and all means which are appropriate, which * * * consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional." But the qualification is devastating to applicability in this case. It is consistent neither with the letter nor the spirit of the organic law to transform the Federal Union thus set up into a unitary state.

Both the majority and the minority opinions show keen awareness of the vast importance of the judicial function in our form of government. Mr. Justice Roberts pointed out, almost apologetically, that the "delicate and difficult office" of the court is "to lay the article of the Constitution which is invoked beside the statute which is challenged and to decide whether the latter squares with the former." That is its inescapable and its only duty.

Mr. Justice Stone, for the minority, went further. In addition to recognizing this duty he urged the consideration that "the only check upon our own exercise of power is our own sense of self-restraint." But this statement, though admirable in spirit, is not logically conclusive. The Constitution, as its 21 amendments amply indicate, is not as rigid and inflexible as the remark would indicate. Procedure for change is provided by the instrument itself, subject only to a formula which seeks to insure that revision shall not be made without opportunity for national reflection, and without the indorsement of a substantial majority of citizens and States.

It is the existence of this provision for change which places the argument of the majority above effective criticism. If the Constitution, which has itself amply demonstrated a very considerable degree of flexibility, is to be fundamentally altered, this should be done explicitly and not by that "tortured construction" which the minority opinion itself condemned. Fundamentally that is all the court has said in the current decision. It could say no less. It should say no more.

If the Roosevelt Administration, forgetful of all the political traditions of its party, desires to turn our Federal Government into a unitary state, it must approach the issue openly and frankly. To expect the Supreme Court to wink at such a fundamental metamorphosis is to ask too much from men who take their oath of office with an appropriate solemnity.

Tonight Democratic leaders assemble here to honor the President whose famous toast, at a dinner in its turn honoring Jefferson, still echoes down a century of our history: "Our Federal Union, it must be preserved!"

Thus spoke Andrew Jackson on April 13, 1830, opposing the theory of unrestrained secession. And in the same spirit of obligation the Supreme Court, on January 6, 1936, has defended the same Federal Union against an extension of centralized power which would also obliterate its basic characteristics.

Turning The Page.

During its lifetime the AAA disbursed about $1,000,000,000 in the form of rental and benefit payments to farmers, largely at the expense of certain industries and the consuming public. The farm groups whose cash incomes have been increased by subsidies will be inclined to lament their passing. On the other hand, consumers and those who have had to pay heavy processing taxes will have their immediate self-interest served.

The hopes and the forebodings of all the special groups and classes affected by the downfall of this gigantic experiment in price and production control find a confused reflection in the current fluctuations of stock and commodity markets. Thus, the packing industry, food concerns, and the cotton textile industry look forward to an expansion of business with abolition of the oppressive processing taxes.

On the other hand, mail-order houses and farm-implement manufacturers, selling in areas where AAA checks abound, are worried. Stock market quotations, however, have shown little adverse reaction. Furthermore, a widespread belief that the AAA decision is a forerunner of another invalidating the holding company act has produced a rise in utility stocks.

The artificial character of the market for certain basic commodities such as cotton and sugar has been revealed by the sudden drop in prices which followed announcement of the Supreme Court decision. It is significant, however, that the prices of hogs immediately advanced, indicating that the removal of processing taxes will stimulate packer demand for hog products. But the significance of the Supreme Court decision can not be gauged by these short-time and necessarily short-sighted market responses to a major development that concerns all the people and vitally affects the economic future of the country.

Those who hold to the doctrine that farm prosperity can only be restored by artificially buttressing farm prices will regard every instance of price decline as a national misfortune. But to those who look beyond the painful adjustments of the immediate present, the Supreme Court decision may appear as a liberating factor. It removes shackles upon productive activity which reduce the Nation's real wealth and opens the way to an expansion of farmers' markets by encouraging increased sales of farm products at lower prices.

The return to a system of uncontrolled, untaxed production of basic farm commodities will also mean increased business for industries engaged in processing operations. It should add to the real income of wage earners and thus help to maintain and increase their demand for foodstuffs, clothing and other necessaries. It may facilitate the export of surplus crops, notably cotton, and thus in numerous ways strengthen the position of the farm population.

The only way in which a higher standard of living for all the people can be assured is to utilize our productive resources instead of curtailing them. Our experiment in controlled scarcity has been a costly undertaking which has created more problems than it has solved. The calm reception accorded the Supreme Court decision is the best possible proof that the country as a whole realizes that prosperity does not depend upon artificial recovery devices. Emphasis is now laid upon those natural recuperative forces that have brought us out of previous periods of depression and guided us along the road to a recovery in which all economic groups should share.

Tired Business Girl.

The "tired business man" has had more than his share of publicity via conventions, comics and choruses. Now the tired business girl is going to have her inning, according to Miss Lillian Tautges, of St. Louis, who has organized a national stenographers' club. Chiefly a social venture, says its founder, it is designed to "give expression" to the otherwise circumscribed routine of Winnie the Breadwinner. Potential Bernhardts will have their opportunity in club playlets, thus giving ambitious mimes a break from the monotony of mimeographs. And though typing will by no means be superseded by tapping, there will be dancing teachers on hand for those who wish to forego the o-hook in favor of the rhumba.

Miss Tautges should be congratulated on her noble experiment to relieve the drabness of what was once hailed as the "new freedom." She is particularly to be lauded for the unique aspect of her plan, which is to discourage rather than encourage inhibitions in the feminine 9-to-5 existence. From the minute a girl enters secretarial school, until she leaves the business world, she is under a constant barrage of don'ts. Emily Post, in giving her version of a perfect secretary, states that she "should forget that she is a human being, and be the most efficient machine that she can possibly make of herself."

At any rate, Miss Tautges seems to have known where to stop in her rules of relaxation. And that is more than can be said of Walter Pitkin, who advises those who "ache all over from some special sort of toil" to "lie face down on the floor." Along with this advice should come directions on how to find another job, which is generally incumbent for those stenographers who elect to face the floor instead of the telephone.

Then Why The Umbrella?

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Dr. Ballou's Standing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to congratulate you upon your editorial, "Empty Excitement," which appeared in The Post of January 6. Voteless citizens of the District of Columbia should be pleased when they read such a fair and impartial statement as yours concerning the "tempest in a teapot" which has been started up over supposed examples of communism in the public schools of the District.

Unbiased educators the country over if asked to select the half dozen most competent public school administrators in our Nation would all include on their list the name of Dr. Frank W. Ballou. I am sure that a thorough investigation of the parties responsible for trying to discredit Dr. Ballou would reveal some personal and unethical motives rather than a real interest in the welfare of the boys and girls in the schools of Washington.

TRACY F. TYLER.
Secretary, The National Committee on Education by Radio.

Readers' Approval.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like many others who have written to you, I wish to express my gratification at the attitude taken by you with regard to the Lindbergh family. I am one of those who believe that the newspapers should give their readers all legitimate news, but I do not feel that purely personal matters of a family constitute legitimate news or that Paul Pry is the ideal reporter for a decent newspaper.

I wish that more papers would follow the example of The Post, not only in this respect, but in many others.

FREDERIC B. WRIGHT.
Washington, Jan. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been intending for several days to write you and congratulate The Post on its stand in regard to the publicity on the movements of the Lindberghs. I think your position as outlined some days ago on the front page of The Post represents a distinct forward step in newspaper reporting. I realize that at times it is difficult to distinguish between the personal and public affairs of any individual of prominence, but I think the newspapers, as a rule, have paid entirely too much attention to the personal life of many individuals.

Some day I hope there will be evolved a code of newspaper ethics which will protect the individual who is not seeking publicity and who does not desire to have his private affairs broadcast to the world. Your policy in regard to the Lindberghs is a real step in this direction and I again want to congratulate you upon its formulation.

Washington, Jan. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your decision is so right that it seems impossible to understand why the decent newspapers of our country have not long before come to such a conclusion instead of adopting so generally the methods of the yellow press.

I read in your issue of January 3 the letter signed, "Newspaperman," and judge that it is just the element that he represents in journalism that has catered to and commercially fanned the flame of impertinent curiosity of "the people that buy the papers" to imagine they have the right to invade the privacy of all people.

EDWARD M. CHAMBERLIN.
Paeonian Springs, Va., Jan. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for restoring somewhat our pride in American citizens. Thank you for taking a bold step in the right direction, for insuring within the scope of your paper, at least, the deference and respect which the "Lone Eagle" deserves from his own countrymen.

KATHLEEN DEMPSEY.
Olympia, Wash., Jan. 2.

Air In Buses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hear that eventually we will have only buses on the streets of the city. Let us hope not, if we have to endure breathing such impure and unhealthy air. What is one to do, though, when the bus is the only mode for travel in the direction one wishes to go?

The officials of the bus line no doubt travel around in their automobiles. Let them just once travel some distance in a bus, and they will understand why such a cry is raised against the odor.

MRS. J. W. MORGAN.
Washington, Jan. 6.

Diverse Political Reactions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those Rooseveltian stabs at "forces of autocracy" as symbolized by "entrenched greed"—inject laughs not intended by his speech carpenters. These flings seem evoked by signs of growing opposition to his deal. His charge that no honor, competence or integrity exists anywhere in the world outside the benign radius of his Administration should draw the steady fire of business, and probably will.

Should the forces he rails against offend in future, they will have the alibi that he has set a perfect example. No set of Insulls or foreign bond frauds could match in two decades the wastage his "deal" has taken from the people in one Administration. So where's the difference?

He should chase the spooks out of his own garret first.

E. G. BARR.
Washington, Jan. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a subscriber and constant reader of The Post and recently I have been impressed with its seeming fairness, both in giving the news and in its editorials.

However, your editorials Sunday and the comments on the President's speech before Congress Friday night were the most unfair and caustic criticisms I have seen, and seem to indicate departure from your former policy, and that you are veering as far to the right as you seem to think the President is veering to the left.

I notice, too, that your financial commentator, instead of confining himself to financial comments, has developed into a Republican-Liberty League propagandist. I would like to remind him that, strange as it may seem, there are a few Democrats that have managed to survive the Hoover holocaust and have a few dollars to invest, and would be interested in more financial news and less propaganda.

FAIR PLAY.
Washington, Jan. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot resist the urge to write you expressing my appreciation of the able and convincing editorials appearing in The Post of this date.

I hope, nay, believe, that they express the considered views of the backbone of our Nation; of those who, though not the most articulate, are yet responsible for its present enviable position in the family of nations.

Washington, Jan. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How we wish we could take heart from President Roosevelt's speech before Congress and over the radio last night. He promises a lot of good things, but—— It has been said truly that a man who is fooled by some slick game once is a sucker, but if the same game fools him twice he is a damn fool.

Now, our President has made promises before and broken all of them that count. He was in such haste to stand on the Democratic platform of the Chicago convention that he flew there by air to stand on it with both feet in a great hurry. Then he repudiated every plank of the platform and substituted a socialistic party plank for parts of it. Then in his eagerness to be elected he made all sorts of promises and forecasts in his campaign, and these have been largely disregarded. Can we believe him now when seeking another election he makes us other promises?

WILSON PRESCOTT DRAKE.
Amherst Court House, Va., Jan. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The political show on Capitol Hill last night outraged the sense of propriety of us, the common people, and filled us with humiliating shame. The hoodlum-like reception of the President could not have happened in any other civilized country.

The whole affair was a national eye-opener which explains the erratic and unsound legislation and the weak, emotional abrogation of Congressional powers. It also assays the Administration as "ballyhoo," unsound and untrustworthy from crown to toe, and shows the President in demogogic light.

God save America!

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You did, indeed, do yourself proud in your editorial of January 5 on "The State of the Union." I have seen nothing in any paper comparable to it. I would to God it could be reproduced in every newspaper in the United States.

MAJ. ALEXANDER S. LANIER.
Washington, Jan. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What the President said about those attacking the New Deal reminds me of an incident that occurred to my little 5-year-old boy last Thanksgiving. He wanted to help his mother set the Thanksgiving table. On a side table was a beautiful dish containing cranberry sauce. While his mother was not watching he took the dish and started to place it on the main dining room table. On his way he stumbled and crashed with the dish and sauce.

He looked around for his mother and said, "Mother, I've made three little dishes of your pretty dish. Isn't that nice?"

"What's that?" inquired his mother. "You bad boy! I told you not to touch the dishes!"

Then looking up in a wounded but quizzical manner, he said, "Well, if you don't like it, what are you going to do? Put it back together?"

Yours for having Presidents confine their annual messages to the "state of the Nation" and not to the exigencies of approaching campaigns. JAMES BURDETTE.

Suit For Slander?

Post Office, Wednesday.

MAY a city institute a libel suit—a French city in a German court? Strasbourg—capital of Alsace, tomb of Marshal Saxe, home of foie-gras—contemplates so doing.

"Strasburg, du wunderschone Stadt!" sang the Teutons—when she was theirs. Not any more. Alsatians aver that, unable to swing their autonomist faction toward reentry into the Reich, Herr Hitler's Nazis are calling the province, and particularly its jewel city, naughty names, inflicting pecuniary damage: tourist-damage.

"Not many European towns are less attractive than formerly radiant. Strasbourg. Instead of the order reigning in any place under German administration, there is uproar indescribable; the confusion of traffic is almost as bad as New York . . . Trolleys clanging, steam-engines shrieking, taxis howling, crowds jostling, wandering musicians . . . Only two restaurants serve meals to travelers. After 8 p. m. it is impossible to secure the semblance of a dinner."

The same note on many bugles. So this Column sent its European investigator there.

He arrived on a week-day's night. He plunged into the traffic; there was plenty, but it was more orderly than—well, than Washington's. No steam engines racing up and down the streets, or anywhere else except on the railroad tracks. Trolley motormen resisted the temptation of tramping their bells, save when somebody got in their way. Taxis rode mutely.

"Why don't you toot?"

In Berlin and Boston, they toot for tooting's sake. This Strasbourg chauffeur explained: "Unnecessary tooting is forbidden by the union." No melody in that trade-union's soul!

At a hotel chance-chosen among many, the traveler was resigned to sleep supperless—9:15 p. m. But its restaurant, like all he passed, was crowded—"Can I eat?"—"If you have teeth."

A bit of foie-gras, grown in a Strasbourg goose. Soupe a l'Alsacienne—served snappily, although five hours go to the making. Truite-au-bleu, rushed that afternoon from the high Vosges' streams. A pheasant nestling on sauerkraut cooked in champagne. Salad. The Alsatian wines——

Strasbourg's no place for the girth-reductionist. And it boasts as many insomniac restaurants as there are soda-fountains in Akron.

"So we ought to go to law," said the head-waiter.

One of the complained-of attacks declared: "The Alsatians are dirty by nature and, under French law, give their feelings free vent: shout in the streets, drink beer in the trolley-cars, spit everywhere." So, soon, our investigator went dirt-hunting.

License to spit where you please is the summit of freedom—but those Strasbourg folk behaved like slaves: seven watchful days detected no case of public expectoration. The beer is palatable enough, though not mild enough, to be consumed in nurseries, yet passengers neglected it aboard street-cars. Some nocturnal laughter one heard, since Strasbourg is a good night-town, not saying good-night till it's good-morning. However, that week's only audible shouting was applause for a Washingtonian, who elected to deliver a midnight oration in the Place Kleber.

The superb cathedral, which took four centuries for building, stands as spruce as when its north tower was added in 1435. The merry medieval houses of the Old Town remain as clean as the wide boulevards and big buildings of the New. The parks are pampered darlings.

"So we ought to go to law," said the motorman.

The Board of Health's director rather thought so, too, for there are practically no dirt-diseases in Strasbourg. Tuberculosis killed as many as 31 out of every 10,000 inhabitants during German days: the figure has now fallen to 15.9. Infant mortality and the adult death-rate, formerly 2,350 and 305 per 10,000, are 722 and 140.

* * *

"These attacks say the people are forced to forego the German language for the French."

"Look at the street names on the corners," said the shop clerk. They were there in both tongues—German first. "We ought to go to law about that slander."

"They say that, in the schools, French is taught exclusively."

The head of the Ecole d'Industrie Hoteliere pointed to his study-chart—it assigned more hours to German than to French. "We should go to law."

"But in Cologne they say that if a man speaks German in public in Strasbourg, he's arrested."

The gendarme, to whom our correspondent addressed that remark, didn't hear it. He was condemning, to a friend, the Nazi slanders—in German. "We ought," he was saying, "to go to law about it."

"Strassbourg, Strassbourg, Du wunderschone Stadt!"

Morgan Talks

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Midgets Excluded.

THE case of the people of the United States versus "Who Caused the War," was begun yesterday in a courtroom that fairly dripped with dignity and from which midgets were rigidly excluded. A sizable crowd of the curious, about 50 working newspapermen, and one or two trained seals, including a former United States Senator who must have felt quite at home in the Senate caucus room because he dozed all afternoon, were in attendance. J. P. Morgan and a number of his lieutenants were also present, filled with good humor, and not the least upset by the occasionally caustic questioning of the committee.

It was really all very pleasant. The proceedings went off as expected, with nobody once losing his temper. Mr. Morgan seemed to enjoy his emergence from his usual cloistered existence, smoked happily away, and rumbled like a jolly old grandfather answering a lot of silly questionings by children who would some day grow up and not be such nuisances. Senator Gerald P. Nye, mainly responsible for the presence of the banker, asked most of the questions, but he was ably assisted by Senator Clark, who pronounces "here" as if it was spelled "yere," and Vandenberg, who appeared better dressed than any of the millionaire bankers.

ON the whole, it was a very pleasant session. Mr. Morgan arrived in the usual burst of flashlight bulbs, big and heavy and black. He looked something like his own yacht, the Corsair, ploughing through the entrance to Bar Harbor, piloted by two police boats and followed by a whole fleet of lesser craft. His huge gold watch chain looked as if he were all ready to drop anchor, and the shell-rimmed spectacles were like a life-boat hanging from its davits. George Whitney, his partner, is long and gray, like a Class K racer off Newport. Thomas P. Lamont, the rest of the fleet, looked pretty seaworthy, too.

In case you're interested in the public appearances of these men it can be revealed that Mr. Morgan slouches when he sits, and in a manner which his osteopath would tell him was bad for his spine. Mr. Lamont is always alert, in a slow sort of way, and speaks with an irritating deliberation of tone which never calls for the raising of his voice. He is determined to finish every sentence, and meticulous that they parse, perfectly. Mr. Whitney, who used to head the New York Stock Exchange, sits with his legs crossed, his exceedingly long fingers continually playing at his smooth, thin face. He speaks precisely and never says a word more than the occasion calls for. Messrs. Morgan and Lamont sometimes do.

MR. FRANK VANDERLIP also was present. He was president of the National City Bank back in war days and helped float some of the historical and contentious loans. He does not look the least like a banker. His hair is snowy white and he is stooped. When he speaks it is hesitantly, for he is no longer a young man. He is not crisp, like Whitney, grumbly like Morgan, nor talkative like Lamont. He smokes a straight-stemmed and quite black pipe. It is always going out. Morgan smokes both a pipe, curved and heavy like himself, and cigars in a stubby ivory holder. They smell very nice.

Mr. Morgan is not flanked by his partners, but sits to their left. Next to him is Mr. Lamont, and next to him is Mr. Vanderlip. Mr. Whitney sits behind them, with other members and officials of the House of Morgan, and often leans over to coach Mr. Lamont. Sometimes he writes his senior partner little notes and slips them to him. Mr. Morgan likes to have his little joke, and sometimes makes a nice phrase. Senator Nye asked him about something that was allegedly said in Washington back in 1914. Mr. Morgan couldn't remember it very well. Nye pressed him. "Ahem," said the Mighty Morgan, sort of twinkling all over, "I believe you're going to have great difficulty in tracing a Washington rumor 21 years old."

THE spectators, for the most part, didn't look as if they quite approved of the banking fraternity, although one old man back of the press seats kept chuckling whenever he thought Morgan had scored a point over "that young whippersnapper," meaning Mr. Nye. Chief Investigator Stephen Raushenbush did some of the questioning. He is the man who directed the poring over of some forty truckloads of Morgan memoranda over an eight months' period. He is an intellectual appearing fellow, tall, mild, brown suited, red-tied. Senator Clark, the Missourian, alone of the three inquisitors, talks like a cross examiner. He likes to bark. He didn't bite much yesterday, though.

As the long day's hearing ended Morgan raised his mighty bulk, looking this time more like a big, friendly Newfoundland dog than like his yacht. Mr. Lamont turned to him, smiled.

"Well, they didn't put us in jail today, did they?" he asked his chief.

Increase In Planting Indicates That Vast Bureaucracy Working At Cross Purposes Was Failing To Control Production Regardless Of Court's Finding.

By Hilding Siversen.

Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS, the leading wheat State of the Union, has increased its wheat acreage by 8 per cent over its planting of last year. The whole country has increased its wheat planting by 6.7 per cent.

These figures, which are taken from the figures of the Federal Department of Agriculture, "must be embarrassing to Government officials," said the Kansas City Star recently, going on to point out that these same officials "have spent millions of dollars" to control production. This action of the wheat growers, the Star continued, indicates that the majority prefer to act upon their individual judgment rather than to follow recommendations from Washington.

The present writer has not oftene said, "I told you so," and thereore may be pardoned for calling attention to the fact that this state of affairs is exactly what he has consistently predicted as the probable if not inevitable result of the underlying philosophy of AAA.

A few weeks ago Secretary Wallace made a speech in a Middle Western city in which he attempted to justify the AAA program. He was confronted with the question suggested by the above described situation, namely, as to whether the inveitable result of AAA would not have been to encourage rather than discourage further overproduction. He cut the question off in the middle and skillfully sidestepped by referring to speculative landholding and other irrelevant considerations.

In plain form language, the whole AAA philosophy, together with the thinking of many of the opportunistic Republican politicians, has been what is called "trying to eat your cake and have it." The AAA was an attempt to defeat the law of supply and demand, which has been denounced as being old-fogyish and outdated, but which nevertheless calmly does business at the old stand. It was an attempt to produce high prices for farmers without at the same time inducing farmers to increase their acreage. And it just wouldn't work. The Department of Agriculture's own figures now prove that even before the Supreme Court acted, it wasn't working.

WHEN the price of wheat jumped to $2.25, Kansas farmers immediately raised their acreage to record-breaking figures. The price of wheat didn't go up to $2.25 because the Government was trying to give agriculture a better deal, but because the World War had drained the world supply, already curtailed by loss of manpower.

After the war period there was a drop in the price of wheat and the acreage was reduced from 51,000,000 acres to 45,000,000 acres, and finally to 42,500,000 acres in 1932, under the steady pressure of low prices. The law of supply and demand was working.

Then, with both old parties apparently committed to a policy of artificial maintenance of farm crop prices by various hooks and crooks, and with scarcely anyone daring to call a halt on the fallacious doctrine of "eat-your-cake-and-have-it," the wheat farmers have been encouraged to overproduce again. And when the fallacy has run its course it will be the wheat farmers who will have to pay for the folly, not consumers. In the meantime the opportunistic politicians have had their Roman holiday.

While one member of the Cabinet has been levying processing taxes in an effort to pay a part of the crop benefit payments, another Cabinet officer, Mr. Ickes, has been spending millions of taxpayers' money to reclaim farm lands by irrigation. In his annual report he reveals that 2,837,205 acres of such lands are being put in shape for farm production.

ARE we living in one of Gulliver's fantastic kingdoms, or the cock-eyed realms of Alice's Wonderland? There have been developments which most of us would have considered the grotesque imaginings of fictionists a few years ago. There has been an impetus stampede of Federal spending, useless and often worse than useless, which would be bad enough if the sponsors were consistently driving in one direction. But when they are driving in diametrically opposite directions!

Possibly it should be said to the credit of Mr. Wallace and Mr. Ickes that they have not even tried to reconcile their opposite and conflicting policies. That task has been left to their mentor, President Roosevelt, who has been inclined to settle the whole vexing question by denouncing critics as a "power-seeking minority" or as spokesmen of "entrenched greed."

Despite the fact that the corn-hog referendum carried by large majorities, the farmers of the Middle-west have become increasingly skeptical of the New Deal panaceas. The recently published figures betray the unwelcome fact that the elaborate restrictions of the AAA did not serve to curtail production of wheat. Nor would they have permanently curtailed the production of any other crop, but, on the other hand, would have encouraged still further over-production.

Regardless of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States as to the constitutionality of the AAA, this surviving remnant of the New Deal program of 1935 was headed for the discard. Out of the experiment will come just one good result—a powerful lot of experience and education on the subject of horse-sense agricultural economics—a subject which has been sadly neglected in the Washington curriculum in recent years.

Shoppers Find Prices Stay Up, AAA or No AAA

Minor Cuts in Flour and Corn Products Costs Are Only Changes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 7.—Metropolitan housewives, who had entertained high hopes of an immediate reduction in the cost of living as a result of the upset of AAA, were not so sure today after shopping around at chain and independent retail stores.

Other than a reduction in the wholesale price of flour at Buffalo and lowering of wholesale prices of corn products by a leading refiner in New York, there was little to bolster hopes that there would be any material lessening in pressure on the family pocketbook for the time being, although most trade observers agreed that elimination of the processing tax might eventually find reflection in the retail price structure.

Meanwhile, prices of most items that go into the family budget remained unchanged. The largest grocery chains were watchfully waiting but had done nothing.

Watch Conference.

Metropolitan department stores, many of which are in the midst of the midwinter "white sale" promotions, were sitting tight and watching developments at the conference of the Cotton Textile Institute, called to go over the muddled situation facing manufacturers and retailers. Wholesale trading in cotton goods remained suspended.

Out of the welter of confusion that hung over trading centers, the most definite clue to the riddle was unofficial statements of heads of several of the larger stores that retail prices would not be reduced until present stock, purchased at figures that included processing taxes, were worked off.

Slaps at Packers.

The organization took a slap at meat packers by asserting "monopolistic control" existed and "there is little doubt that the packers will try to retain high meat prices."

Charles W. Burkett, vice president of the Farmers Independence Council of America, declared today the invalidation of the AAA act met with favor from "four out of six" farmers.

Burkett is a farmer at Thornville, Ohio. "I know nothing about the constitutional points involved in the AAA," he said in an interview, "but I did know the act was hateful to more than 4,000,000 farmers who opposed its principles of bureaucracy and regimentation."

Sounds Battle Cry.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, a leading proponent of the outlawed AAA, sounded a battle cry of "tariff for all or tariff for none" today as he began mapping his organization's campaign for a new farm relief measure.

"We don't want to pull American standards down by eliminating industrial tariffs" he said in a statement, "but neither will we stand for special privilege for 'big business' and no privilege for the 50,000,000 people who work and live in rural America.

Chief Executive Declares Debt to Farmers Must Be Paid.

trasted with that held two days after the Supreme Court last May struck down NRA. Then he was grim-faced, apparently resentful of the court's action and for almost two hours explained to the press how the high tribunal had relegated the country back to the "horse and buggy" age. He was sarcastic and bitter and stopped short only of espousing a movement to amend the Constitution.

Smilingly Non-Committal.

Although tired-eyed, as if he had worked late Monday night, the President yesterday was smiling but uncommunicative. He seemed uncertain of his future course. The difference in his demeanor yesterday and last May was significant and was taken as an indication that he now has doubts whether the country would support him in a fight to amend the Constitution.

The President may refer to the Supreme Court decision in his speech at the Jackson Day dinner tonight. Asked if he would, he said he did not know—that he had not yet written the speech. Perhaps he will not, deciding to wait the outcome of the meeting of the farm leaders with Secretary Wallace later in the week.

On Capitol Hill the belief prevailed that some form of taxes would have to be levied—excise taxes, general manufacturers taxes or processing taxes in another form to cover the expenditures necessitated by the invalidation of the AAA and also by the anticipated passage of a bill for immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus.

Congressional leaders seemed willing to support an appropriation bill to pay farmers benefit checks due to them, but they appeared as devoid of ideas for an AAA substitute as the Administration.

Suggestions were made for adoption of the domestic allotment plan, the export debenture scheme and for the purchase or renting of submarginal land by the Federal Government as ways of escape from the objections raised by the Supreme Court to AAA.

But none of these plans appeared as an apt substitute for AAA. Congressional leaders from the farm States were not enthusiastic regarding the Wallace plan for 48 "little AAA's," that is, an agency in each State similar to the AAA, supported by funds from Washington.

Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, introduced a proposed constitutional amendment which would empower Congress to control or adjust agricultural production. But it did not attract widespread attention. Leaders pointed out that under the best auspices it would take at least a year to get a constitutional amendment adopted and that the present situation called for immediate action—but they did not know what.

All those participating in the day's discussions of the AAA situation kept an eye on the action of the commodity markets, knowing that what happens to prices would bring a direct reaction on the farm belt. Confusion, however, still marked price trends. Cotton slumped $1.50 to $2 a bale, but sugar spurted upward the maximum of 25 points permitted in a day's trading, the movement taking place after Secretary Wallace announced the Supreme Court decision had not affected the sugar quotas.

Hog quotations bounded upward as much as $1 a hundredweight in what the Associated Press in a Chicago dispatch described as one of the most spectacular sessions in the history of the stockyards market. The top touched $10.35. Other livestock markets enjoyed rising price levels. Wheat flour prices dropped from 95 cents to $1.25 on a barrel as the processing tax was lifted. Wheat prices were up after a slump Monday.

Observers in Washington remembered President Roosevelt's prediction last May that if the ruling of the Supreme Court then on the NRA were applied to AAA, as it was Monday, the result would be 5-cent cotton and 35-cent wheat.

In his public statement on the Supreme Court decision, made in a brief radio address yesterday, Secretary Wallace expressed the hope that "the immediate effect of the decision on farm prices will not be serious."

Holds Future Uncertain.

"Exactly what the effects will be six or nine months hence," he continued, "it is impossible to say."

Mr. Wallace went on to quote a statement he made in 1934 to the effect that if the processing taxes and acreage control were abolished in 1936, without having something better to take their place, he was afraid it would result "with the ordinary run of weather, in a repetition within a few years of the 1932 situation."

At that time Secretary Wallace wrote that "during the first year or two after the removal of the processing taxes the result might seem quite happy," but that "if no substitute is provided and foreign purchasing power has not been increased by reduced tariffs, I am very much afraid that farm product prices within three years will be down again to a point where they will buy only half as much city products as they should buy in order to give this country a balanced prosperity."

After quoting from this two-year old statement, Secretary Wallace asserted that "it would be premature to say more than this until the wise leaders of Congress and agriculture have had an opportunity to counsel together."

Mr. Wallace previously said in his address that processing tax collections had been stopped, benefit payments cut-off and "the whole machinery of the AAA has necessarily come to a pause."

"For the benefit of those who are still owed money by the Government on contracts entered into before the Supreme Court decision," he said, "the majority leaders of Congress have given assurance that they will do everything in their power to speed the enactment of special appropriations to enable the Government to make good on these contracts.

"On January 6, 1936, Supreme Court held unconstitutional agricultural adjustment taxes as provided for in original act and also in amended act. Withhold collection on all processing tax assessments outstanding on your records. Do not deliver any processing tax refund checks now in your office or in transit to you until further notice."

The Treasury also announced that while no more checks for benefit payments would be mailed out, all such checks now in the hands of farmers or in the mails would be honored and that commercial banks could cash them safely.

In announcing he had invited farm leaders to meet with him Friday and Saturday, Secretary Wallace said the purpose of the meeting was "to discuss plans for agriculture in the light of the Supreme Court decision in the Hoosac Mills case."

Among those invited were Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange; Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; C. E. Huff, president of the National Farmers Union; Charles W. Holman and Fred Brenckman, representing dairy farmers; C. C. Teague, former member of the Federal Farm Board; Frederic P. Lee, Washington attorney, and a large number of so-called "dirt" farmers, influential in their communities, yet not holding office in any of the farm organizations.

Mr. O'Neal and Mr. Taber each asked whether they could bring the full membership of their executive committees with them. The National Co-operative Council previously had scheduled a meeting here next Monday. Delegates to that meeting, officers of the council said, would change their plans in order to be here Friday and Saturday.

Jones Criticizes Decision.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agricultural Committee, said he could not believe that the Supreme Court "means to say that a national tariff is legal and that a national farm program which merely restores the price balance cannot be made legal."

"I cannot believe," he continued, "it means that the cotton farmers and producers of other world market crops must purchase their supplies in a higher-priced, protected market and that there is no constitutional means by which they may be given an even break.

"The greatest fundamental in our system of government is equality in the operation of the laws. I am sure that a constitutional method of putting all our citizens on an equal footing can be found. Certainly, in the interest of simple justice, the effort should be made."

House Democratic Leader William B. Bankhead asserted that friends of the farmer in Congress would not take the Supreme Court decision "lying down" and that Congress would try "mighty hard to find loopholes in the decision." He conceded that his cotton-control act was "out."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, said he did not believe the decision prevented Congress from making a general appropriation "for the purpose of taking care of outstanding contracts or meeting obligations entered into between the citizens and the Government under color of law and in good faith."

He said he believed the decision created a condition which "the Government has the duty and the power to meet by general appropriation" and that "if we have the power, it is certainly our duty to make a reasonable adjustment of these contracts." He said he was "speaking solely of such contracts as are outstanding."

Silence at AAA Meets Queries On End of Jobs

Blissful silence, if not censorship, enshrouded AAA officials yesterday when confronted with queries as to how much longer employes of the invalidated agency may expect to draw pay checks.

A denial by the Treasury Department that the 5,800 workers here and 800 others in the field would be lopped off the pay roll immediately was the only definite announcement to come out of a canvass of the three A's administrative offices, Comptroller General McCarl's office and the Treasury.

John B. Payne, comptroller of the AAA and highest of the officials quartered in the old Postoffice Department Building, where the majority of the unit's employes in Washington work, asked to see the reporter's credentials before he would speak. Then he said he had nothing to say.

Offices of Administrator Chester Davis, the personnel officer and the press section were equally informative. A spokesman for Comptroller General McCarl asserted there would be no news from that quarter until, and if, the Treasury, AAA or some other agency involved sought advice or an opinion.

It was learned that numerous conferences were held yesterday to determine the status of the approximately 6,600 employes and arrive at some means of ending their suspense. No announcement was made, however, on the results of the discussions.

Kidnaped Child Found Safe 2 Hours Later

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 7 (AP).—Three-year-old Ernest Paul May, jr., was found unharmed here tonight two hours after he had been kidnaped by someone who drove away in his father's parked automobile.

The distracted father, an employe of the Lexington Utilities Co., had borrowed an automobile and joined in a general police hunt for the kidnaper. The child's mother was shielded from questioning by authorities. Police said the child was found in the north part of the city, and expressed belief that the automobile thief had headed toward Cincinnati. An intensive patrol of the highways was ordered in the vicinity of Paris and Cynthiana, Ky.

U. S. Citizen Expelled For Criticizing Nazis

Munich, Germany, Jan. 7 (AP).—Capt. Paul Herberger, 61, a naturalized American from Seattle, today was ordered by police to leave Germany by April 1 for criticizing Nazis in private letters.

The letters, sent to Herberger's sister in Sweden, were opened by the Hamburg postoffice.

Today he was notified of his impending expulsion.

Kelly was removed from the bureau January 4, after he became ill. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered his body to the morgue for an autopsy.

$7,500 Reward Is Voted In Liggett Death Hunt

St. Paul, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Minnesota State Legislature moved to spur investigation of the slaying of Walter Liggett, crusading Minneapolis publisher, today by providing $7,500 in rewards and funds for investigation.

Scheduled to be tried in the case January 20 is Isadore "Kid Cann" Blumenfeld, Minneapolis liquor salesman. Authorities are carrying on a broad investigation. The rewards, to be paid at the discretion of district judges, will be deducted from the county's State tax payment.

The house also voted to permit the State's attorney general to use $5,000 from his contingent fund for investigation purposes. The fund will be reimbursed by later legislative action, if necessary.

Diver Unable to Find Baby Hurled Into River

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Neither a diver scanning the mud bottom of East River nor police guards at the cell door of muttering, demented Gussie Friedman had news tonight for the parents of 10-months-old Jackie Horowitz, missing since Sunday.

The diver ended his search for the day, when debris ripped his suit, but he had covered most of the 50-foot depths surrounding the pier from which police conjectured the insane woman may have pushed the child in its carriage. He said he would resume his work in the morning.

Detectives, balked yesterday in every ruse to trick the crazy woman's babbling into yielding a clew as to what she had done with the child, left her undisturbed today.

Culbertson On Bridge

Simple Probability.

A blind opening lead cannot always hit the bull's eye. As I have said before, the supermen of bridge reach double-dummy perfection in this important department only about 80 per cent of the time. Considering the obstacles to be overcome, this is a magnificent record.

On these comparatively rare occasions when they go astray it often is possible for their partners, after the dummy becomes exposed, to rechart the proper course before real damage is done. That was what North did in today's hand.

The bidding.

West	North	East	South
1 spade	Double	Red'ble	2 hearts
Pass	Pass	2 no tr'p	Pass
3 no tr'p [final bid]

The bidding was not particularly bad. North's take-out double was weak, of course, but against vulnerable opponents, and with a conservative partner, not greatly to be criticized.

South, with little information from the bidding, tried to hit his partner's probable suit by opening the eight of clubs. Dummy played the jack and North's king won.

At this point a shift was clearly indicated. Few players, indeed, could fail to recognize the opening lead for a short-suit opening, but even fewer, I fear, would have made the proper return. A heart lead to dummy's weakness was superficially persuasive, but, on close analysis, unsound. In order to made three tricks in hearts, South would have to hold two honors. In diamonds, however, three tricks could be made by finding South with only one specific card—the queen. On this good reasoning. North shifted to the ten of diamonds, and the jig was up. Now no line of play could deprive the defenders of three diamond and two club tricks, for the contract's defeat.

Austrian Official Hints New Shakeup

By the Associated Press.

Salzburg, Austria, Jan. 7.—Federal Propaganda Chief Walter Adam dropped an intimation in an address today that another Austrian government reconstruction soon may be necessary.

The Catholic teachers whom Adam addressed gathered an impression that a still greater concentration of authority was believed essential to overcome opposition to the government by Austrian Nazis and outlawed Socialists.

Adam's hints of cabinet changes gave renewed stimulus to rumors that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg was weary of his responsibility and might retire.

Another report, however, was that Schuschnigg was willing to continue as chancellor if given greater authority, and that in this connection he was considering taking over the ministry of foreign affairs.

The President makes a radio appearance tonight. Sounds familiar, doesn't it? As I recall, he made one last Friday night that is still being talked about with considerable gusto. The occasion tonight is the Jackson Day dinner at the Mayflower. WJSV and WRC carry half an hour of it at 10. That last one caused a New York power company to study its consumption charts and the Republican national chairman to address himself with forthrightness to the air networks. Wonder if this one will pack any fireworks?

Fred Allen celebrates his first anniversary as an amateur impresario tonight, WRC, at 9. In the last year Allen has encountered 50,000 amateurs in search of a microphone. And on the occasion of his anniversary tonight he presents his "graduates"—a "reunion" of the successful alumni of the show. Prominent among the "homecomers" will be Brooks Bowman, Princeton senior who wrote the nationally popular "Love And A Dime" and "East of the Sun," and the Three J's, now with Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book."

Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor at the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, at the Washington Hotel. The guests included the wives of Cabinet and Senate members.

Palms and southern smilax were used as decorations in the sun parlor, where Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Garner received, and the rose room of the hotel, where the luncheon was held. Yellow tea roses in silver vases were on each table.

The hostess wore a charming oriental costume, which was presented to her by friends in Shanghai on her recent trip to the Orient with the Vice President.

Mrs. Roosevelt received Capt. F. G. Chiapparelli Monday afternoon, when he presented her a parchment copy of his translation of "The Prayer of the Horse to His Master," written by Lieut. Marquis Granafei, who was killed in action at Tripoli in the Italian-Turkish War in 1912.

Capt. Chiaparelli, a former royal Italian army officer and member of the Italian Military Mission to the United States from 1915 to 1919, now makes his home at the Racquet Club.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE MAN who doesn't fear to express himself in shirts will glory in the midst of gayly colored models shown in a downtown store. Here, gentlemen you'll find models that fulfill your dreams of sartorial splendor.

Now if you're inclined to be a conservative "white shirt black tie" man, (and carry an umbrella maybe) you won't like these shirts a bit. But, ahem, if you're not averse to a little gaiety in your clothes, and a prince of Wales-ish touch here and there, you're duty bound to take a peep at the magnificent specimens exhibited in this local store. Sporty enough to make a he man out of Mr. Milquetoast is that flamboyant gingham plaid sport shirt fashioned with long sport barrel sleeves in the newest, positively the newest color combinations, sirs.

Phooey, say some of you, we can't afford sport clothes when we only have one day a week of leisure. Ahoy, though. Here's a sport shirt you can afford without even having to pinch on cigarettes. Its only $1.50, you see.

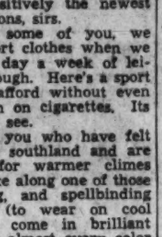
But those of you who have felt the call of the southland and are packing now for warmer climes simply must take along one of those dashing, daring, and spellbinding woolen shirts (to wear on cool evenings) that come in brilliant plaids. There's almost every color combination.

Chair Cushions.

THERE are just lots of little things in the stores that we see so often we pass with never a thought. And—there are hundreds of little details around the house that one never quite attends to. Coming under both heads are the comfy chair cushions shown in the notions department of a downtown store. These are blessings in disguise. One gets along for so many years without them that we can't appreciate what little boons they are. But splurge! Take your 29 cents and buy one! One trial and you'll be back for more. They're just the right size for any ordinary kitchen or breakfast room chair. You'll find them in glazed chintz of numerous colors and designs.

Novelty Corks.

ONE downtown store is seeing to it that you dress your wine and liquor bottles in festive attire by offering some of the quaintest, cutest corks you've ever seen. These are mounted with wooden figures hand carved representing a wide variety of funny faces. The corks themselves are long and graduating so that they fit almost any type of bottle. And you may rest assured the bottle is doubly attractive when it's plus one of these laughable novelty corks.



Not one among these gadgets that isn't a little work of art, so you'll have a surprise when you see the price tags and discover how modest their price.

Candlelight Charm.

CANDLELIGHT always has charm. In the evenings it's fun to sit in front of your open fire, with the lights out and only the candles burning on the mantel.

An especially attractive candelabra is the one shown in a downtown store. It consists of a wrought iron frame supporting a glass "chimney" suggestive of the old oil lamp days. The candle fits inside the chimney and burns with a bright flame protected from threatening drafts.

Perfume Dolls.

IT'S MORE fun than ever to play with paper dolls now that they've become the type that's shown in a downtown store. They are pretty little dolls dressed lavishly in crepe paper splendor. Under each arm they carry a small vial of perfume, in violet, gardenia, chypre, lilac or trailing arbutus fragrance.

Midget Purses.

LOTS and lots of women prefer small evening purses which they can carry conveniently in their hand even on the dance floor. Catering to such tastes a local store is displaying some delightful purses, small pouch style, and unusually roomy for their midget size.

Virginia Jurist

MISS ANNA HEDRICK.

Virginia Portia Warns Women To Concentrate

Anna Hedrick, Successful Lawyer, Gives Rules to Meet Competition.

WHEN PORTIA became a judge and decided the famous pound-of-flesh case, she started something.

Since Shakespeare introduced her, countless women have become barristers and aspired to the bench, but comparatively few realized their ambition along the latter line.

Miss Anna Hedrick, lawyer in Clarendon, Va., was one feminine legal adviser who had her eyes on an entirely different goal. Quietly following her profession since 1930, when she graduated from George Washington University Law School, she was too busy building up her legal practice to think about much else. Yet last summer, when her brother, Judge B. M. Hedrick of the police and circuit courts of Arlington County, was on his vacation, she substituted for him in court and became the first woman judge in Arlington County, and one of the first in all Virginia.

Her experience in that capacity coupled with her career thus far as a lawyer in private practice has convinced her, "Women can succeed in so-called masculine professions today if they will concentrate on their work and cease to notice whether people discriminate against them merely because they are women."

In this connection she said she had never bothered about whether she aroused any resentment in trying to establish herself in a profession where men were in the majority. "I realize, of course, that men have some advantage in that persons needing legal advice often turn to lawyers with big names—and most of those are men, but I've also discovered some persons really prefer women, particularly for detailed work, such as real estate projects.

Now and then domestic relationship cases—divorce cases, particularly—come my way, too. I can't complain of being discriminated against in any respect. I belong to the same bar association as men lawyers in Arlington County; I noticed no resentment at all when I substituted for my brother in court, and at no time has any pressure been brought to bear toward persuading me to give up my profession."

In view of all this, Miss Hedrick feels women in any profession have "a better chance for success in public life if they forego the women's attitude in regard to male competition, tend to their own business, forget they are women and devote their entire attention to the job at hand."

Night Clubs Exhibit New Flower Wear

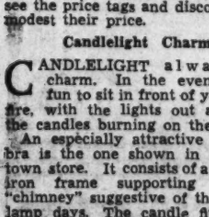
PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE STILL CHERISH a sentimental attachment for the old-time plate rail—because we love pretty plates. However, the open-shelf cupboard or dresser in style today is an even nicer way of bringing interesting porcelains and pottery into the decorative picture.



And so we understand perfectly the idea one reader has about building an informal dining room around some lovely, sunny, yellow Italian pottery she has. What, she asks, would we suggest for walls, rug and curtains—to say nothing of furniture in a kindred spirit? • • • In the first place we should have ourself a very grand time matching colors with that sunny pottery. Then we should probably settle on walls of aquamarine blue, a carpet in a deeper tone of greenish blue and furniture in a provincial style of walnut—with an open-face dresser-cabinet with shelves for the pottery. At the windows—yellow again in a bright, sheer fabric for the glass curtains and for draperies a flower garden chintz pattern. Still another possibility for this pottery would be to use white walls and white furniture—with an open-face cupboard for the pottery, of course. Then, have a soft, light green carpet, white glass curtains and green and white chintz draperies.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's Bulletin, "Things to Know About China Ware." It answers the questions that puzzle about the difference between porcelain and pottery and other confusing matters on that subject.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I was much interested in Helen Johns' letter published in your column January 3 asking readers' sentiments on the moot subject of birth control. I will try to set forth my opinions. I'm entirely in accord with Miss Johns' belief that there is nothing immoral in birth control. Indeed, I believe having too many children is the moral crime against nature, jeopardizing the mother's health as well as the child's. In many instances it is an economic crime when families are so large that members are denied the necessities of life, and even a social crime when the mother is deprived of sufficient leisure properly to divide her time among those who have a rightful claim upon it. . . . What morality is served in allowing mothers to ruin their health, in permitting fathers to break down from overwork and worry, and in delivering children into a stunted existence?

I don't believe couples should marry with the deliberate intention not to have children; that is neither moral nor natural, for in my opinion children are the inevitable by-product of deep, lasting, mutual heterosexual love and respect, but when married love is subjected to too great strain in the way of overly large families, it can and often does evaporate. Neither do I believe in restricting one's family to only one child—for I was an only child and I realize it places upon the individual almost insurmountable psychological handicaps. Married couples in a financial position favorable for rearing several children should have several children, but intelligently spaced so as to preserve the mother's health as well as the children's.

I am not talking through my hat, for I am married, my husband makes $70 a month, we live in a rented home and we have a 21-months-old child. We are hard pressed to obtain the necessities of life, but we manage without asking help. Yet I realize fully another child now would be an intolerable financial burden, particularly so since my husband is not absolutely certain of his work and since there is no prospect of his getting any appreciable salary increase. He is young and this is the first regular work he has had since we married. He has had two years' college study, wants to be an engineer and has had no experience in the business world except for a few jobs in fields which offered no advancement.

• • • •

Although both of us want another child, and feel the sooner the better, we are convinced we cannot invite such a responsibility in justice to ourselves or to our first-born, until financial conditions improve. Despite opinions expressed to the contrary, steady jobs paying a family-man's wage are almost impossible to find nowadays, unless one is a college graduate with a successful record of business experience. Should a man with a wife and child, making barely enough to support them, hoping to finish his education in order to make a success in life, just trust to luck that he will be able to provide and go ahead having as many children as Nature will permit? I say no!

• • • •

We hope to have three or four children eventually, but we want, when that time comes, to be in a position to give them a happy childhood, to assist them in getting college educations (even though they may have to help themselves in part) to provide them good food for sufficient growth, and to have enough funds to give them the kind of home and the sort of clothing a child must have if he is to grow up with a feeling of social security. And because we want these things for our children, we are putting off having another child for at least a couple of years.

Sincerely yours, M. G.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: In your column of January 3 I notice Helen Johns asks for a discussion of birth control . . It might be well for women to face the fact that they have always been and are today definitely dominated by man and his ideas.

• • • •

Miss Johns sees the point clearly. Woman must produce in quantity so her sons can end their lives on bloody battlefields. . . . But women must not forget they are the molders as well as the mothers of men, and that their greatest power will only become effective as they recognize and protect it. It is a startling fact that man's solution for every sociological problem seems to lean mostly to the repressive side.

• • • •

We have all heard the cry that women should be taken out of business to make room for men. We have even passed laws within recent years which specify that a man and his wife may not both be employed by our government. Yet history proves no problem has ever yet been been solved by holding back the forces of progress.

R. G. K.

DEAR M. G and R. G. K.: almost coincident with publication of Miss Johns' letter asking "views of readers on the vital subject of birth control," a symposium of such opinions appeared in the "Letters to The Editor" column on this newspaper's editorial page. In order to avoid duplication of effort, therefore, I am asking other readers of this column who have something to say on the subject to address such letters to the Editor of The Post. Letters discussing birth control which have already arrived at this desk will be published in this column as space permits.

Author Reveals Tricks of Trade To Clubwomen

W. E. Barrett Tells Writers' Group How to Start Stories for Sale.

TALKING TO THE newly organized writers' group of the American Association of University Women, Mr. William E. Barrett, professional writer, yesterday explained how one incident can be developed into three different plots—one suitable for a pulp paper magazine, another for a slick-paper periodical and another for a publication of the "quality" group.

"It may surprise you that editors of three different types of magazines would buy stories based on the same incidents," he said, "but the trick in selling to each market depends largely on the way the plot is worked out."

Definite Formula.

He further explained there is a definite formula to be followed in developing plots for all magazines, except those of the experimental group. "Making a story salable is chiefly a matter of knowing fiction formulas well enough to enable you to slant your story toward the market you want to hit," he said.

Stipulating requirements for stories acceptable for pulp magazines, he pointed out, "the hero and heroine should be young. Incidents surrounding them must be packed with suspense and action and must work toward a clearly defined climax. The principal characters in slick-paper publications are generally more sophisticated and more given to clever conversation, but action written around them is just as surely based on a definite, though somewhat different, formula."

Older Characters.

Characters in the quality magazines can be older, he continued. "What they do is not so important as what they think, and what happens to them concerns the reader far less than the change taking place in their outlook on life."

Mr. Barrett's own experience as a writer is proof enough he is a master of formulas governing current magazine markets. One of the most prolific writers in Washington, he often sells more than 50,000 words a month and is the author of more than 600 published stories, including a number of serials.

The group of women to whom Mr. Barrett talked yesterday is composed of members actviely interested in the writing of fiction. Mrs. O. R. Rand, author of several published stories and feature articles, is chairman.

Type, Not the Cost, Is Held Uppermost In Buying Clothes

"Women should watch for suitability, not cost, in clothes," Lady Mendl told the Associated Press. "If they are exotic types, they should wear exotic appearing dresses. If they are quiet and mouselike, their apparel should reflect that personality. But they should never affect the type of clothes that makes every one stare when they enter a restaurant.

"Age, taste, climate and circumstances blend into what I call a 'suitable' ensemble. Many women appear ridiculous buying three dresses where one would do. Cost is a minor matter."

Mrs. Hepburn Firm Believer In Work Theory

Mother of Noted Star Says All Women Should Have Outside Interests.

By Dudley Harmon.

ONE SUMMER, in a Connecticut village by the sea, five children, of which the writer was one, amused themselves by playing at amateur theatricals in an old and musty barn. The plays, which they wrote themselves, were of the most blood curdling sort, in which the heroine was always rescued in the nick of time from the machinations of a mustachioed villain by a pink cheeked hero dressed up in velvet breeches.

That summer, all five children swore that when they were grown up, which to them meant a magic time when they could do exactly as they pleased, they would be actors and actresses. Now, ten years have passed. The children are all grown up, but only one has fulfilled her childhood ambition. Her name is Katherine Hepburn.

Mother Is Reticent.

Yesterday Katherine Hepburn's mother came to Washington to address the Washington branch of the national committee on Federal legislation for birth control. The writer saw Mrs. Hepburn a little over a year ago in the same seaside resort, at which time the actress' mother regaled her ears with exciting tales of Katherine's life in Hollywood.

No, she didn't mix much with the other stars, she disliked parties. Yes, she had quite a struggle before she got to Hollywood, and had wandered desolately from one New York theatrical agency to another in search of work. She enjoyed her success chiefly because it meant she could give others what they wanted. Why, that very morning she had written her mother offering to give the latter a trip to Russia, which Mrs. Hepburn declined until Katherine saved her first $100,000.

It was with the hope of hearing more news of the glamorous Katherine that the writer saw Mrs. Hepburn again yesterday. But her hopes were disappointed. Now that she has become a member of the curious, prying, journalist tribe, the writer can no longer get Mrs. Hepburn to say anything about her famous daughter.

Believes in Work.

"I'm sorry to have to refuse to talk about Katherine," said Mrs. Hepburn, "but I'm awfully glad to see you've got a job in Washington. I'm a firm believer in the theory that women ought to work.

"Whether they are rich or poor makes no difference. In our enlightened times household machinery has so far taken the place of hand labor that there's really very little left for women to do in the home. Left to themselves, with no interests, they soon grow neurotic. Let them find some job, some interest, outside themselves, whether it be selling gloves over the counter or fighting for new sewer pipes in their neighborhood.

Mrs. Hepburn herself is an outstanding example of the woman who has succeeded in finding interests outside the home. She has six children, and her house is one of the most beautifully appointed and well managed in Hartford. She is an excellent golf player, does all sorts of fancy dives, and, as the writer knows from her own experience, is a formidable opponent at the bridge table.

To her well-dressed audience yesterday, Mrs. Hepburn said confidently that she expects the birth control bill in which she is interested to go through Congress this year.

Under the provisions of this bill, information on methods of contraception will be allowed to go through the mails. At the present moment it is illegal to disseminate such information in this way.

"The days of the stork and cabbage theory is over," said Mrs. Hepburn yesterday. "Mothers should come right out and explain facts of this sort to their children as scientifically and with as little sentimentalizing as possible. I did thus with mine, and have never regretted it."

Mrs. Hepburn is a Bryn Mawr graduate, unusually handsome, and dresses with great chic.

Parents Urged To Allow Child To Dress Self

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"I CAN put on my shoes, mother. Please let me try." "No, Tommy, you can never do up the laces, and, besides, it would take too long even if you did manage to do it."

Most children are to some extent handicapped by their parents' unwillingness to let them try things even if they seem beyond their ability. Sometimes the excuse given is that it takes too long. The sun will be gone before Tommy gets out if he is allowed to try to put on his shoes or button his shirt; or the household chores will be delayed until noon. Many a mother frankly grows impatient at the child's fumbling attempts to do something which she could accomplish in half the time and with a tenth of the energy.

It is a great mistake to thwart the child's first attempts to help himself. Perhaps it will take him half the morning to put on his shoes, and in the end he may not succeed. But his efforts should be encouraged and at first even unobtrusively helped here and there, until he is able to accomplish the feat.

What does the loss of a walk or two matter compared with the growing independence of the child who feels able to dress himself? If there is household work to be done he can be left to finish his dressing alone while mother makes the bed or washes the dishes. If the mother is made nervous by his ineffectuality and awkwardness, she can tidy the room or take up the morning paper and so avoid the strain of watching his trial and error methods.

The new-born baby is already struggling for independence. The sooner this is realized and the baby helped to achieve his purpose, which is, after all, essential to his future being, the better for both parents and child.

Steaks, Roasts Now Available At Low Prices

By Dorothea Duncan.

A TOUR of some of the Washington grocery stores this week revealed a pleasant surprise. Beef, delicious juicy steaks, porterhouse, sirloin and round—both top and bottom—pot roasts, chuck, boullion and sirloin tip are at a lower price than they have been for many a week.

Today is the day then to serve a thick, juicy steak, a delicious Swiss steak flavored with onions, bay leaf and tomato sauce, or a big, beautifully browned pot roast with vegetables.

Swiss Steak.

2 pounds of round steak cut 2½ inches thick
½ cup flour
2 tablespoons fat
1 bay leaf, optional
Few slices onion
Salt and pepper
½ green pepper chopped fine
1 cup water
1 cup strained tomatoes.

Season the flour with salt and pepper and pound it into the meat with a wooden potato masher or the edge of a heavy plate. Heat the fat and brown the meat in it. Add the onions, green pepper, boiling water, tomato and bay leaf, if desired. Cover closely. Simmer 2 hours. This may be cooked in a casserole in the oven. It would then be braised. Use a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) if meat is braised. Other vegetables may be added if desired.

Old-Fashioned Girl Returns to Favor Survey Discloses

The majority of 35 seniors in one class say they will pick the type that dad loved for their life companions.

Only one man said that "good looks" would determine his choice of a wife, while 11 said that "moral character" would influence them most. Wealth did not seem to matter much. One mentioned it as a last consideration.

College women did not seem to be in such demand as educators would like to believe in this vote. There were no votes registered for college women as first in importance, none for second or third, and only one for fourth place. A definite distinction was made between "intelligence and education." The vote showed the seniors considered intelligence necessary for their wives, while not admitting that a college girl and a smart girl were identical.

Weak Muscles Often Cause Foot Trouble

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE are bushels, acres, millions of feet. Stand on the street for a few minutes some day and watch the feet go by—just the feet, mind you! You will probably not be arrested if your period of observation is brief.

Here they come—some drag by slowly; heart disease, probably. Other steps are quick and jerky, still others steady—springy. Here is one limping (what's the trouble—corns, bunions, weakened arches?) Pigeontoed walkers, straight walkers, and splayfoot walkers—all pass. There goes a jocky; here comes a soldier. A seemingly endless tramp, tramp of normal feet? Not so, unfortunately, for rare is the man or woman with perfect feet.

Nevertheless, the feet serve their owners in a very remarkable way. They will stand a tremendous amount of strain, sustain the weight of the body, and regulate the forward, balancing motion used in walking. Yet they may weaken or become deformed, with the result that pain is present even when the feet are not bearing weight.

The bones of the foot are held together by important ligaments and muscles, and the shape of the foot depends upon the relationship of these structures. If the muscles become weakened ligaments will stretch and the natural contour is lost. Bones may press one against another, resulting in great distress.

Flatfoot is not always painful, although it may be. By flatness we mean loss of the normal curve of the longitudinal arch. The foot of a ballet dancer is nearly always flat, when standing, and these graceful persons rarely complain of painful feet. Training has lengthened the ligaments, but the muscles are in excellent tone and as such hold the bones apart.

Most feet may be kept in working order by means of a few simple exercises. These consist in turning the feet inward and grasping objects with the toes. Regular practice will be required until marbles and pencils can be lifted from the floor with the toes. Exercises such as rising on tiptoes and standing on the outer borders of the feet are helpful. The patient is then instructed to walk on the outside of the feet with the toes turned in and again on tiptoe. When sitting he should cross his ankles so that the feet are turned in.

Supports are often of great help, particularly pads that are glued to an inner sole. These are known as metatarsal pads and are designed to raise the heads of the metatarsal bones, the edges of the pads fitting just back of the ball of the foot.

Walter Keith Weds Daughter Of Atterburys

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 7—The marriage of Mr. Walter Winchester Keith and Mrs. Elizabeth Atterbury Connelly at a quiet ceremony in the Belvedere Hotel yesterday was announced today by Mr. Keith's mother, Mrs. Walter Woodruff Keith, who makes her home at the hotel.

Both the bride and bridegroom are socially prominent throughout the country. The former Mrs. Connelly is the daughter of Mrs. W. W. Atterbury of Radnor, Pa., and the late General Atterbury, former president of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Mr. Keith was divorced last summer from his second wife, Mrs. Edith McCormick McAdoo Keith. He had first married Miss Florence Montgomery, of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1923, and was divorced eight years later.

Only Mr. Keith's mother and her brother, Mr. George Brown, attended the ceremony yesterday afternoon. The wedding was a quiet one, Mr. Keith's mother explained, because of the recent death of General Atterbury. Immediately after the wedding the couple left for Camden, S. C.

The bride and bridegroom will make their home in Philadelphia and on Mr. Keith's plantation near Georgetown, S. C.

Mr. Keith is a member of the socially prominent Brown family of Maryland and Virginia and is well known in society and hunting circles in Baltimore. He is a member of the Maryland Club, the Green Spring Valley Hunt Club, the Elkridge Hounds and the Polo Club.

Women Urged to Make Use Of Leap Year Opportunities

Husband-Hunter Has Working List of 15,000,000 Single Men, University of Chicago Professor Advises After Study.

By the United Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Women who plan to take advantage of leap year should do so at once, and not put off until 1940 what can be done in 1936, Prof. E. W. Burgess, of the University of Chicago sociology department, warned tonight.

The American woman who has decided to propose, he pointed out, now has a working list of nearly 15,000,000 single men, a margin of more than 3,000,000 over the number of unmarried women. But this margin is decreasing and will be considerably lower by 1940, according to Prof. Burgess.

"Because of immigration," Prof. Burges explained, "America has always had a surplus of men. But restricted quotas tend to cut down this surplus sharply."

Prompt Action.

In addition to advising prompt action, Prof. Burgess suggested the best thing a woman looking for a husband could do would be to pick a man between 30 and 35, as this is the age group in which men outnumber women most heavily.

A recent survey of factors making for the happy choice of a mate caused Prof. Burgess to warn the husband-seeking woman to select a man whose educational background was approximately the same as her own.

"The more education," he said, "the more care in selecting a mate, and the greater happiness.

"Don't marry a man who has no job, even if you can support him in the style to which he is accustomed, because the survey showed the unhappiest kind of husband was the one who had no job."

Large Bank Account.

A large bank account, however, is not the key to marital happiness, he said. The survey showed the contentment of married persons bears almost no relation to the size of the family pay check.

"This is a good year for matrimony all around," Prof. Burgess observed. "Despite conflicting opinions, there is a general attitude of economic hopefulness. Many men and women have come to the conclusion there is no use delaying marriage for increased income, as indicated by the great increase in marriages last year."

Among the 15,000,000 eligibles there are such world-famous bachelors as James and Woolworth Donoghue, heirs to the 5-and-10-cent store millions; Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, New York playboy; Jarvin Hunt, jr., and Arthur Meeker, jr., Chicago socialites, and for Hollywood fans Ronald Colman and William Powell.

And for the girls who get about a good deal, there's still the top of the list—Edward, Prince of Wales.

Fashionable Women Wear Black in Town

Princess, Countess, Following Paris Custom.

PARIS (U.P.).—Two of Paris' best dressed women are the Princess Nicholas of Greece, mother of the Duchess of Kent, and the Countess de Salverte. Both follow the Parisian custom of dressing in black for town wear.

Italian Women Progressing, Stylist Says

Designers Set Own Styles, Declares Mrs. Brock Pemberton.

"WHATEVER you may think of Mussolini, there is no doubt about the fact that under his dictatorship Italian women have made remarkable strides in the last few years," declares Mrs. Margaret Pemberton, who recently returned from an extended tour of Italy. Mrs. Pemberton is the wife of Brock Pemberton, whose play, "Personal Appearance," is playing in Washington this week. She is a clothing stylist and her recent trip abroad was mainly for the purpose of attending fashion shows and finding out what well-dressed women would be wearing this winter.

"I was amazed," she says, "to find that the Italian designers displayed more originality than the designers of any other country. Months before the Paris showings I saw fashions in Italy that were later copied by both French and German couturiers. The military trend in styles came direct from Italy. I saw there the long velvet capes, that are so popular now for evening wear, some time before they were shown in Paris. All the lovely jewel colors being worn this season originated in Italy. They took the colors from old paintings.

"Mussolini directed Italian designers to set their own styles and they have done it. They are even using their own materials. England, as we all know, is famous for her tweeds but in Capri I saw remarkably beautiful tweeds. Some of the best-dressed women in the world are found in Rome."

Not alone in fashion, however, are the women of Italy progressing, Mrs. Pemberton discovered. "They are organizing themselves much as American women have done in the way of women's clubs similar to ours. Lectures and many social activities are arranged and they discuss many topics of current interest. I was amazed to attend one lecture, where the main topic was birth control. Imagine that in Fascist Italy!"

Temperament, Perfume Held Liability to Singers

Gladys Swarthout, of Metropolitan Opera fame and more recently of Hollywood and the movies, warns that temperament and perfume are liabilities for the professional singer. She said she made these discoveries long before she came to Hollywood.

"Perfume," Miss Swarthout said, "irritates the vocal cords and temperament, if it is indulged to any degree, often results in a nervous breakdown for a vocalist.

"Singing and screen work are businesses like everything else, but they are nerve-wracking.

G. W. Athlete, Shot by Thug, Fights to Live

Shelton's Chances Fair; Bullet Is Removed From Abdomen.

Less than eight hours after Steve Shelton, George Washington University football player was shot and wounded seriously during a filling station holdup Monday night, a colored man was arrested by Fourth Precinct police late yesterday and identified as the gunman.

Fourth Precinct detectives arrested the suspect shortly after 4 a. m. yesterday, in a squalid shack near the waterfront. As soon as Shelton's condition permitted, the suspect was taken to his bedside. The G. W. student, who worked a night shift at the filling station, identified his assailant without hesitation, police reported.

Identified by Witness.

An eyewitness, who saw the gunman flee after shooting Shelton, also identified him, police said. The colored man, giving his name as Richard Mitchell, 27, is held on a technical charge of investigation.

Two other colored men are being held on investigation charges in connection with the case, police said. They are Stonewall Jackson, 22, of the 500 block of Twentieth street northwest, and Stephen Carrington, 23, of the 600 block of H street southwest.

Shelton, 25 and husky, was working at the station, 246 Fourth street southwest, shortly after 8 p. m. Monday. The robber entered, drew a revolver and demanded money. Shelton, however, refused to comply with the demand and tackled the man.

Battled With Assailant.

During a scuffle, the gunman fired a shot which went wild. Shelton picked him bodily from the floor and hurled him against a wall. Shelton lost his footing and fell. The robber fired again. The bullet entered Shelton's abdomen and lodged in his right thigh.

Police officials yesterday praised the five policemen who traced and apprehended Mitchell. The policemen were Walter Perry, Bernard Day, jr., J. F. Best, J. M. Bell and I. J. Moore.

Fetchit 'Condescends' To Take Back $4,500

Stepin Fetchit, slow-moving, slow-talking Negro actor, lost a wallet containing $4,500 Saturday morning, but he was too lethargic to do anything about it, so the story goes.

Kenneth Windham, milk-truck driver of Laytonville, Md., found the wallet outside of Thompson's Dairy in the 2000 block Eleventh street northwest. He called Retchit, and got a shock when the actor said he would receive the wallet if Windham would bring it to him. He gave Windham a $50 reward.

Dinner Tables In Crime Study Half Sold Out

Mounting Interest Shown in Reservations, Messages.

Mounting interest in the dinner meeting January 16 when Capital citizenry will discuss the establishment of a crime commission here was reflected yesterday by the volume of reservations and the receipt of commendatory letters and telegrams.

As a result of a surge of ticket applications by individuals and groups, more than half of the tables which will be available for the Hotel Mayflower dinner discussion have been reserved. The meeting was announced Monday by a citizens committee of 51, headed by Eugene Meyer.

Congratulaotry messages were received yesterday by the committee from Charles K. Arter, president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce; Herbert R. O'Conor, Attorney General of Maryland; J. Bernard Wells, State's Attorney of Baltimore City, and others.

Effect At Cleveland.

"As president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, which has for the last 14 years been affiliated with and sponsored the Cleveland Association of Criminal Justice, I note with pleasure that citizeus of Washington are considering establishment of a similar crime commission," telegraphed Arter.

"The Cleveland association has been effective in suppression of crime, punishment of criminals and protection of life and property in thi scommunity. I am confident that the establishment of a similar organization in Washington will produce the same gratifying results."

Netwon D. Baker, wartime Secretary of War and president of the Cleveland association, is to be the principal speaker at the meeting next week, which was called not to forward plans for creation of a commission, but to discuss the plan's general feasibility.

Baltimore's crime problems have been simplified since the organization of its criminal justice commission, stated O'Conor.

"The commission has been of appreciable good to our community," he said. "It has proven to be a fact finding body. Its constructive criticism of those agencies charged with the administration of criminal justice has been accepted by the public as emanating from an impartial source."

The Baltimore body "has been most helpful to all the branches of law enforcement," wrote Wells, successor to O'Conor as State's attorney of Baltimore City.

James M. Hepbron, managing director of the Baltimore commission, will be one of the speakers at the coming meeting here. Justin Miller, chairman of the attorney general's advisory committee on crime, also is scheduled to address the gathering.

Reservations for the dinner may be made at committee headquarters, 1337 E street northwest, or by telephone, National 4200. The subscription price is $3.

Fake 'Doc'

Police Warn Against $2 Fee Collector.

If a smooth-looking man about 60 years old and wearing silver-rim-West", of the Providence Hospital med glasses who says he is "Dr. Clinic calls to diagnose your illness, don't swallow any of his pills. And don't let him use any sharp instruments or, above all, collect a fee.

The above warning was issued yesterday by the Fifth Precinct Police following a complaint from James A. Alexander, 668 B street southeast, who said the man came to diagnose his wife's illness and left with a $2 fee.

Alexander, becoming suspicious, asked the hospital and discovered there was no such person as "Dr. West" on their staff. Other complaints led police to believe this man had obtained a list of those being treated at Providence Hospital and, posing as a doctor, was paying calls and collecting fees.

Dr. E. B. McKinley, of G. W. U., Named to Research in Fevers.

Two wars are raging in Ethiopia, according to Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of George Washington University Medical School, whose appointment as a member of the board of trustees of the newly formed American Foundation of Tropical Medicine was announced yesterday.

In one of these wars the well-trained Italians fight the wild tribesmen of Emperor Haile Selassie. In the other countless millions of tropical disease germs perpetually attack the Italians.

"If anything defeats Italy in her colonial adventure," asserted Dr. McKinley yesterday, "it will be insidious tropical disease."

Many Fevers Prevalent.

Ethiopia, Dr. McKinley recalled yesterday, as he puffed his pipe, is a center of tropical diseases. Prevalent in the Lion of Judah's empire are malaria, blackwater fever, relapsing fever, typhus, leprosy, elephantiasis, malnutrition and a dozen other highly dangerous ills.

Dr. MKinley is a specialist in this field. Before he came to George Washington he had wide experience in the Philippines and in Puerto Rico.

The foundation which Dr. McKinley will serve is an outgrowth of the American Academy of Tropical Medicine, and it is expected to be responsible for many new advances in its field. Funds available from private and commercial sources will be devoted to the practical aspects of the control of tropical diseases.

Open Route to Markets.

"More and more Americans must go into the tropics for new markets," asserted Dr. McKinley yesterday.

"Our trade must flourish there—where the teeming millions are. When we check and eliminate tropical diseases, we increase the earning capacities and buying powers of these peoples. Commerce looks south."

Tropical diseases are not uncommon in Washington, according to Dr. McKinley.

Three painters and a sculptor were awarded first prizes for their work entered in the forty-fifth annual exhibition of the Society of Washington Artists by a jury of awards yesterday.

The landscape prize was won by Robert Franklin Gates for his painting, "Mrs. Bowman's Chickens." It was Gates who took the Andrew W. Mellon first prize of $100 in the first annual independent art exhibition sponsored by The Washington Post and the District Federation of Women's Clubs last spring.

Honorable mention was given for: Landscape, Roger M. Rittase for his "Airplane Swing;" still life, Elizabeth Roberts for her "Vegetables," and sculpture, Florence Foss for her "Playing Cats."

The exhibition, which is to be at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, will open Sunday, continuing through February 3.

The jury of awards is composed of N. C. Wyeth, mural painter; Richard Lahey, director of the School of the Corcoran Gallery of Art; Jerry Farnsworth and Albert Laessle, sculptor.

The officers of the Society of Washington Artists are Charles Bittinger, president; Robert C. Motley, vice president; Elizabeth Graves, treasurer, and Lucia C. Hollerith, secretary.

Child, 3, Lost During Advent Of Brother, Creates Problem

Question Is Whether She Stays in City Home or Goes to Father.

The immediate fate of 3-year-old Doris Phillips—whether she is to remain in the Receiving Home or be turned over to her father—was in the hands of the Woman's Bureau and the child's mother last night.

A tearful Doris was found wandering through a house in the 200 block of E street northwest Monday night by Policeman John Dooley, who had responded to a call from the occupants. They did not know her name or where she came from, so the girl was "booked" at the First Precinct Station and promptly transferred to the Receiving Home.

For hours yesterday police and home attendants tried to learn the child's identity—all she said was "I want my mommy." Then the father, Eugene T. Phillips, presented himself to police and the fog began to lift.

It seems that the Phillips family lives in the 200 block of Indiana avenue northwest. The father works on a relief project. Mrs. Phillips was taken to Gallinger Hospital Saturday. It's a boy.

At news of the arrival, the 43-year-old father began to celebrate, according to Policewoman Ruby Brandt, who is investigating the case. Monday night he took Doris to visit friends at the E street addres. The friends, it developed yesterday, had moved. But Doris stayed on—alone. That's where the police came in.

The law was ready to deliver the child to her father yesterday when Mrs. Phillips, who had been located by Mrs. Brandt through information given by the husband, asked that the child be kept at the Receiving Home until she has consulted with Phillips and Policewoman Brandt.

As for Doris, she just cries "for my mommy." She doesn't know she has become a sitser.

D. C. Will Ask 'Cure Farm' For Drinkers

Legislation Is Ordered for Presentation to Congress.

Under the plan discussed, the "patient" would be given an indeterminate sentence so that he could receive treatment.

The conference, in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, sponsor of the idea, was attended by the Commissioner, Col. Dan I Sultan, Engineer Commissioner; Judge Gus A. Schuldt, presiding justice of the police court; Wilbur H. La Roe, jr., chairman of the Parole Board, George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Elwood Street, director of public welfare, and E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel.

Legislation is to be drafted by Mr. Prettyman and, upon approval by the Commissioners, is to be sent to Congress.

Plan $200,000 Hospital.

The measure will provide for an appropriation of $200,000 for construction of the hospital, estimated to care for 200 patients. To that hospital, which is to be located on a hill near Occoquan, where the District Workhouse is located, would be sent confirmed alcoholics for indefinite periods.

One of the great fears the plans sponsors have been confronted with is the public apprehension it might be abused. Commissioner Hazen and others gave assurance it would not be. It was agreed that to afford safeguards against madadministration the law shall provide a description of a chronic drunkard and safeguard his rights.

Under the proposed law any person who is convicted of intoxication three times within a year shall be considered an alcoholic. Forfeiture of collateral shall be considered as a conviction.

Release of prisoners committed to the farm would be placed in the hands of a corps of doctors, including a psychiatrist, physician and others. These would be required to make reports to the courts. Judges would be required to pass at least once every four months on each case, regardless of the recommendations of others.

Public Welfare Wards.

Each of those committed to the cure farm would be first committed to the care of the Board of Public Welfare.

Such an experiment with adults never before has been attempted in the country, so far as can be ascertained, officials said.

"Why, suh," is the way Commissioner Hazen expresses it, "I notice in the raising of colts and the feeding of horses we can get marvelous results. Some one person can get a thing out of a horse or a person nobody else can. You can't get something out that you don't put in. Let's try this thing out.

"These drunks are costing the District hundreds and hundreds of dollars apiece every year. They don't do anybody any harm. Let's see if we can't help them to get back on their feet. Let's treat them as sick men and women and not as criminals. Let's try and see if we can't help them and save money for the city."

20-Sec. Amber Light In Traffic Is Urged

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution asking for a 20-second amber traffic light for pedestrians.

They also went on record as opposed to any congressional bill to benefit small loan companies in the Disrtict on the score that large banks were now giving small loans at reduced rates.

The members indorsed Col. William L. Peak for superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, Isaac Gans for reappointment to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and Gus A. Schultz for reappointment as presiding judge of the Police Court.

Falsh Alarm

He Pulls Them and Gets Away With It.

Police scout cars spent a worried four hours last night combing the town in vain for a glimpse of an elusive and highly agile drunk with a distorted sense of humor.

The drunk was making a speedy tour of the city between 6:30 and 10:30, pulling fire boxes and bringing out apparatus to seven scattered spots in both the Northeast and Northwest sections.

After the Fire Department's third hopeless search for eve na trace of a conflagration, the suspicions of police were aroused and they broadcast lookout after lookout for the slippery gentleman. They never caught up with him.

The alarms were pulled successively, at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast; Eighteenth and Perry streets northeast; Eighth and Randolph streets northwest; Thirty-first street and Cleveland avenue northwest, Alaska avenue and Floral street northeast, Seventeenth and Kearney streets northeast and South Dakota avenue and Quincy street northwest.

Noted Lamp Collection Given to Smithsonian

Gift From the Estate of Virgil Hillyer Traces Lighting History.

Hundreds of lamps which have guided the nocturnal footsteps and activities of men from the mists of time to the present day have been acquired by the Smithsonian Institution as a gift from the estate of the late Virgil Hillyer, head master of Calvert School in Baltimore, world traveler and historian.

The Hillyer collection, which includes many ancient fire-making devices used by savages in the prehistoric era, consists of about 1,200 pieces. It is regarded by authorities as one of the most complete in the world.

Included among the treasures are primitive fire drills, with which the cave and tree dwellers conquered darkness and cold; a primitive lamp discovered by a Babylonian expedition of the University of Pennsylvania at Nippur, a gold-inlaid "briquet" dating from 500 A. D., which was unearthed near Rhiems, in France, and a seventeenth century iron lamp from Sweden, which once was used by King Gustavus Adolphus, the hero-monarch of the Scandinavians.

Scarcely a far-flung outpost of the world or a remote corner of man's history is without representation in the Hillyer collection.

Fundamentally the history of lighting is traced by the lamps. First, according to Dr. H. W. Krieger, curator of ethnology at the institution, man lighted his dwelling by simple fires.

Then came the oil lamps. They originated in many parts of the world, centuries before the birth of Christ.

Among the almost priceless oil lamps in the Hillyer collection are types that must have been used at the time of the Biblical story of the wise and foolish virgins, varieties used in France during Charlemagne's time, and examples of the mystical lamps by which fabulous Aladdin, of Arabian Nights, is said to have summoned the mythical genii.

"The progress of lighting has been slow," asserted Dr. Kriger yesterday. "The oil lamp was universal throughout the civilized world until about 1800. Oil lamps, of course, were supplemented by candles—but the lamps themselves changed little.

"Then came the whale-oil lamps, and these were followed by the camphor lamps, which were highly dangerous and sometimes exploded. Gas came before the Civil War and it was regarded as miraculous.

"Finally there appeared electricity—so that the development of lighting was rapid only in modern times."

Examining the Hillyer collection, Dr. Kriger yesterday pointed out that the Italians, the French and the Spanish were the greatest candlemakers, creating silver and gold bases of vast artistic value.

Heberle Blames Transit Delays On Traffic Jam

He Admits Company Lacks Long-Time Plan; Would Ban Car Parking.

Capital Transit Co. officials have no plan for solution of the mass transportation problem a decade hence, J. E. Heberle, vice president and controller of the company, said under cross examination before the public utilities commission yesterday.

Badgered by questioning by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, Herberle insisted most of the troubles of his company were due to traffic conditions, proposed that parking should be banned in the downtown area and suggested that it might be necessary to bar the entry of private automobiles in the congested zone.

In 1933, Heberle testified, the street car lines carried 80,000,000 passengers. In 1935, the number of passengers carried was 154,000,000.

Aske About 1946.

Roberts asked what was to happen at the end of another 10 years. William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, on the sidelines, nodded his head and said, "Yes, yes, that is the question."

The number of mass transportation passengers would be 320,000,000 at a minimum in another 10 years, it was admitted. How were they to be handled? Heberle's solution was 150 more policemen to handle traffic at cross streets, restricted parking and barring private automobiles from the downtown area.

When Roberts suggested constructino of subways Heberle said they simply would mean more trouble through congestion. Heberle said that 25 per cent of the total time lost by his company's cars and buses was lost in the downtown section.

Suggests Garages.

His company would not take exception, Heberle said, to construction of parking garages by the District or the Federal Government if the garages were so operated as to be self-sustaining. Byt that he meant, Heberle said, that all costs should be taken into consideration.

Construction of such governmentally operated garages, he said, would add to the convenience of the operator of the private automobile. Roberts asked whether such garages, coupled with a complete prohibition aganist parking of private car in congested zones, would not induce persons to ride on the Capital Transit Co. vehicles. Heberle said possibly it would.

The hearing will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

Traffic Toll Climbs to Five During Week

The fifth traffic death in the seven days of the new year was recorded yesterday when Charley Jackson, colored, 38, of 1418 Sixth street, died at Gallinger Hospital.

Across the river in Arlington County, Va., Iver Steele, 35, an electrician employed by the Potomac Electric Power Co., was killed by a truck just after he and his wife had started to walk from their home at Waycroft to a motion picture house at Clarendon.

The Washington traffic victim, Jackson, was struck by a street car Monday as he tried t cross Eleventh street at G street northwest. He died of a skull fracture. Daniel F. Harnett, 25, of 715½ Eighth street northwest, operator of the street car, will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Steele and his wife were walking on the Washington boulevard only two squares from their home, when the truck, which police said, was forced o ffiffhe road by an automobile, struck Steele. Steele was removed to Georgetown Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Police said the driver of the truck was Roy Lohr, 30, of Ballston, Va., shop foreman of the Arlington-Fairfax Motor Transportation Co. He was driving the company's service truck, according to police.

A coroner's jury yesterday held that Mr. Ida Young, 66, 1254 Thirty-first street northwest, died Saturday in Gallinger Hospital from complications following injuries received accidentally when struck by an automobile at Jefferson and M streets northwest, last November.

The verdict exonerated Louis Robinson, colored, 1128 Twenty-third street northwest, driver of the car. It was testified that Robinson's machine struck and injured slightly three other persons who were attempting to cross the street. Mrs. Young was almost totally blind.

A second inquest into the death of Thomas Marlow, 68, 1830 L street northeast, struck by an automobile Saturday in the 400 block of K street northeast, was postponed until today when an eyewitness failed to appear. James B. Egloff, jr., 26, of Mount Rainier, Md., alleged driver of the car, is at liberty under a 1,000 bond on reckless driving charges.

At a meeting of the Civitan Club's directors last night a resolution was adopted commending the proposed suspension or revocation of operators' permits in cases of convicted for speeding.

Debs and Soldiers Rehearse Pageant

Band blaring to thundering rhythms, hoofs tearing up turf, colors slashing like a kaleidoscope of silk, Fort Myer's Army men and 100 Washington debutantes drilled in full costume yesterday for the pageant, "Winning of the West," which they will present Friday and Saturday at the fort.

More than 1,000 spectators—soldiers and their friends—filled the new riding hall at the fort for the rehearsal. Flashlights boomed as horses took the hurdles. Photographers were getting their chance to shoot the pageant in action.

Month's Finest And Individual Selections Vie

By Nelson B. Bell.

This promises to be another day of "bests" of one sort or another.

In the first place comes that valuable monthly brochure from the Will H. Hays office, cataloguing the "best of the month" among film releases, as determined by the opinions of previewing committees spanning the continent from coast to coast.

The January 1 "best of the month," in the Selected Motion Pictures pamphlet, are "Crime and Punishment," "I Dream Too Much," "Last of the Pagans," "The Littlest Rebel," "Scrooge," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," and "Whipsaw."

Of these the Capital has been privileged to view but four. These four, in the estimation of this column, deserve the distinction they have been accorded.

"Crime and Punishment," it seems to me, must have been included in any current list of the "ten best pictures of the year," had its release date fallen within the specified time limitations to make it eligible for the present year's formal voting by the critics of the Nation, instead of a critic of a specific desk.

Two Now on View.

"The Littlest Rebel" and "I Dream Too Much" are at the present time to be seen on local screens, the one starring Shirley Temple in the role created years ago on the stage by Juliet Shelby, later known to the cinema as Mary Miles Minter; the other, starring that dynamic young diva, Lily Pons, who already has been so enthusiastically celebrated in this space that we hesitate to set down further encomiums upon the superlative artistry not only of her matchless singing, but of her spirited acting, as well.

About "Scrooge," the British-made screen version of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Last of the Pagans," I would not know —or have forgotten.

The inaugural performance of "La Maternelle," the French film which will inaugurate its Washington engagement in the Belasco Theater tonight at 7, will be for the benefit of the Washington Newspaper Women's Club's bed endowment fund for Children's Hospital, the same worthy charity that was the recipient of favor on the occasion of the world premiere of the Gaumont British film version of Jerome K. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" a few months ago.

Incidentally, "The New Gulliver" will be shown on the Belasco screen today through the 4:19 p. m. presentation. Upon the conclusion of that showing, the house will be closed until 7 o'clock when the new attraction will be projected.

It will, of course, continue on the daily, all-day schedule beginning tomorrow morning.

The Postman Again.

Going on with the "ten best" business, comes this interesting and penetrating letter, postmarked Laurel, Md., January 6:

Dear sir: I read your list of the ten best motion pictures for 1935 and thought it a fine selection, but since then I have seen "A Tale of Two Cities" (in Baltimore) and I think this picture, by all means, should be included in this list.

I hope when it is shown in Washington, Wednesday, you, too, will think so. I know it comes too late for the national award, as you explained concerning some others, but it is a 1935 picture and so I imagine can be counted among the ten best. The Baltimore critics were very enthusiastic about it, saying the list of ten best would have to be revised to include "A Tale of Two Cities," and I hope you will think so, too.

I am very partial to all the Ronald Colman pictures, but in this he really is magnificent and makes one really love the great Sydney Carton, in spite of his shabbiness and dissipation.

I always enjoy your column in The Post and am awaiting your comments on this picture with eagerness, hoping not to be disappointed. Very truly yours, (Signed) M. B.

Local Poll Planned.

There is a movement on foot to foster a purely local selection of the ten best films in 1935 by the local drama desks, irrespective of the national polls that, perforce, must set unsatisfactory time limitations upon the eligibility of titles to be voted upon. If this is done—and I feel sure it will be—such sterling works as "Mutiny on the Bounty," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Crime and Punishment" and presumably "A Tale of Two Cities"—not to cite numerous other fine achievements—will be possible of inclusion in the estimates, whereas they were barred from consideration in the Film Daily's poll, for example, by reason of its national scope.

And for the many kind implications of your letter concerning the column, M. B., My sincerest thanks. I trust it will continue to be worthy of your attention and interest.

Having known the cowboy philosopher since the early "horse days" of his vaudeville debut in "show business," I shall be most happy to contribute my bit to this memorial to one of the foremost personalities of his day.

Then there is the "ten best" letter from A. K. Wray, 245 Ingraham street, dated January 5, to-wit:

Dear Mr. Bell: I was very interested in your list of the ten best pictures of 1935, and although I have no particular fault to find with it, still I could not resist your invitation to submit a list of my own favorites. So here are my personal selections for the ten best pictures of the year:

1. DAVID COPPERFIELD.
2. THE SCOUNDREL.
3. THE INFORMER.
4. NAUGHTY MARIETTA.
5. RUGGLES OF RED GAP.
6. THE LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER.
7. ALICE ADAMS.
8. LES MISERABLES.
9. THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING.
10. THE WEDDING NIGHT.

One or two of the pictures Mr. Wray lists, for some unaccountable reason, this commentator failed to see. Even at that, we go along together for at least half of the distance. Five of our respective choices are identical.

I hope I do that well on the national consensus! And probably will not.

The Triangle Club is holding a meeting tonight at 8, at the Central Y. M. C. A., at which there will be a reading of the new manuscript play, "No Sun, No Moon," which it intends to produce. Anyone interested—and there should be many—is invited to attend.

Hasta Luego Note.

And the last of the holiday greeting cards to arrive comes from Senorita Chela de Castro, Hotel Trianon, Habana, Cuba, a dancer who appeared with distinction in Washington a year ago. It says, "Muchas Felicidades."

I am going to look that up in my old Portuguese dictionary and, if it means what I think it does, answer right back again, "Lo mismo a usted, amiga mia, y muchas gracias por las expreciones sympaticas."

Featured in Hollywood Comedy

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Chamber Music Society presents the Pro Musica Quartet (Bernard Robbins, Jeno Sevely, Hendrik Essers and Sidney Hamer) in Phillips Memorial Gallery Monday afternoon. Program: Quartet in D minor (Mozart), "La Oracion del Torero" (Turina), Quartet in D major (Borodin).

Another capacity audience testified to the interest in the current series of candlelight concerts, of which yesterday's was the second. For the enjoyment of their auditors, the string foursome played a program of a definitely dramatic character, each composition having other than purely musical implications.

One cannot say that the Mozart quartet in D minor, the second of the set dedicated to Haydn, actually tells a story, but it is so serious in mood and so evidently laden with anxiety that it has an intensely personal quality. The tradition that Mozart was always sunny and ebullient in his music does not stand the test of careful listening for the underlying emotional stress.

This quartet starts out bravely enough with a strongly romantic urgency not unlike that of Schubert, attempting a nonchalant gayety which is not maintained. Through the slow movement and the minuet the mood becomes ever more shadowed with care. The finale, a set of variations on a theme in the rhythm of a Siciliano, instead of rejoicing in its technical brilliance, moves to a gloomy close which is almost the foreshadowing of tragedy.

"La Oracion del Torero," the 10-year-old work by Joaquin Turina, might be described as the prelude to the afternoon of a bullfighter. The analogy is suggested not only by the reflection of Debussyan harmonies here and there, but also by the programmatic episodes in the music itself. If one accepts the hint of the title, one hears the reveries of the toreador as he fortifies himself in some dimly light church for the ordeal of the ring. The music alternates dramatically between the feeling of apprehension and the recollection of former triumphs.

The Borodin quartet is essentially narrative in its style and the four movements are as many musical tales in the manner of Schumann's novelettes. There is no mistaking the literary quality of the music and in the cadenced pace of the themes one can almost distinguish the voice of the raconteur.

Preceded by a snatch of a film play, projected in the customary screen manner, with a "personal appearance" staged "in the flesh," "Personal Appearance" goes on to establish itself as a fast-moving ribald and thoroughly daring comedy of a Hollywood star on the loose among the smaller Pennsylvania communities, where she precipitates a domestic crisis as a result of her largely synthetic and completely deliberate "emotionalism."

There is a young gas station attendant between Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, on Route 11, where her Rolls Royce is stalled, who engages her amorous interest—just another in a long succession of demonstrations of the unique susceptibilities of Mrs. Benjamin Z. Fineberg, wife of the president of Superfine Pictures, Inc., and a film star of most glamorous ray serene!

It happens that this particular young man—although there are moments when he seems to be not too particular—is in love with a hometown girl and she, rapturously, with him. The matter promises a considerable complication until a mild climacteric deception gives rise to the most explosive "tag-line" that has come along to a local stage since Osgood Perkins and Lee Tracy bombed the customers out of their pews with the final line of "Front Page."

This time it is spoken by a woman, which gives it an added tang and a multiplied bravado.

And, the circumstances being what they are, it is very, very funny. Shocking, too, no end, but you are probably accustomed to that in the theater by now.

Played at Breakneck Tempo.

My chief objection to "Personal Appearance," as it was played in the National Theater last night—barring, of course, my habitual Puritanical revulsion at the alarming implications of sex!—is that the three acts are played at breakneck speed. The lines and action are wholly without pace or rhythm and are run off with a cyclonic velocity that eliminates every suggestion of subtlety, timing and a thoughtfully authentic rendition of the full import of Author Lawrence Riley's provocative and highly ludicrous dialogue and equally devastating situations.

As an intrinsic bit of free-for-all writing, "Personal Appearance" is endowed with the same elements of popular appeal and outraged sensibilities as were present in such abundance in "Sailor, Beware."

This time it is the feminine Hollywood star who, to slip into an inelegant but eloquent vernacular, is "on the make." Her impetuosities and the attempted curb upon them exerted by her "public relations counsel" are the major sources of a continuous barrage of inferential iniquity that keeps an audience in a contagious and slightly self-conscious uproar. "The Pursuit of Happiness" exerted the same vicarious sort of infectious and irresistible innuendo.

Barring the matter of excessive celerity in everything that is done on stage, "Personal Appearance" is played with a genial indifference to its questionable content and an especial skill for making plausible the extravagances of a group of characters that are both overdrawn and overaccented by the author and director, rather than by the players.

Miss Brown Scores in Lead.

Not having seen Gladys George in the role of Carole Arden, the platinum movie star of this unctuous charade, I am unable to proclaim that she was infinitely better in the role than Barbara Brown, who plays it here. It seemed to me last evening that Miss Brown was extremely and excitingly good. She manifested a versatile command of both a natural and an assumed personality, which she displayed opportunely as the character of her "audience" seemed to demand by turns for the successful fulfillment of her immediate urpose. She looked the part of the cinema queen, every inch, and acquitted herself with complete acclaim.

Two masculine roles share honors with the foremost of the feminine. They are assumed by George Blackwood, as the young, small-town mechanic, and Walter N. Greaza, as the "personal appearance" star's "public relations counsel," whose chief harrassment was the extraordinary scope of her "public relations." There is a suggestion of Henry Fonda in Mr. Blackwood's excellent work, and Mr. Greaza, while suggesting no one else in either method or appearance, takes rank among the foremost of the stage's straight comedians.

Support Excels.

Peggy Converse lends a demure charm to the part of Joyce Struthers, the real "heart interest" of the comedy, and both Lora Rogers and Suzanne Jackson do themselves proud in the character roles of Aunt Kate Barnaby and Mrs. Struthers, a Laura Hope Crews sort of person who has a terrific nervous system and an unhappy faculty for muddling up the lives of all around her.

Darthy Hinkley, as the "movie struck" youngster from next door, turns in a gem of high-powered and impulsive comedy, and Betty Amiard is an unobtrusive secretary whose business it is to keep in the background. Her male counterpart is Paul A. Foley, cast as Johnson, and another, George Calvert, in the role of Clyde Pelton.

"Personal Appearance" has been staged with a keen eye for roadside and tourist camp realism by John Root and directed with a speedy and effective skill by Antoinette Perry.

A large audience last night paid the amusing travesty the tribute of almost uninterrupted laughter. That is practically the least any audience could do, Mr. Riley's ideas of a celluloid star on tour being what they are.

The play makes adventurous use of real names and personalities in pointing its dialogue and is all the more impressive and pungent on that account.

If Mr. Riley has escaped libel so far, why worry about it now?

Curb Advance Led By Power Shares

By the Associated Press.

New York Jan. 7.—Led by a brisk demand for power and light issues the curb market displayed a strong tone today. Although metal shares lagged, advances of fractions to 2 points predominated at the close. Transfers approximated 692,000 shares compared with 688,000 the day before.

Gainers of around 1 to 2 points included American Gas & Electric at 39 ⅞, Electric Bond & Share at 18½, Aluminum Co. of America at 89, Gulf Oil at 75, Sherwin-Williams at 126, Pan-American Airways at 48 and Montgomery Ward "A" at 143. Fractional improvement was shown by American Superpower, Cities Service and Niagara Hudson Power.

Among non-ferrous shares, Newmont Mining lost nearly 2 points while Lake Shore and Sunshine Mining were fractions lower.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

AL JOLSON is on the set of his flicker, "The Singing Kid," and he is doing a brief scene to the playback of a song with the Yacht Club Boys. The song is called "I Love to Singa," sounds very amusing, and after they complete the scene for Director Williams Keighley, Jolson has the entire recording played for me.

It is a very clever song that Harold Arlen and Yip Harburg have written; especially good for Jolson, for he pokes fun at himself. The lyrics tell that Jolson wants to sing a "mammy" ditty, but the Yacht Club lads won't allow him, and in doing so they burlesque the popular songs: "The Dream Walking," "Balking School," "The Cottage by a Waterfall" type, the "Rhythm" song and everything else on the radio. "I Live to Singa" must really be heard to be appreciated—and I'm certain it will be.

Robert Taylor, Janet Gaynor and Douglas Fowley are seated at a night club table doing a scene for the flicker, "Small Town Girl." The director is William Wellman. Regardless of the type of story or who the star may be, Director Wellman doesn't change his style. He talks freely. He is never awed or impressed by the performers. He impresses the performers.

There is an orchestra in this sequence and also many dancing couples. Irene Hervey, who isn't in the picture, sits and watches her boy friend, Robert Taylor. While Director Wellman is arranging another setup, the orchestra entertains the extras. The orchestra is known as "Mickey Whelan and the Boys." Mickey Whelan has a fine band and their specialty is being the orchestra in pictures. They played in "Broadway Melody," "Rendezvous" and many others. Whelan says he would like the chance to play in a genuine night club or on the radio.

He shouts, "What do you want us to play?" and always some one shouts back, "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round." You can't go on any set without hearing it. Although Paramount is going to buy the song, it will be in a picture before they use it.

"Show Boat" is being filmed and with many of the original cast—Helen Morgan, Sammy White, Francis X Mahoney, Paul Robeson and Charles Winninger. To one who found it a pleasure to drop into the Ziegfeld Theatre and see parts of this show again and again, the set at Universal studio is a place to visit.

Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein have written two new numbers for this lastest version of "Show Boat." They are "Ah Suits Me," to be sung by Paul Robeson, and "The Room Above," to be sung by Irene Dunne and Allan Jones.

I heard Robeson sing "Ah Suits Me." It is a song worthy of Kern, which is enough praise for any song.

His rendition clearly demonstrates the advantage of the screen as a medium. Robeson worked in a recording room and sang that song over and over until he recorded it the way he always wanted to sing it. In a theater or a concert hall, Robeson would have to use volume to be heard in the balcony. Robeson, in the recording room, sang into the microphone, which was so near it almost touched his lips. And if you didn't stand near the microphone you couldn't hear him. Yet on the screen Robeson is heard with more volume and power and tone quality than ever before.

William Powell and Myrna Loy are playing a dramatic scene for "The Great Ziegfeld." Hollywood is honoring Florenz Ziegfeld. The two most important musicals being filmed are "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Show Boat." One is the story of his career and the other is the finest musical show he produced.

Powell is portraying Ziegfeld, and in this scene he is downcast. His latest show is a flop. Myrna Loy is portraying Billie Burke, and she encourages Ziggy. She says to him: "With your love for beauty you will never be cheap. Keep your promise. Have four hits on Broadway." He kept the promise.

It will be strange, but it will tell a story, a grand story, when a movie marquee reads: "The Great Ziegfeld 'Show Boat.'"

IDA LEWIS, whose mother and father before her were keepers at Lime Rock Lighthouse, off Newport, R. I., was one of America's most famous lighthouse keepers. She was born in the lighthouse in 1841 and grew up there. She became adept at swimming, rowing and at 17 performed her first feat of life saving. In 1879 she was made keeper by a special act of Congress and remained on the job 31 years, winning fame and honor as an efficient keeper and hardy life saver.

In her whole term of official duty, Ida Lewis left her post for overnight visits to the mainland only six times. Medals from the United States Government, the Humane Society of Massachusetts, the Life Saving Society of New York and other organizations were awarded to her and the people of Newport gave her a boat, Rescue, which was exhibited at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago.

Miss Lewis was married to William H. Wilson some years before she took charge of the lighthouse. The marriage was not successful, however, and she always was known by her maiden name.

The Gila monster, only known poisonous lizard, is found in arid areas of Southwestern United States. It grows to be about 2 feet long, and a banana-shaped tail in which excess food is stored up in the form of fat. When the Gila monster goes without food for a time it draws on this supply of fat for food. There is doubt as to the strength of a Gila monster's poison. It probably is sufficient to kill small animals readily, but a healthy man is likely to withstand it. However, cases of death from its bite have been reported.

New York, Jan. 7.

COLORFUL snaches: My first interview with Helen Wills at Seabright, N. J., when she wouldn't desert her youthful pals unless Arthur Robinson, then on the American, bought a bag of lollypops . . . Jimmy Walker's speech at the Baseball Writers' dinner in which he said: "It is a pity that the cheers of yesterday have such a short echo" . . . The complaint from John D. Rockefeller, sr., at Ormond Beach, when I wrote that George F. Baker, the National City Bank tycoon, had beaten him at golf . . . Meeting H. G. Wells in my dressing room in a Broadway vaudeville theater, and startled that such a tiny body should house such a magnificent mind.

The greatest thrill I ever got was the first day my byline, newspaperese for signature, appeared in a New York paper, the Evening Mail. I opened the paper on the shuttle train that runs between Grand Central and Times Square, and it seemed that my heart would pound right through my ribs. It was a series of college sport notes, under a one-column head, but it seemed to me that from a literary standpoint it overshadowed Hugo, Milton and Goethe. That was in November, 1920.

Probably no writer has been on so many shipwrecked papers as myself, which probably is a form of criticism. The Hartford Post was sold two weeks after they hired me, which is par for the course. Later the Evening Mail, the New York Bulletin, the Miami Beach Tribune and the Graphic succumbed to the sheer force of my personality. But the News is too tough. In four years, I have not been able to collapse it.

My greatest shock was working for Norman Thomas. The shock came when I climbed the steps of the old Call, and found a statuette of Eugene Debs, who was excoriated by churchgoers, I said A Hail Mary as I passed Debs, but my fears were groundless. Thomas was a swell boss, and at the next desk to me sat Howard Brubaker, who was to click later on the New Yorker.

The first $50 bill I'd ever seen, a week's pay from the Hartford Post at Hartford, Conn. I asked my mother to let me carry it around for several days and flashed is casually on the Liberty Square gang. Every 5 minutes, I'd stick my hand in my pocket to see that it was still there.

Celeb who gave me my greatest thrill, I think, was Tex Rickard. Second to that would be Flo Ziegfeld. Both of them were alike in that neither was difficult to meet, but Rickard was by far the more interesting talker, with the keenest observation of any of the big-timers.

The finest speaker I ever heard, Dr. Sheehan, the Jesuit orator; the finest writer I ever read, William Bolitho, who draws a deserved tribute from Walter Duranty in his "I Write As I Please."

The greatest book I ever read, Lincoln Steffen's autobiography, a showcase for one of the fine intellects of our time, and a tip-off as to where a lot of my colleagues have swiped their ideas.

My first airplane ride, from Boston to New York in a Ford trimotor. It was bumpy all the way. Later, I saw the same type plane in Penn Station exhibited as a relic, and I wondered how any of us ever had nerve enough to ride in it. The most nerve-tingling airplane ride, with a drunken pilot and a drunken party of four that had taken too much applejack at the Princeton-Yale game and wanted to play house in the clouds.

First great wit I ever met, the late Simeon Ford. I used to caddy for him at the Apawamis Club, after school, with the Gwathneys, the Laidlaws, the Wesley Olers and George Barnes. Tall and spare, Mr. Ford was funnier on a golf course than at a banquet dais.

The first trip to a barber shop, without my father or brother escorting me. The grins on the faces of the other patrons when the barber shaved the fuzz from my cheeks with a hair-clipper. It was mortifyin'.

Learning to use a typewriter on my first New York job, on Roy K. Moulton's machine. John Murphy, in charge of the Mail morgue, made me copy New York Times editorials day after day. As a result, I've been an independent Democrat ever since.

Banker Urges England Return German Land

York, England, Jan. 7 (AP).—Viscount Downe, industrialist and banker, urged the British government tonight to return to Germany colonies taken from her by the World War. He said at the annual meeting of the York County Savings Bank:

"Surely, we have learned the lesson from war that we cannot with impunity upset the economic structure of the world and get away with it. I wish our government would screw themselves to the point of returning to Germany colonies taken from her after the war."

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

THE campaign to relieve Veterans' Administration workers of charges for quarters and subsistence which they do not and cannot use seemed near victory yesterday with the report that the House Appropriations Committee had recommended $2,000,000 more for the Administration to make this possible.

BAKER.

Relief for these employes, among the lowest paid in Government service, has been one of the major objectives of the American Federation of Government Employes.

The employes concerned are mainly attendants at the various veterans' hospitals. Present laws and practice provide that they are expected to live at the hospitals so long as quarters are available there, and to take meals there as well.

Until recent years this did not cause serious hardship to many workers, for the majority of such employes were single, but since the depression many married men have taken jobs in the veterans' hospitals. The pay is generally $100 a month or less, and the deduction of about $35 a month for unused quarters and food leaves income inadequate for the support of their families.

The Veterans' Administration last year made an investigation of the problem of these employes. Early in the present session of Congress $2,000,000 was requested to relieve veterans' hospital workers by permitting them to receive full salaries and to live off the hospital grounds.

A bill, introduced by Representative Hampton B. Fulmer, of South Carolina, would make it optional with the employe as to whether he would accept quarters, subsistence and laundry at Government institutions, and which would have such services paid for at actual cost to the Government.

The committee's report, under which the $2,000,000 is said to be made available in the Independent offices bill, with every assurance that it will remain in the bill, provides that this amount is to be obtained by making available a part of the unexpended balance of the 1935 appropriation. While this is to be used in part to meet higher costs of goods purchased by veterans hospitals, the rest will be used "to enable the administrator to adjust the terms of contract of employment of certain hospital personnel where deductions from pay are customarily made on account of quarters, subsistence and laundry service furnished to such employes and where, in the discretion of the administrator, it will be in the interest of the service to permit such employes to obtain QSL away from the hospital and eliminate the deductions from pay for same."

Claude S. Gillette (F), and Henderson B. Gregory (F), both of Navy, are the inventors of a vibration-proof pipe joint, particularly useful in securing thin pipe sections, used aboard ship.

Federal Writers Featured.

Federal science and scientists occupy a prominent place in the January issue of the Scientific Monthly. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace leads off with an extended article on "Research—The Yeast in the Loaf of Agriculture." Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and president of the President's Science Advisory Board, follows with an account of the "Science Advisory Service to the Government."

In addition, John P. Harrington, Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian, writes on "Ethiopian—The Oldest Language;" Dr. William B. Bell, Biological Survey, on "When the Ducks Fly South;" Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the Bureau of Standards, on "Exploring the Stratosphere," and Austin H. Clark, National Museum, on "The Annual Meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science," in which there is reproduced a portrait of Dr. Herbert R. Morgan, astronomer of the United States Naval Observatory.

Miss Florence Fallgatter, (P), has been appointed chief of the home economics education section of the Vocational Division of the Office of Education, Interior, it has been announced. She succeeds the late Dr. Adelaide S. Baylor.

Edward Gillette's Career.

Edward Gillette, civil engineer and former State treasurer of Wyoming, who died last week at Sheridan, at the age of 81, had served the United States Government in various capacities. For two years he worked for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and from 1878 to 1880 was in the employ of the United States surveys west of the one hundredth meridian as topographer.

In 1899 the Government sent him to Alaska as engineer in charge of locating the Copper River Railroad. President Taft appointed Gillette in 1915 as chairman of the board of review of the Wyoming and Montana Reclamation Service. His last work for the Federal Government was in 1918, when he was commissioner of conciliation in the Department of Labor.

Dr. Harold C. Bryant, assistant director of the National Park Service, gave an illustrated lecutre last night in the Interior Department auditorium on the Yosemite National Park.

Ulrey Biller Grateful.

Ulrey J. Biller, national vice president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, extends through the Federal Diary his appreciation for the many greetings he received from co-workers here at Christmas. Mr. Biller is vacationing at Dallas, Tex., prior to a strenuous session of Congress during which he will lead concerted action for liberalized retirement for Federal employes. Members of Local No. 2, N. F. F. E., saluted their oldest member during the Yuletide in recognition for his inspiring leadership in making possible the union's pledge of not less than $1,000 to the Merit System Emergency Defense Fund of the national organization.

Members of Local No. 2 and other Government workers here will be grieved to hear of the death of Mr. Biller's sister at Dallas after Christmas. Mr. Biller returns to Washington on January 15.

Annual Cost Reviewed.

Q.—Can you give me some idea as to what was the yearly cost of the NRA?—A. T. LaCrosse (F).

A. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, the NRA spent $12,496,730.81. Since that time, during which the NRA has been dismantled on account of the unconstitutionality decision ot fhe Supreme Court, it has cost $4,236,000. The NRA was officially abolished by executive order effective January 1, 1936.

N. F. F. E. Meeting Changed.

A change has been made in the date on which local leaders of the National Federatoin of Federal Employes will meet to plan for the year that has just begun. The chairmen of the various committees of the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes Unions will meet with the executive council of that body tonight at 8 o'clock at local N. F. F. E. headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

The meeting will arrange for a city-wide gathering of N. F. F. E. members this month, which is expected to inaugurate the Federation's 1936 activities. Paramount is the local and national N. F. F. E. program at this time is the preservation and extension of the merit system. Membership and entertainment will receive due consideration in tonight's planning.

It is expected the entertainment committee of the federation, headed by William Walsh, General Accounting Office, will recommend an immediate program, following the meeting of that group this week.

Constable Thrown Off Cliff; Man Held

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 7.—Edgar Rudy, 24, was seized as he stepped from a train here today and taken before Constable Charles W. Barnhart at the Washington County Hospital who identified him as the man Leighty at Hancock. Rudy had near Hancock early today. Barnhart was trailing a bandit who several hours earlier held up Sherman eighty at Hancock. Rudy had a revolver when arrested.

Leighty taxicab operator, was struck in the head and knocked unconscious by a robber who entered his home, ostensibly to pay a taxi bill. About $15 in cash and jewelry were taken by the bandit.

When Leighty recovered consciousness he summoned Constable Barnhart, who with other officers tracked the bandit in the snow to a point near Round Top, where he came upon him on a high cliff. The constable and suspect grappled and Barnhart was thrown over the cliff. His leg was fractured. He is believed to be also injured internally.

Annual Lists of "Ten Best" Continue to Intrigue National and Local Choosers

By Nelson B. Bell.

This promises to be another day of "bests" of one sort or another.

In the first place comes that valuable monthly brochure from the Will H. Hays office, cataloguing the "best of the month" among film releases, as determined by the opinions of previewing committees spanning the continent from coast to coast.

The January 1 "best of the month," in the Selected Motion Pictures pamphlet, are "Crime and Punishment," "I Dream Too Much," "Last of the Pagans," "The Littlest Rebel," "Scrooge," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," and "Whipsaw."

Of these the Capital has been privileged to view but four. These four, in the estimation of this column, deserve the distinction they have been accorded.

"Crime and Punishment," it seems to me, must have been included in any current list of the "ten best pictures of the year," had its release date fallen within the specified time limitations to make it eligible for the present year's formal voting by the critics of the Nation, instead of a critic of a specific desk.

Two Now on View.

"The Littlest Rebel" and "I Dream Too Much" are at the present time to be seen on local screens, the one starring Shirley Temple in the role created years ago on the stage by Juliet Shelby, later known to the cinema as Mary Miles Minter; the other, starring that dynamic young diva, Lily Pons, who already has been so enthusiastically celebrated in this space that we hesitate to set down further encomiums upon the superlative artistry not only of her matchless singing, but of her spirited acting, as well.

"The Story of Louis Pasteur," in which Paul Muni assumes the title role of one of the greatest benefactors of humanity and a towering figure in the medical profession, is one of the things Washington has to look forward to in the early weeks of the new year.

About "Scrooge," the British-made screen version of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Last of the Pagans," I would not know —or have forgotten.

The inaugural performance of "La Maternelle," the French film which will inaugurate its Washington engagement in the Belasco Theater tonight at 7, will be for the benefit of the Washington Newspaper Women's Club's bed endowment fund for Children's Hospital, the same worthy charity that was the recipient of favor on the occasion of the world premiere of the Gaumont British film version of Jerome K. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" a few months ago.

Incidentally, "The New Gulliver" will be shown on the Belasco screen today through the 4:19 p. m. presentation. Upon the conclusion of that showing, the house will be closed until 7 o'clock when the new attraction will be projected.

It will, of course, continue on the daily, all-day schedule beginning tomorrow morning.

The Postman Again.

Going on with the "ten best" business, comes this interesting and penetrating letter, postmarked Laurel, Md., January 6:

Dear sir: I read your list of the ten best motion pictures for 1935 and thought it a fine selection, but since then I have seen "A Tale of Two Cities" (in Baltimore) and I think this picture, by all means, should be included in this list.

I hope when it is shown in Washington, Wednesday, you, too, will think so. I know it comes too late for the national award, as you explained concerning some others, but it is a 1935 picture and so I imagine can be counted among the ten best. The Baltimore critics were very enthusiastic about it, saying the list of ten best would have to be revised to include "A Tale of Two Cities," and I hope you will think so, too.

I am very partial to all the Ronald Colman pictures, but in this he really is magnificent and makes one really love the great Sydney Carton, in spite of his shabbiness and dissipation.

I always enjoy your column in The Post and am awaiting your comments on this picture with eagerness, hoping not to be disappointed. Very truly yours, (Signed) M. B.

Local Poll Planned.

There is a movement on foot to foster a purely local selection of the ten best films in 1935 by the local drama desks, irrespective of the national polls that, perforce, must set unsatisfactory time limitations upon the eligibility of titles to be voted upon. If this is done—and I feel sure it will be—such sterling works as "Mutiny on the Bounty," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Crime and Punishment" and presumably "A Tale of Two Cities"—not to cite numerous other fine achievements—will be possible of inclusion in the estimates, whereas they were barred from consideration in the Film Daily's poll, for example, by reason of its national scope.

And for the many kind implications of your letter concerning the column, M. B., My sincerest thanks. I trust it will continue to be worthy of your attention and interest.

Having known the cowboy philosopher since the early "horse days" of his vaudeville debut in "show business," I shall be most happy to contribute my bit to this memorial to one of the foremost personalities of his day.

Then there is the "ten best" letter from A. K. Wray, 245 Ingraham street, dated January 5, to-wit:

Dear Mr. Bell: I was very interested in your list of the ten best pictures of 1935, and although I have no particular fault to find with it, still I could not resist your invitation to submit a list of my own favorites. So here are my personal selections for the ten best pictures of the year:

1. DAVID COPPERFIELD.
2. THE SCOUNDREL.
3. THE INFORMER.
4. NAUGHTY MARIETTA.
5. RUGGLES OF RED GAP.
6. THE LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER.
7. ALICE ADAMS.
8. LES MISERABLES.
9. THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING.
10. THE WEDDING NIGHT.

One or two of the pictures Mr. Wray lists, for some unaccountable reason, this commentator failed to see. Even at that, we go along together for at least half of the distance. Five of our respective choices are identical.

I hope I do that well on the national consensus! And probably will not.

The Triangle Club is holding a meeting tonight at 8, at the Central Y. M. C. A., at which there will be a reading of the new manuscript play, "No Sun, No Moon," which it intends to produce. Anyone interested—and there should be many—is invited to attend.

Hasta Luega Note.

And the last of the holiday greeting cards to arrive comes from Senorita Chela de Castro, Hotel Trianon, Habana, Cuba, a dancer who appeared with distinction in Washington a year ago. It says, "Muchas Felicidades."

I am going to look that up in my old Portuguese dictionary and, if it means what I think it does, answer right back again, "Lo mismo a usted, amiga mia, y muchas gracias por las expreciones sympaticas."

Featured in Hollywood Comedy

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Chamber Music Society presents the Pro Musica Quartet (Bernard Robbins, Jeno Sevely, Hendrik Essers and Sidney Hamer) in Phillips Memorial Gallery Monday afternoon. Program: Quartet in D minor (Mozart), "La Oracion del Torero" (Turina), Quartet in D major (Borodin).

Another capacity audience testified to the interest in the current series of candlelight concerts, of which yesterday's was the second. For the enjoyment of their auditors, the string foursome played a program of a definitely dramatic character, each composition having other than purely musical implications.

One cannot say that the Mozart quartet in D minor, the second of the set dedicated to Haydn, actually tells a story, but it is so serious in mood and so evidently laden with anxiety that it has an intensely personal quality. The tradition that Mozart was always sunny and ebullient in his music does not stand the test of careful listening for the underlying emotional stress.

This quartet starts out bravely enough with a strongly romantic urgency not unlike that of Schubert, attempting a nonchalant gayety which is not maintained. Through the slow movement and the minuet the mood becomes ever more shadowed with care. The finale, a set of variations on a theme in the rhythm of a Siciliano, instead of rejoicing in its technical brilliance, moves to a gloomy close which is almost the foreshadowing of tragedy.

"La Oracion del Torero," the 10-year-old work by Joaquin Turina, might be described as the prelude to the afternoon of a bullfighter. The analogy is suggested not only by the reflection of Debussyan harmonies here and there, but also by the programmatic episodes in the music itself. If one accepts the hint of the title, one hears the reveries of the toreador as he fortifies himself in some dimly light church for the ordeal of the ring. The music alternates dramatically between the feeling of apprehension and the recollection of former triumphs.

The Borodin quartet is essentially narrative in its style and the four movements are as many musical tales in the manner of Schumann's novelettes. There is no mistaking the literary quality of the music and in the cadenced pace of the themes one can almost distinguish the voice of the raconteur.

Preceded by a snatch of a film play, projected in the customary screen manner, with a "personal appearance" staged "in the flesh," "Personal Appearance" goes on to establish itself as a fast-moving ribald and thoroughly daring comedy of a Hollywood star on the loose among the smaller Pennsylvania communities, where she precipitates a domestic crisis as a result of her largely synthetic and completely deliberate "emotionalism."

There is a young gas station attendant between Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, on Route 11, where her Rolls Royce is stalled, who engages her amorous interest—just another in a long succession of demonstrations of the unique susceptibilities of Mrs. Benjamin Z. Fineberg, wife of the president of Superfine Pictures, Inc., and a film star of most glamorous ray serene!

It happens that this particular young man—although there are moments when he seems to be not too particular—is in love with a hometown girl and she, rapturously, with him. The matter promises a considerable complication until a mild climacteric deception gives rise to the most explosive "tag-line" that has come along to a local stage since Osgood Perkins and Lee Tracy bombed the customers out of their pews with the final line of "Front Page."

This time it is spoken by a woman, which gives it an added tang and a multiplied bravado.

And, the circumstances being what they are, it is very, very funny. Shocking, too, no end, but you are probably accustomed to that in the theater by now.

Played at Breakneck Tempo.

My chief objection to "Personal Appearance," as it was played in the National Theater last night—barring, of course, my habitual Puritanical revulsion at the alarming implications of sex!—is that the three acts are played at breakneck speed. The lines and action are wholly without pace or rhythm and are run off with a cyclonic velocity that eliminates every suggestion of subtlety, timing and a thoughtfully authentic rendition of the full import of Author Lawrence Riley's provocative and highly ludicrous dialogue and equally devastating situations.

As an intrinsic bit of free-for-all writing, "Personal Appearance" is endowed with the same elements of popular appeal and outraged sensibilities as were present in such abundance in "Sailor, Beware."

This time it is the feminine Hollywood star who, to slip into an inelegant but eloquent vernacular, is "on the make." Her impetuosities and the attempted curb upon them exerted by her "public relations counsel" are the major sources of a continuous barrage of inferential iniquity that keeps an audience in a contagious and slightly self-conscious uproar. "The Pursuit of Happiness" exerted the same vicarious sort of infectious and irresistible innuendo.

Barring the matter of excessive celerity in everything that is done on stage, "Personal Appearance" is played with a genial indifference to its questionable content and an especial skill for making plausible the extravagances of a group of characters that are both overdrawn and overaccented by the author and director, rather than by the players.

Miss Brown Scores in Lead.

Not having seen Gladys George in the role of Carole Arden, the platinum movie star of this unctuous charade, I am unable to proclaim that she was infinitely better in the role than Barbara Brown, who plays it here. It seemed to me last evening that Miss Brown was extremely and excitingly good. She manifested a versatile command of both a natural and an assumed personality, which she displayed opportunely as the character of her "audience" seemed to demand by turns for the successful fulfillment of her immediate urpose. She looked the part of the cinema queen, every inch, and acquitted herself with complete acclaim.

Two masculine roles share honors with the foremost of the feminine. They are assumed by George Blackwood, as the young, small-town mechanic, and Walter N. Greaza, as the "personal appearance" star's "public relations counsel," whose chief harrassment was the extraordinary scope of her "public relations." There is a suggestion of Henry Fonda in Mr. Blackwood's excellent work, and Mr. Greaza, while suggesting no one else in either method or appearance, takes rank among the foremost of the stage's straight comedians.

Support Excels.

Peggy Converse lends a demure charm to the part of Joyce Struthers, the real "heart interest" of the comedy, and both Lora Rogers and Suzanne Jackson do themselves proud in the character roles of Aunt Kate Barnaby and Mrs. Struthers, a Laura Hope Crews sort of person who has a terrific nervous system and an unhappy faculty for muddling up the lives of all around her.

Darthy Hinkley, as the "movie struck" youngster from next door, turns in a gem of high-powered and impulsive comedy, and Betty Amiard is an unobtrusive secretary whose business it is to keep in the background. Her male counterpart is Paul A. Foley, cast as Johnson, and another, George Calvert, in the role of Clyde Pelton.

"Personal Appearance" has been staged with a keen eye for roadside and tourist camp realism by John Root and directed with a speedy and effective skill by Antoinette Perry.

A large audience last night paid the amusing travesty the tribute of almost uninterrupted laughter. That is practically the least any audience could do, Mr. Riley's ideas of a celluloid star on tour being what they are.

The play makes adventurous use of real names and personalities in pointing its dialogue and is all the more impressive and pungent on that account.

If Mr. Riley has escaped libel so far, why worry about it now?

Curb Advance Led By Power Shares

By the Associated Press.

New York Jan. 7.—Led by a brisk demand for power and light issues the curb market displayed a strong tone today. Although metal shares lagged, advances of fractions to 2 points predominated at the close. Transfers approximated 692,000 shares compared with 688,000 the day before.

Gainers of around 1 to 2 points included American Gas & Electric at 39 ⅞, Electric Bond & Share at 18½, Aluminum Co. of America at 89, Gulf Oil at 75, Sherwin-Williams at 126, Pan-American Airways at 48 and Montgomery Ward "A" at 143. Fractional improvement was shown by American Superpower, Cities Service and Niagara Hudson Power.

Among non-ferrous shares, Newmont Mining lost nearly 2 points while Lake Shore and Sunshine Mining were fractions lower.

Watching Them Make Pictures

AL JOLSON is on the set of his flicker, "The Singing Kid," and he is doing a brief scene to the playback of a song with the Yacht Club Boys. The song is called "I Love to Singa," sounds very amusing, and after they complete the scene for Director Williams Keighley, Jolson has the entire recording played for me.

It is a very clever song that Harold Arlen and Yip Harburg have written; especially good for Jolson, for he pokes fun at himself. The lyrics tell that Jolson wants to sing a "mammy" ditty, but the Yacht Club lads won't allow him, and in doing so they burlesque the popular songs: "The Dream Walking," "Balking School," "The Cottage by a Waterfall" type, the "Rhythm" song and everything else on the radio. "I Live to Singa" must really be heard to be appreciated—and I'm certain it will be.

Robert Taylor, Janet Gaynor and Douglas Fowley are seated at a night club table doing a scene for the flicker, "Small Town Girl." The director is William Wellman. Regardless of the type of story or who the star may be, Director Wellman doesn't change his style. He talks freely. He is never awed or impressed by the performers. He impresses the performers.

There is an orchestra in this sequence and also many dancing couples. Irene Hervey, who isn't in the picture, sits and watches her boy friend, Robert Taylor. While Director Wellman is arranging another setup, the orchestra entertains the extras. The orchestra is known as "Mickey Whelan and the Boys." Mickey Whelan has a fine band and their specialty is being the orchestra in pictures. They played in "Broadway Melody," "Rendezvous" and many others. Whelan says he would like the chance to play in a genuine night club or on the radio.

He shouts, "What do you want us to play?" and always some one shouts back, "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round." You can't go on any set without hearing it. Although Paramount is going to buy the song, it will be in a picture before they use it.

* * * *

"Show Boat" is being filmed and with many of the original cast—Helen Morgan, Sammy White, Francis X Mahoney, Paul Robeson and Charles Winninger. To one who found it a pleasure to drop into the Ziegfeld Theatre and see parts of this show again and again, the set at Universal studio is a place to visit.

Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein have written two new numbers for this lastest version of "Show Boat." They are "Ah Suits Me," to be sung by Paul Robeson, and "The Room Above," to be sung by Irene Dunne and Allan Jones.

I heard Robeson sing "Ah Suits Me." It is a song worthy of Kern, which is enough praise for any song.

His rendition clearly demonstrates the advantage of the screen as a medium. Robeson worked in a recording room and sang that song over and over until he recorded it the way he always wanted to sing it. In a theater or a concert hall, Robeson would have to use volume to be heard in the balcony. Robeson, in the recording room, sang into the microphone, which was so near it almost touched his lips. And if you didn't stand near the microphone you couldn't hear him. Yet on the screen Robeson is heard with more volume and power and tone quality than ever before.

* * * *

William Powell and Myrna Loy are playing a dramatic scene for "The Great Ziegfeld." Hollywood is honoring Florenz Ziegfeld. The two most important musicals being filmed are "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Show Boat." One is the story of his career and the other is the finest musical show he produced.

Powell is portraying Ziegfeld, and in this scene he is downcast. His latest show is a flop. Myrna Loy is portraying Billie Burke, and she encourages Ziggy. She says to him: "With your love for beauty you will never be cheap. Keep your promise. Have four hits on Broadway." He kept the promise.

It will be strange, but it will tell a story, a grand story, when a movie marquee reads: "The Great Ziegfeld 'Show Boat.'"

IDA LEWIS, whose mother and father before her were keepers at Lime Rock Lighthouse, off Newport, R. I., was one of America's most famous lighthouse keepers. She was born in the lighthouse in 1841 and grew up there. She became adept at swimming, rowing and at 17 performed her first feat of life saving. In 1879 she was made keeper by a special act of Congress and remained on the job 31 years, winning fame and honor as an efficient keeper and hardy life saver.

In her whole term of official duty, Ida Lewis left her post for overnight visits to the mainland only six times. Medals from the United States Government, the Humane Society of Massachusetts, the Life Saving Society of New York and other organizations were awarded to her and the people of Newport gave her a boat, Rescue, which was exhibited at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago.

Miss Lewis was married to William H. Wilson some years before she took charge of the lighthouse. The marriage was not successful, however, and she always was known by her maiden name.

The Gila monster, only known poisonous lizard, is found in arid areas of Southwestern United States. It grows to be about 2 feet long, and a banana-shaped tail in which excess food is stored up in the form of fat. When the Gila monster goes without food for a time it draws on this supply of fat for food. There is doubt as to the strength of a Gila monster's poison. It probably is sufficient to kill small animals readily, but a healthy man is likely to withstand it. However, cases of death from its bite have been reported.

COLORFUL snaches: My first interview with Helen Wills at Seabright, N. J., when she wouldn't desert her youthful pals unless Arthur Robinson, then on the American, bought a bag of lollypops . . . Jimmy Walker's speech at the Baseball Writers' dinner in which he said: "It is a pity that the cheers of yesterday have such a short echo" . . . The complaint from John D. Rockefeller, sr., at Ormond Beach, when I wrote that George F. Baker, the National City Bank tycoon, had beaten him at golf . . . Meeting H. G. Wells in my dressing room in a Broadway vaudeville theater, and startled that such a tiny body should house such a magnificient mind.

The greatest thrill I ever got was the first day my byline, newspaperese for signature, appeared in a New York paper, the Evening Mail. I opened the paper on the shuttle train that runs between Grand Central and Times Square, and it seemed that my heart would pound right through my ribs. It was a series of college sport notes, under a one-column head, but it seemed to me that from a literary standpoint it overshadowed Hugo, Milton and Goethe. That was in November, 1920.

Probably no writer has been on so many shipwrecked papers as myself, which probably is a form of criticism. The Hartford Post was sold two weeks after they hired me, which is par for the course. Later the Evening Mail, the New York Bulletin, the Miami Beach Tribune and the Graphic succumbed to the sheer force of my personality. But the News is too tough. In four years, I have not been able to collapse it.

My greatest shock was working for Norman Thomas. The shock came when I climbed the steps of the old Call, and found a statuette of Eugene Debs, who was excoriated by churchgoers. I said A Hail Mary as I passed Debs, but my fears were groundless. Thomas was a swell boss, and at the next desk to me sat Howard Brubaker, who was to click later on the New Yorker.

The first $30 bill I'd ever seen, a week's pay from the Hartford Post at Hartford, Conn. I asked my mother to let me carry it around for several days and flashed is casually on the Liberty Square gang. Every 5 minutes, I'd stick my hand in my pocket to see that it was still there.

Celeb who gave me my greatest thrill. I think, was Tex Rickard. Second to that would be Flo Ziegfeld. Both of them were were alike in that neither was difficult to meet, but Rickard was by far the more interesting talker, with the keenest observation of any of the big-timers.

The finest speaker I ever heard, Dr. Sheehan, the Jesuit orator; the finest writer I ever read, William Bolitho, who draws a deserved tribute from Walter Duranty in his "I Write As I Please."

The greatest book I ever read, Lincoln Steffen's autobiography, a showcase for one of the fine intellects of our time, and a tip-off as to where a lot of my colleagues have swiped their ideas.

My first airplane ride, from Boston to New York in a Ford trimotor. It was bumpy all the way. Later, I saw the same type plane in Penn Station exhibited as a relic, and I wondered how any of us ever had nerve enough to ride in it. The most nerve-tingling airplane ride, with a drunken pilot and a drunken party of four that had taken too much applejack at the Princeton-Yale game and wanted to play house in the clouds.

First great wit I ever met, the late Simeon Ford. I used to caddy for him at the Apawamis Club, after school, with the Gwathneys, the Laidlaws, the Wesley Olers and George Barnes. Tall and spare, Mr. Ford was funnier on a golf course than at a banquet dais.

The first trip to a barber shop, without my father or brother escorting me. The grins on the faces of the other patrons when the barber shaved the fuzz from my cheeks with a hair-clipper. It was mortifyin'.

Learning to use a typewriter on my first New York job, on Roy K. Moulton's machine. John Murphy, in charge of the Mail morgue, made me copy New York Times editorials day after day. As a result, I've been an independent Democrat ever since.

Banker Urges England Return German Land

York, England, Jan. 7 (AP).—Viscount Downe, industrialist and banker, urged the British government tonight to return to Germany colonies taken from her by the World War. He said at the annual meeting of the York County Savings Bank:

"Surely, we have learned the lesson from war that we cannot with impunity upset the economic structure of the world and get away with it. I wish our government would screw themselves to the point of returning to Germany colonies taken from her after the war."

THE campaign to relieve Veterans' Administration workers of charges for quarters and subsistence which they do not and cannot use seemed near victory yesterday with the report that the House Appropriations Committee had recommended $2,000,000 more for the Administration to make this possible.

BAKER.

Relief for these employes, among the lowest paid in Government service, has been one of the major objectives of the American Federation of Government Employes.

The employes concerned are mainly attendants at the various veterans' hospitals. Present laws and practice provide that they are expected to live at the hospitals so long as quarters are available there, and to take meals there as well.

Until recent years this did not cause serious hardship to many workers, for the majority of such employes were single, but since the depression many married men have taken jobs in the veterans' hospitals. The pay is generally $100 a month or less, and the deduction of about $35 a month for unused quarters and food leaves income inadequate for the support of their families.

The Veterans' Administration last year made an investigation of the problem of these employes. Early in the present session of Congress $2,000,000 was requested to relieve veterans' hospital workers by permitting them to receive full salaries and to live off the hospital grounds.

A bill, introduced by Representative Hampton B. Fulmer, of South Carolina, would make it optional with the employe as to whether he would accept quarters, subsistence and laundry at Government institutions, and which would have such services paid for at actual cost to the Government.

The committee's report, under which the $2,000,000 is said to be made available in the Independent offices bill, with every assurance that it will remain in the bill, provides that this amount is to be obtained by making available a part of the unexpended balance of the 1935 appropriation. While this is to be used in part to meet higher costs of goods purchased by veterans hospitals, the rest will be used "to enable the administrator to adjust the terms of contract of employment of certain hospital personnel where deductions from pay are customarily made on account of quarters, subsistence and laundry service furnished to such employes and where, in the discretion of the administrator, it will be in the interest of the service to permit such employes to obtain QSL away from the hospital and eliminate the deductions from pay for same."

Edward Gillette, civil engineer and former State treasurer of Wyoming, who died last week at Sheridan, at the age of 81, had served the United States Government in various capacities. For two years he worked for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and from 1878 to 1880 was in the employ of the United States surveys west of the one hundredth meridian as topographer.

In 1899 the Government sent him to Alaska as engineer in charge of locating the Copper River Railroad. President Taft appointed Gillette in 1915 as chairman of the board of review of the Wyoming and Montana Reclamation Service. His last work for the Federal Government was in 1918, when he was commissioner of conciliation in the Department of Labor.

Dr. Harold C. Bryant, assistant director of the National Park Service, gave an illustrated lecutre last night in the Interior Department auditorium on the Yosemite National Park.

Members of Local No. 2 and other Government workers here will be grieved to hear of the death of Mr. Biller's sister at Dallas after Christmas. Mr. Biller returns to Washington on January 15.

Annual Cost Reviewed.

Q.—Can you give me some idea as to what was the yearly cost of the NRA?—A. T. LaCrosse (F).

A. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, the NRA spent $12,496,730.81. Since that time, during which the NRA has been dismantled on account of the unconstitutionality decision ot fhe Supreme Court, it has cost $4,236,000. The NRA was officially abolished by executive order effective January 1, 1936.

Constable Thrown Off Cliff; Man Held

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 7.—Edgar Rudy, 24, was seized as he stepped from a train here today and taken before Constable Charles W. Barnhart at the Washington County Hospital who identified him as the man Leighty at Hancock. Rudy had near Hancock early today. Barnhart was trailing a bandit who several hours earlier held up Sherman eighty at Hancock. Rudy had a revolver when arrested.

Leighty taxicab operator, was struck in the head and knocked unconscious by a robber who entered his home, ostensibly to pay a taxi bill. About $15 in cash and jewelry were taken by the bandit.

When Leighty recovered consciousness he summoned Constable Barnhart, who with other officers tracked the bandit in the snow to a point near Round Top, where he came upon him on a high cliff. The constable and suspect grappled and Barnhart was thrown over the cliff. His leg was fractured. He is believed to be also injured internally.

New Threat Uncovered In Allen

Junior From School of Pharmacy Potentially Another Berger.

Terps Use Few Tricks, Run Up 17-to-4 Lead at Half-Time.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

STILL ragged in spots, but withal a powerful ball club, the University of Maryland inaugurated its basketball season last night with an impressive 44-29 victory over Virginia Military Institute at Ritchie Coliseum. About 3,000 fans saw the Virginians fall before the Terrapins' withering and unrelenting fire.

But that isn't the real story. The best story is that Maryland has a player, a junior in the school of pharmacy from Baltimore, who looks like the best courtman to wear the black and gold since Bozie Berger matriculated at the Old Line school. He is Ben Allen, a brother of Jack Allen, who won his athletic spurs some years ago at Maryland.

Most Dangerous Man.

Allen, while not the high scorer of the evening, was by far the most dangerous and coolest man in Maryland's line-up. It was his smooth passing, his brainy floor generalship that set up plays. Not infrequently did he take a shot, however, and he usually found the mark. Allen will play in only those games scheduled for College Park.

With Bernie Buscher, Vic Willis, Al Waters and the others zipping along in high gear from the opening tap-off, Maryland found it easy to penetrate V. M. I.'s impotent defense and soon helped itself to a 17-4 lead. It actually was as easy as that. The Terps usually played straight basketball employing a minimum of trick stuff to score.

Cadets Stage Rally.

Maryland boasted a decided advantage in height and consequently reach, but it didn't outgame the Cadets, who rallied in the second half to redeem a portion of their lost prestige. Willie Shomo, center, and Read and MacRaffo, guards, were outstanding for the visitors. They had an abundance of spirit and aggressiveness, but they were nervous and erratic.

Maryland was in its best under the backboard, where Allen and Willis got in their best licks. V. M. I., rarely retrieved the ball in scuffles in this territory, principally because of the two lanky Maryland lads.

Fine or Suspension Is Faced by Jacobs

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 7.—The New York Athletic Commission may decide next week whether it will fine or suspend Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, for calling off the Joe Louis-Isidor Gastanaga fight, scheduled December 29 in Havana.

When Jacobs canceled the fight several weeks ago, he was fined $500 and suspended by the Cuban Boxing Commission, which announced it would expect similar action by the New York commission under a working agreement.

Chairman John J. Phelan, despite previous statements to the contrary, said today the New York commission does have an agreement with the Cuban commission, dated July 30, 1930 in which each agrees to honor the other's action, subject to review.

Dempsey Hits Stoefen Plan To Fight

'Needs Plenty of Weight,' He Says; Tennis Star Is Undismayed.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Lester Rollo Stoefen is deadly in earnest about his "white hope" business, and he thinks he has a chance.

The square-shouldered, tennis-playing string bean from the West Coast, here for the start of the indoor professional tour, refused to be daunted today when Jack Dempsey damned him with faint praise as a heavyweight prospect.

It was Dempsey who was to decide if Lengthy Lester should pursue his dream of gaining riches in the prize ring. So Lester Rollo went to Jack. The former champ looked him up and down, made him put up his dukes, and then dismissed his subject.

"He's a real nice boy," Dempsey said of the California handsome Dan with wavy blond hair, "a real nice boy, but he needs to fill out an awful, awful lot."

"Sure I need to fill out. I knew that before I came East. I'm no more than 180 now, and for 6 feet 4 that isn't enough. But I can put on the meat, okeh."

Stoefen was asked to take his hair down and admit the whole thing was a publicity gag. Did he really believe he had a chance of developing into a first-class heavyweight, with the possibility of a crack at Joe Louis, the Detroit Negro?

"Nuts to that. It might have been jumped on as a gag by Bill O'Brien (promoter of the tour) but the idea was mine and I wasn't kidding. I'm not kidding now, either. Why I could go up to 220 or better in a few months of conditioning in the woods. And for boxing, I've done plenty. Not as a professional, and not even real boxing as an amateur. But I've practiced lots in California, and they tell me I ought to be plenty good with my dukes."

Artie Donovan, who splits his time between teaching boxing at the New York Athletic Club and in refereeing professional jousts, says Lester is okeh, or will be.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

I SEE by the papers that the antis are bringing to bear against the bill to legalize horse racing the same old argument that failed 'em in their protests against legalized boxing in the District; namely, that the sport would bring to the Capital "an undesirable element."

POVICH.

They painted prize fighting as a highly commercialized racket depending for its support on the questionable characters of the half-world with fights as the common meeting ground for assorted types of racketeers, finaglers, loafers and bums. Now the estimable gentlemen of the Senate District Committee are branding horse racing with the same brush and apparently hope to get away with it.

But as far as boxing in the District has been concerned, the blue noses have been left holding the bag. Not the semblance of scandal's breath has touched the local boxing scene. Under the administration of the District Boxing Commission, fights here have been staged on a high plane and a stone thrown from the galleries into the front pews would as likely hit a Senator, a Congressman, a civic leader or prominent business man as it would to strike a numbers agent.

There can be no quarrel with the legalization of prize fighting in the District. All the fears of the reformers have been exploded. The only folks entitled to squawk are not the reformers but the fans. The big names and the rousing fights that promoters promised 'em have been all too rare, yet the sport has kept its hands clean. And, moreover, performed the feat of silencing the professional blue noses.

NEARBY Maryland apparently has failed to note an "undesirable element" that legalized horse racing has brought to the State.

No other State in the Union has as many tracks operating legally. Six race courses give Maryland approximately 112 days of racing each year yet its United States Senator, Mr. Tydings, has gone on record as being opposed to racing in Washington. Apparently Washington does not possess, in the opinion of the good Senator, the same immunity to the undesirable element that Maryland strangely boasts.

Once racing in Washington is legalized, the honor of the sport would be in the hands of a District Racing Commission to be appointed by the District Commissioners. If the racing bill were rejected on the grounds that the sport would attract an undesirable element to the city, it would be an admission, chiefly, that there are none here who have the ability to administer the office of racing commissioners. I doubt that.

Surely the District is as well equipped as Maryland, or any of the other 22 States in which racing is legalized, to superintend the sport. Maryland is untainted by horse-racing scandal except in isolated instances to which any industry is subject. There has never been any quarrel with the manner in which the sport has been conducted in our neighbor State, which, you remember, is inhabited by blue noses so unbending they were able to keep Sunday movies under the ban of the law until three years ago.

With the District Commissioners and every city department howling at budget cuts, with the unemployed and relief situations reaching serious crises, the gentlemen who enact the District's laws might well covet the taxes that legalized racing would pour into the city treasury. Maryland profited to the extent of $990,000 from its race tracks last year. That, I would say, is a huge sum of money.

In Short—

Selby Burch, the Washington trainer, is gambling $3,000 on his chances of winning the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap with the reformed plater Thursday . . . three grand was the cost of shipping the horse to the Pacific Coast in a box car . . . that sum entitles six stable hands to ride free . . . Clark Griffith, who at the end of the 1934 season declared that Bill Werber, of the Red Sox, was a $100,000 ball player, now asserts that he would not take Werber in an even swap for Cecil Travis . . . whom he visions as the Nats' regular shortstop next season and a .320 hitter in addition . . . Red Burman, Jack Dempsey's No. 1 White Hope, is, in fact, Kayo Burns, who dropped a decision to Young Van at Portner's Arena a coupla years ago . . . Van, a Post composing room apprentice, threatens to return to the ring if Burman represents America's chief White Hope.

Bath, Burman Fight Is Off; Words Fly

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The much publicized scrap between heavyweights Hank Bath and Red Burman, with those old palsy walsies, Jack Kearns and Jack Dempsey, whooping it up in rival corners, will not go on at the Garden Friday night.

The New York State Athletic Commission today refused to license Bath in time for a Friday night appearance.

Is Not Divulged.

"We have asked for this data, Phelan said, "but it will not arrive here in time for Mr. Bath to fight Friday night. Therefore, gentlemen, the fight can not be held."

Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, Garden president, and Promoter Jimmy Johnston, who were called down town to receive the knockout in person, could hardly restrain themselves.

"It's both outrageous and high handed," said the indignant colonel.

Bath and Burman were being featured on Friday night's show largely because they are managed by Kearns and Dempsey, respectively. The Garden had advertised the two Jacks would appear as seconds.

While Phelan would not discuss what it is the commission wants to learn about Bath, other sources said it had to do with a recent fight in which Bath participated on the Coast.

New Official Ruling.

After administering its oral kayo to the Garden, the commission came up with a new official ruling, this one prohibiting fight clubs from giving publicity to a card for a specific evening until it has been approved by the commission.

Johnston later announced he had telephoned to Dr. Harry Martin, chairman of the California commission, and had received his assurances that both Bath and Kearns were in good standing in that State.

1935 Talent Cost Nats $103,000

THE WASHINGTON BASEBALL CLUB expended $103,000 for new player talent during the 1935 season, it was revealed yesterday at the annual stockholders' meeting at Griffith Stadium.

The purchase of Pitchers Buck Newsom and Irving Hadley, from the St. Louis Browns, accounted for $60,000 of the money spent, stockholders were told by the club's financial report. Newsom cost the team $40,000, and Hadley was bought at a cost of $20,000.

The remainder—$43,000—was expended for minor league talent, purchased chiefly from the Nats' farms at Chattanooga and Albany. The man among the rookies who bore the highest price tag, according to President Clark Griffith, was Third Baseman Buddy Lewis, obtained from Chattanooga. The Nats turned over $15,000 to their Chattanooga farm for Lewis, Griffith said.

Turned Down $37,500.

"But that does not represent Lewis' true value," Griffith added. "During mid-season of 1935, the Washington Club as owner of the Chattanooga team, turned down an offer of $37,500 for Lewis made by the Chicago Cubs."

The list of other players bought by the Nats during 1935 for various sums ranging from $5,000 to $10,000 included Outfielders Dee Miles and Red Marion, and Infielder Johnny Mihalic, all of Chattanooga; Third Baseman Roberto Estallela, and Shortstop Joe Bokino, from Albany, and First Baseman Ed Remorenko, who was signed as a free-agent for $3,000.

The Washington club was not a money-maker last season but its financial losses were "not so much," according to Griffith, who declined to make public the audit of the 1935 season.

At the traditionally harmonious meeting, Griffith, William Richardson and Edward B. Eynon, jr., were re-elected as the board of directors.

Officers to Remain.

The officers of the club, who are appointed by the directors, will remain the same for the ensuing year with Griffith as president, Richardson as vice president, and Eynon as secretary-treasurer. They hold the controlling interest among the stockholders.

All actions of the officers during 1935 were ratified by the stockholders and plans for the 1936 season fully approved, according to Griffith.

"The Washington club did not show a profit for the 1935 season," said Griffith, "but, contrary to reports, its losses were not as heavy as had been rumored. The deficit was not much and the stockholders agree that the outlook for next season is excellent."

Helen Moody Sets 2,001-Volley Mark

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 7.—Helen Wills Moody, whose great tennis comeback last year won her the Wimbledon crown and world acclaim, raced over a court for an hour and eighteen minutes today to help establish what is believed to be a freak record for the net game.

Mrs. Moody and Howard Kinsey, former Davis Cup player and now a local professional, volleyed the ball continually over the net 2,001 times.

What started off as a practice session to prepare for a trial Friday morning, developed into a marathon that ended when Kinsey had to give a lesson.

The pat ball endurance contest was refereed and officially tabulated by Henry "Bobs" Roberts, San Francisco sports follower. Under the rules of the contest, the ball was hit either in the air or on the first bounce.

HORACE STONEHAM,

Stoneham, 32, Seen as Head Of Giants

Son of Late Owner Would Be Youngest Chief in History.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Horace Stoneham, 32-year-old son of the late Charles A. Stoneham, is slated to succeed his father as majority owner and president of the New York Giants, thus becoming the youngest chief executive of a club in the history of major league baseball.

Young Stoneham is still in Hot Springs, Ark., where his father died last night. He was not prepared to make any comment on the situation, but club officials here indicated there is no reason to believe there will be a change in ownership.

The succession of young Stoneham to the ownership, a step deemed likely by Leo J. Bondy, the elder Stoneham's attorney and treasurer of the Giants, will mark the third time in major league history a father-owner has been succeeded by a son.

Comiskey Took Reins.

In 1921 when Charles A. Comiskey died the Chicago White Sox became the property of his son, Louis. The following year Phillip K. Wrigley succeeded his deceased father, William Wrigley, as owner of the Chicago Cubs.

For five years Horace Stoneham has been doing office work with the Giants. His main responsibility has been the supervision of tickets, but he also worked on the opposite side of a desk from Jim Tierney, the club secretary. He attended Fordham University. He is married and has two children.

Two years ago Charles A. Stoneham said he would not consider selling the club unless an "unrefusable offer" was made. This was taken to mean a price in the vicinity of $3,000,000.

Stoneham's place as vice president of the National League will be filled when club owners meet here next month to go over the 1936 schedule. Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, is slated to fill the vacancy.

Pool ¼-inch Short, Record Is Ruled Out

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 7 (AP).—One-fourth of an inch cost Hibbing High School a national swimming record and chances of having future marks recognized. Coach Paul Lokens' medley relay team bettered the State and national times, and applied for national record recognition.

Requested to submit certified measurements of the pool, L. M. Becker of the Hibbing Junior College faculty found it measured 59 feet, 11¾ inches—just one-fourth of an inch short of the standard 60 feet.

Seer Hornsby Says Tigers Will Win

Red Sox Still in Need of Hurlers, He Asserts; Lauds Simmons.

Champions Added More Power Than Boston, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 7.—Tom Yawkey's cash may have turned the American League into a two-team affair, but outspoken Rogers Hornsby doesn't believe the Boston Red Sox have the pennant in the bag.

"Heck, no," the Browns' manager said today. "They still only have three pitchers and maybe Marcum is not a first division pitcher. Maybe he can go best when there's not so much strain. And don't forget that Ferrell and Grove ain't getting any younger. You don't see a club win often with three pitchers, do you?"

Aided by Simmons.

"Detroit did more strengthening by getting Simmons than Boston did with all its buying," Rogers said. "Simmons will certainly help the Tigers. No matter what kind of year he has, he'll drive in enough runs to make a big difference."

Turning from the two standouts to survey the rest of the field, Hornsby said he could see no pennant threat in either New York or Cleveland.

"New York shouldn't worry anybody," he declared. "If the Yankees don't do something to add strength, I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see them drop to fifth.

"I thought Cleveland would do something last year, but the club folded up. It looks like they can't take it on the road, and, remember, half the games are played away from home."

Joe Cronin May Shift Werber to Outfield

San Francisco, Jan. 7 (AP).—Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, predicted today his 1936 club would be a real contender for the American League baseball pennant and indicated he might try to convert a third baseman into an outfielder to make room for new talent.

Foxx will take over first base duties and Cronin regards himself as a fixture at shortstop. To make room for McNair, the Red Sox pilot may shift Bill Werber from third base to an outfield post. This would leave Oscar Melillo at second.

"We'll juggle the boys around in spring training and from the talent available I think the Red Sox will have the best infield in the league," Cronin said. "I've had Werber in mind as an outfield prospect for some time and yet we are well fixed in that department with Cramer, Manush, Almada, Cook and Graham.

Jean Bauer Says U. S. Woman Will Win British Tournament

A Staff Correspondent.

MIAMI BILTMORE CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 7.—Jean Bauer, modest 24-year-old Providence, Rhode Island, golf star, truly one of America's best players, thinks that a United States woman golfer will win the British championship this year.

Miss Bauer, medalist in the 1935 National Women's championship at Minneapolis, who arrived here today to prepare for the defense of her Miami Biltmore title, stated that the American feminine golfers were fast improving, and expected one of 'em to break the English monopoly.

"An American never has won the British championship," Miss Bauer stated, "but the time is ripe. We'll have a strong team representing the United States in the Curtis Cup International matches with Great Britain in May, and all of the Yankee girls will compete in the British meet."

Wethered Won.

Mrs. Edwin C. Vare, the former Glenna Collett, twice made bold bids for the British championship, each time reaching the finals only to be repulsed by the great Joyce Wethered in the finals.

Mrs. Vare, who regained her national championship last September by defeating 17-year-old Patty Berg—her fifth crown—will be named captain of the American Curtis Cup forces. On the strength of her great playing last season, the famous Glenna looms as the Yankees' foremost challenger for the British title.

Another outstanding challenger is Mrs. John D. Crews, the former Maureen Orcutt, who is playing the best golf of her career.

Among those who are likely to win places on the Curtis Cup team besides Mrs. Vare and Mrs. Crews are Miss Bauer, Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City; Charlotte Glutting, the long-driving Englewood, N. J., star; Marion Miley, the daughter of a Lexington, Ky., professional; Patty Berg and probably Lucille Robinson.

Retained Trophy.

Six or seven players will make the trip late in April, it is understood. The Americans won the first Curtis Cup matches in England in 1932, and retained the trophy in September of 1934 at the Chevy Chase course in Washington.

Miss Bauer, who won three important tournaments last winter, has a beautiful swing and is particularly good with her chip shots. If there is going to be a new woman's sensation in golf, she may be the answer.

Miss Bauer praised two Washington women golfers—Mrs. Betty Mackley, Middle Atlantic champion, and Helen Detweiler. She said that Miss Detweiler deserved a better fate in Mason-Dixie tournament at White Sulphur last fall, when she lost to Fritzie Steifel in the semi-finals on a "freak."

Marty Gallagher Goes Under Knife

While Marty Gallagher lay in Emergency Hospital yesterday in painful after-effects of a hernia operation, the story came out telling how the 26-year-old heavyweight fistic hope of the District weathered his fight with King Levinsky last fall suffering from the injury which was eventually to bring him under the surgeon's knife.

Gallagher was resting uncomfortably yesterday following an operation performed on him Monday by Dr. John Lyons, local specialist. At the same time it developed that he had entered the Levinsky fight with the injury strapped up.

Amateur Stars To Battle Tonight

Matt Twomey, recently appointed boxing mentor at the National Guard Armory, will make an auspicious debut tonight when an all-star amateur card is presented at the Armory. Eight bouts comprise the program, which offers no fewer than eight District and Virginia champions.

In the main event Lou Gevinson, featherweight champion of Washington, will clash with J. P. Morgan, who holds a similar title in Virginia. Dan Stetson, National Guard heavyweight champion, will box with Ernest Walker, of the Navy Yard, in a semifinal capacity.

Ninety Per Cent of Wrestling On the Level, Proclaims Joe Turner—And Gives His Reasons

By Bill McCormick.

ORDINARILY, one would feel exceedingly foolish going to a wrestling promoter, of all people, for the answer to that age-old question—is wrestling on the level? But of course, the fact that the wrestling promoter in question happened to be Joe Turner would put a different aspect on the matter.

As a matter of fact, ordinarily one would feel exceedingly foolish in doubting the dishonesty of the grapple-and-grimace game, what with everybody who ever has seen a couple of grunt and groaners in action—and many who haven't—ready to take oath that the last up-and-up mat match took place when Odysseus and Ajax had it out.

Really Serious.

But, it so happens that this writer has on several occasions wandered innocently into little groups of wrestlers, wrestling promoters, wrestling moguls and wrestling what-not, at times when they were discussing their trade. We have wandered into groups of fighters and fight hangers-on discussing their business, bunches of race track people talking over conditions in their racket and many other groups in which we had no business poking our nose, but never have we seen people who take their profession as seriously as do wrestlers.

Honestly, these boys who are working in the sport that is supposed to be one super-colossal racket discuss holds, what would have happened if, what will happen if and such matters with an earnestness that would do credit to a solemn conclave of Supreme Court judges.

Wandering into such discussions and picking up scraps of conversation here and there that we knew were meant for cauliflowered ears only, gave rise to the serious doubts about the dishonesty of wrestling that sent us to Turner for an explanation.

Admits a Few Fakes.

"Certainly wrestling bouts are put in the bag—on very rare occasions," granted Joe with alarming naivete. "But in more than 90 per cent of the matches today the best man wins."

"Prove it," we demanded, still clinging desperately to our one remaining illusion.

"Take Londos, for instance," offered Joe generously. "Take Londos. While he was champion he wrestled no less than 800 times, probably against 350 or 400 different opponents. In any one of those matches, his opponent could have become famous—and rich—in a few minutes by pinning the Greek. They didn't do it, did they?"

Turner was asked about the vague rumors we had heard that a large "protection" guarantee had to be posted to insure Londos' winning before he would work.

"I know dozens of wrestlers who went to the mat with Londos who didn't have $20 to put up for a guarantee," Joe insisted. "Even if they were required to post a $20,000 guarantee they wouldn't win, a man could make more than that by tossing the champ."

"You probably won't believe it," Joe answered with conviction, "But before that match I had a long talk with Rudy Dusek and some of the other big shots in the game, the guys who book the matches and so forth, and they told me honestly they didn't know what would happen. They were as surprised as anyone, however, when the Irishman did beat Jimmy."

"It is my personal opinion that Jim could have beaten O'Mahoney any time he wanted to, but he got caught in one of the Irishman's bear hugs and got two ribs broken. After that, he didn't have a chance."

We ventured the opinion that if Londos could have thrown Danno at any time he had no business fooling around with him.

"There you have your 'exhibition' stuff," Joe admitted. "The best man sometimes is so much better than the other man that he could throw him in a few minutes. To give the customers a run for their money, the best man gets himself in holds to keep matters going—but he almost always wins."

Yessir, wrestling's just as honest as boxing, as politics, as any other game you want to name. There

Polly Shugrue Sets Season Pin Mark

Rolls Three-Game 405 as Ladies' Loop Resumes Its Activities.

THE Washington Ladies League resumed activities last night at the Recreation alleys after a two-week respite and were greeted by a new season record set by Polly Shugrue, of the El Gees, who chalked up a three-game total of 405 after chipping in a 157 game. The new mark supersedes the 396 rolled by Catherine Quigley.

The Shamrocks started the second series by taking undisputed possession of first place with three victories over the Nomads, shooting 544 for high game. The second place Columbians were upset twice by the El Gees, whose 1,592 total pinfall was best for the night. The Beeques blanked the Colonials and the Cardinals gained a 2-to-1 edge over the Vee Gees.

"Reds" Megaw, top average shooter in the Columbia Heights League, stole the show at Arcadia, spilling games of 146, 128 and 171 for a season record set of 445. In the big game the Galiher & Huguely ace missed a two-pin break to fall short of Eddie Espey's record score of 174. At that his game is only third high, Johnny Swope having 172.

Arcadia received some consolation in dropping two games to Galliher & Huguely, shooting a new season game mark of 656, six pins more than the Vincent Barbers' former record score.

The league leadership changed hands when the Hessick Coal Co. five received its first whitewash, bowing to the Vincent Barbers, to relinquish first place to the Highway Engineers, the latter team blanking Bovello. Ambassador Laundry took the nod over Logan Motor.

In the biggest upset in the Church League at Lucky Strike, Metropolitan trimmed the league-leading First Brethren twice. Johnny Hall, of Douglas No. 1, captured individual honors with a 155 game and sparkling 420 set.

Honors in the Lutheran Church Ladies' League at Arcadia were shared by H. Wertman (Keller Memorial) and Heine (Grace), with a 115 game and 296 set, respectively. Georgetown captured high team game with 466 and high total pinfall was annexed by Grace with 1,346.

Falk's (Keller Memorial) 145 game and L. Hoover's (St. Paul No. 2) 384 set, led the list of individual feats in the Lutheran Church Men's League at Arcadia. Grace's 589 game and Keller Memorial's 1,641 set topped the team efforts.

Wrestling on Level, Claims Joe Turner

are occasional fixed matches, but, as the feller says, the only spot that isn't fixed some time or another, is fishing."

"If the best man always wins, that makes O'Mahoney the best man, doesn't it?" we queried, still cherishing a hope of entangling Joe.

"Not necessarily. Londos might beat him. I told you about the broken ribs which I think cost Jim the championship. Now Londos doesn't want to wrestle anybody but O'Mahoney for the title and the other boys think he should make a tour or two of the circuit to show he isn't washed up. I don't know how that'll work out.

"My opinion is that this Dean Detton, who meets Joe Cox here Thursday night is the best looking prospect, but the boys who have been watching him closely say Ernie Dusek is really getting the stuff.

"I dunno about the best man, but I do know that whoever he is, he'll win—and that wrestling's as much on the up and up as any other game, even baseball."

It all sounded so convincing it destroyed our last illusion.

Two Choices Bow In Miami Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 7.—Two seeded entries, one of them Marcel Rainville, Canadian amateur champion, tasted defeat today as eight others advanced into the third round of the Miami Biltmore Tennis tournament.

A hulking, determined Minnesotan, Weston Painter, of Minneapolis, accounted for Rainville, ranked No. 1 in the foreign entries, in surprisingly easy fashion, 6—2, 6—4.

Runyan Leader In Averages For Year

Shot 72.29 Per 18 Holes for 55 Rounds; Picard Was Runner-up.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The old guard of professional clubswingers—the Hagens, Sarazens and Diegels—faltered during 1935 as only one of them finished among the ten top scorers, according to final medal averages for the year released today by the Professional Golfers Association.

Heading the list was Paul Runyan, youthful professional from White Plains, N. Y., who captured the P. G. A. title in 1934 and won the most money on the winter circuit a year ago. For turning in an average of 72.29 per 18 holes on 55 rounds of approved tournament play, Runyan received the Radix Cup, awarded annually to the professional with the year's lowest medal average.

Players who participated in at least 40 rounds of golf in championship events and tournaments with $3,000 or more of cash prizes, were eligible for ranking.

3 Heurich Aces Resign After Dispute

THREE of the Heurich Brewers' basketball team, only professional five in the city, have quit the club. Chris Heurich, jr., owner, yesterday admitted the resignation of Capt. Moon Evans, guard; Joe Croson, center, and Bucky Buscher, forward.

Heurich said the players left the club "because they felt they were not getting enough out of it." It developed that Evans, Croson and Buscher had demanded a steady salary instead of a percentage of the gate receipts and upon refusal of the management to accede to their demand had handed in their uniforms.

Heurich explained that the gate receipts have been turned over to the players for division after each game, after necessary expenses had been deducted. Uniforms and balls have been furnished by the management. Ralph Bennie has been elected captain to succeed Evans. Bob Wilson, Tiny Ingham, Everett Russell and Roy Yowell are the other members remaining with the club. Heurich is endeavoring to secure three new players.

According to the resigned players, the basis upon which they were being paid failed to compensate them for their services. They cited the fact that the New York Celtics were paid several hundred dollars for their two appearances here against Heurich's, while the Heurich players shared approximately $10 for each game.

In the early games with Heurich's this season, the players were reported to have received only $5 each as their share of the gate.

Congress Heights Five Humbles Eagles, 29-17

A battle royal developed last night in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at Hine Junior High School when Congress Heights defeated Southeast Eagles, 29 to 17. In the only other game played Eighth Street Business Men won 2 to 20 from the Epworth Methodists.

Congress Heights had the edge over the Eagles through the accurate "pot shots" of Taylor and Xander, each scoring three double pointers from the center of the court. Beck and Speith were the stars for the Eighth streeters, annexing five field goals apiece.

Mt. Rainier High Five Beats Kendall, 31-20

Mount Rainier High School made it an even break for the season with Kendall School of Washington last night by turning back the visitors, 31 to 20, on the Mount Rainier court. Kendall eked out a, 20-19, victory in December.

Mount Rainier took a 14-10 lead in the first half last night and widened the lead to more comfortable proportions in the late going, with Tilly Scott, veteran guard, leading the scoring with 14 points.

VERMILLION. REA. HAHN. SNOW.

MERCHANT. ITALIANO. KOUSTENIS. LOWE.

By John R. Vosburgh,

THEY'VE got a watch-word over at Tech High right at present which goes like this: "Eastern Can Be Beat—Eastern Can Be Beat, etc., etc." The basketball team repeats it. Coach Rusty Thompson, alert new leader of Tech's basketball fortunes, repeats it. The students repeat it.

They know Eastern has one of the great teams of inter-history this year, but it doesn't seem to curb their optimism. On Friday, Tech battles Eastern on the Tech floor—an underdog, if ever there was one—and almost everybody but the team's followers, the coach and the team thinks Eastern will win almost as it pleases.

The team's frame of mind distinctly does not indicate that Eastern will winj as it pleases—or otherwise, for that matter. Thompson, former George Washington University freshman coach, says he does not play basketball "just for fun."

"I play to win," the red-headed leader says, and the team has absorbed the same point of view. Capt. George Hahn, the only member of last year's team back in uniform, asserts with his chief that "Eastern can be beat."

Hahn is the balancing element of the team, one of the best guards in the city. Wes Snow, a good first baseman and a better basketball center, is taking care of the pivot job to perfection. Walton Merchant and Jimmy Vermillion pair up at the forwards and Bill Rea takes care of the other guard position with Hahn.

Every team has its scoring ace and Vermillion is Tech's. The lanky, rather carefree junior, has averaged something like 9 points per game. Merchant and Snow have been lending able scoring support, with Hahn and Snow particularly prominent in the floorwork.

Coach Thompson, out to give Tech winning material for some time to come, has formed a junior varsity squad as a means of developing his younger candidates and strengthening his reserve forces. Mike Italiano, Gus Koustenis and Horace Lowe are especially promising on the second five with Tom Dobbins, a center with plenty of height and Bernie Pickett rounding out the reserve squad. Only Rea, Hahn and Lowe will be lost by graduation in June.

Forced to build a team from the ground up as the result of loss of all of last season's regulars by the diploma route, Thompson nevertheless now has a combination which, while probably not of championship caliber, is as much a choice to take second place in the series or score a spectacular upset as Western, Roosevelt or Central.

A victory over the Catholic University Freshmen and a 41-20 triumph over George Washington High of Alexandria are the chief decorations on Tech's record thus far. Concentrating on the series, Coach Thompson says he has not actually had the team cut loose as yet.

Card Fighters Face Tough N. C. State

UNACCUSTOMED to coaching losing boxing teams, Coach Eddie LaFond, of Catholic University, yesterday set about making adjustments in the 1936 Cardinal punching machine which he hopes will develop enough power to win from North Carolina State Saturday night at Brookland. It will be the Cards' initial test of the year.

But the stocky tutor was no little disturbed to hear that State's three best fighters are in the lighter classes, for it is in the first three weights, 115, 125 and 135 pounds, that Catholic has been hit hardest.

Ben Mayfield, State lead-off battler, is a former North Carolina high school champion from Raleigh and, while he needs collegiate experience, he has shown a champion's ability to dish out punishment and the ability to take it.

Sorrell Has Punch.

Russ Sorrell, another Raleigh lad fighting at 125 pounds, also needs experience, but he packs a punch and inexperienced punchers are always dangerous unless reposing on the canvas. In an informal match with Atlantic Christian, he defeated his opponent on a technical kayo in the first round.

Glenn Penland, who will appear in the 135-pound class, is a veteran of two years' experience and a clever ringman. He will be pitted against Carmen La Salle.

Others whom Catholic must face are Joe Ryneska, football star, who is short on boxing skill, but long on endurance and color. He is a veritable windmill in action, pumping a steady stream of leather at his rival until one of the two hits the deck. Lou Marks, 175-pounder, never has fought before but Coach Peele Johnson likes his chances of succeeding. He is fast and punches well with either hand.

Tech Basketers Beat Gonzaga High Easily

Tech High indulged in some passing practice yesterday in subduing Gonzaga High, 19 to 10, at Tech High gymnasium. The Maroon took a 13-4 lead in the first half and coasted to victory in the concluding periods. The Purple annexed but three baskets.

Walton Merchant, led the Tech attack, with 9 points. In a preliminary the Tech Junior Varsity team nosed out the Gonzaga Jayvees, 14 to 12. Gus Koustinas, of Tech played in both games.

CENTRAL HIGH had the George Washington Freshman basketball gang on the spot for a change yesterday at the Central gymnasium, but failed by a slim margin—6 points—of rubbing 'em out. The college boys, playing in their customary rough and ready fashion, were given their toughest battle of the season to pull out a 33-27 victory.

The team which had mopped up Eastern High's inter-high champions, 38 to 20, on their own court was staggering around weakly at the finish against Central, striving desperately to maintain a big lead taken in the first half. Coach Jack Ray's youngsters, most of whom will be at Central for one, two or three years to come, not only had the Freshmen against the wall in the scoring column but ruffled their dignity no end.

The Central football team comprising a part of the audience cheered the court five on from start to finish and the Freshmen retaliated with verbal retorts and sallies aimed pricipally at Billy Vermillion, the football star, who was often making the belligerent Freshmen look rather silly by his all-court activities.

Fones Leads Scorers.

If the talent of Don Fones, eagle-eyed forward of the Mount Pleasanters, ever needed further proof it got it yesterday when the blond sharp-shooter outscored everybody else on the floor with 13 points, including five baskets.

Central spotted the Freshmen a 20-13 lead in the first half. A couple of sleepers missed by Dewey Poole and Bob Saffran cost Central some valuable points, but the high school came back in the second half to draw within two points of the Freshmen at 21-19 on baskets in a row by Vermillion, Sam Fox and Capt. Bill Thompson, whose floor play stood out prominently throughout.

The Freshmen, with Tom Faris and Bruce Borum leading the way, came back to go to 25-19 before Fones and Vermillion drew up to 27-23 again.

Put Game on Ice.

Borum again led a Freshman rally which put the game on ice at 33-24. A foul by Vermillion and a basket by Fones kept Central in the running but a couple of Central long shots in the closing moments hit the ceiling and gymnastic ropes to add irony to defeat.

The Freshmen had their winning streak of 9 straight games barely intact at the finish.

Roosevelt Beaten In Extra Period

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Jan. 7.—Finding the score at the end of the game deadlocked at 22-all, Mount St. Joseph's High School's dribblers were required to play an extra period before subduing the Roosevelt High School basketeers, of Washington, 26 to 24.

This victory marked the Josephites' second conquest of the day on their court, having previously taken the measure of Charlotte Hall, 47-24.

Billy Knell and Bob Kornick, forwards, combined in the extra session to win the contest. Kornick, after registering a field goal to tie the score at 24-all, made good a foul shot which gave the hosts a one-point lead. Knell followed by making good a free shot, to account for the margin of victory. Knell also was high-point scorer with 8 points.

C.U., G.W. Fives On Road Trip Tonight

TWO troupes of District college athletes currently engaged in the basketball business hie themselves to foreign fields tonight to seek new laurels in their chosen profession. Catholic University meets Mount St. Mary's at Emmitsburg, Md., while George Washington invades Wake Forest for a tussle with the Deacons.

Apparently still rusty after a sustained absence from basketball, and still possessed with a footballish desire to smear the opposition, the Cardinals will be the underdogs tonight. But George Washington, which has steam-rollered all but one opponent into submission, is a top-heavy favorite to dispose of Wake Forest.

Coach "Fod" Cotton is resigned to the fact that the Cardinals will not be their old selves against the Mounts, but he figures that perseverance and the law of averages may pull them through to victory. Mount St. Mary's, boasting a veteran aggregation, is ranked as one of the Old Line State's most potent clubs.

Starting Line-Up.

Capt. Bernie Lieb, center; Hermie Schmarr and "Irish" Carroll, forwards, and Sam Pagano and Bill Adamaitis, guards, probably will appear in the starting line-up.

Bill Reinhart, G. W. mentor, intends to use the same players who have been running wild since the start of the season. Milt Schonfeld, Hal Kiesel, Tuffy Leemans, Ben Goldfadden, Tommy O'Brien and the others will be in there firing away for the Buff and Blue.

Battler Plans To Gamble On Right

Will Shoot the Works at Start of Fight on Jan. 17, He Says.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (AP).—Leaving his 2,000-acre farm in the wide open spaces of North Dakota, Charley Retzlaff arrived today to begin training for his 15-round battle with Joe Louis, January 17, with respect in his heart, but with a grin on his face.

"So they're calling me the 'condemned' man, are they?" he asked. "I hope to fool 'em just as I fooled 'em before."

The big raw-boned rancher, victorious by knockouts in 50 out of 70 fights, has seen the Brown Bomber in action three times, and is convinced he has figured out a way to beat him. He intends to gamble on his right hand which brought down Art Lasky twice and enabled him to score the first knockout victory over the veteran, Tom Heeney.

Will Shoot the Works.

"I'm going to fight Louis just like I hunt—go out and try to bring him down," Retzlaff said. "Louis can box and he can hit, but I figure he can be hurt if I hit him. Backing up, covering up, and letting Louis set the pace will not beat him. Louis has not been hit in his fights. He has had his own way.

"I'm going to gamble and let the old right hand go, and if I connect I might change the entire complexion of the heavyweight situation. If I miss and get flattened, I'll have the satisfaction of knowing I shot the works first.

"Nobody's going to say I was beaten before I climbed into the ring," Retzlaff vowed. "I know if I am cautious against Louis he will knock my teeth down my throat, so I'm going to toss everything I have at him from the opening bell."

High Schools to Play Four Contests Today

Central, Western, Roosevelt and Eastern High Schools see action in basketball today. Roosevelt takes on heavy assignment in the Maryland Freshmen at 3:30 p. m. The game will be played in the Ritchie Coliseum at the university.

At the same time, Washington-Lee High of Ballston, Va., will be visiting Eastern, while Friends School visits Western and St. John's High meets Central, at Central. The latter game promises to be highlight of the day for the city proper, St. John's being the Prep School champions of Washington and Central flushed with its fine showing against the George Washington Freshmen yesterday.

Armful Winner by Nose at Tropical

Fairisk Fails To Last, But Is Second

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 7 (AP).—Mrs. W. H. Cane's Armful a daughter of Chance Shot that raced as if dead short in her one previous start at this point, scored a thrilling nose victory in the fourth race, best offering on the card here today. R. A. Firestone's recent winner, Fairisk, carried the bulk of the play and barely failed to last. She saved the place by a length from W. J. Hirsch's Columbiana.

Seven three-year-olds went postward for the six furlong dash, with claiming prices ranging from $3,500 tops to $2,500 bottom. Armful, well ridden by Jimmy Stout, finished her journey in 1:12 1-5 and returned $10.50.

Good Omen, a fast beginner with a faint heart, led Fairisk to the top of the stretch, were she stopped and allowed the choice to take a daylight advantage. Armful, kept close up from the start, responded to Stout's call in the stretch run. The black miss collared Fairisk right on the wire. Columbiana, as in her Maryland races, took too long to find her stride. Swamp Angel, which finished fourth, received little help from Jockey H. Schutte in the final drive.

John's Birthday Wins.

John's Birthday, an unsuccessful tip several times, found the right spot in the fifth, a gallop of a mile and a sixteenth. Winged Flight, the favorite, followed the $15.90 shot across the wire, three lengths back and a head before the slow beginner, Eddie J. Bocasette, stole a good lead around the first turn. He went from first to last while John's Birthday assumed command. Winged Flight, last away, found his racing legs in the final 3 furlongs but John's Birthday easily held him safe through the stretch.

The talent selected the right one in the sixth. Bright Emerald, a sprint winner, essayed the 1-mile distance and made good by three lengths to pay $4.20. Lady Grandace, an outsider, ran over all but the leader in the stretch and was second by a half-length over Muscle In, which had a rough trip. Bright Emerald assumed an early lead, drew far away and was ridden out to assure victory. A jam at the first turn saw Almarine bumped to last place, ruining her chances.

Tropical Park, Jan. 7.

Dear Al:

Some of the big betters here are still raving because Lone Hand finished second to Colorist yesterday. In their previous meeting, Lone Hand had won by four lengths. Despite the fact that there was a big shift in weight favoring Colorist, I was among those who helped make Lone Hand an 80-cents-on-the-dollar betting proposition. What with the fact that Lone Hand is a bad-legged fellow at best, I realized the folly of my bet when the race was over. I am indebted to my friend, Beau Belmont, for the following bit of information concerning the name of the C. V. Whitney filly, Tale of Woe. This is one of the most aptly-named horses in action. Her dam was Regret, which would make the daughter's name appropriate enough, but Regret died while foaling the daughter of Royal Minstrel and the filly had to be raised by a foster mother. The young lady is speedy and will not be long out of the maiden class, the clockers say. The Bennings forces had two for the day. It's June in January here. The horses go around and around—and Mike generally comes out broke.

BILL.

First race—Old Ironsides ran an encouraging second last out of a shorter route. His races point to a better performance at 6 furlongs. All we need is a good ride from Bryson. Say Do finished next to the top one in his most recent effort. On Approval to take care of the others.

Second race—Candlelight is still a promising juvenile despite his defeat last out. On this occasion the colt was allowed to run wide. Better riding will bring us a purse here. Addis Ababa went well in his debut. Clocker Mike says the right one is Brave Caruso.

Third race—Dixie Princess failed to stick by her guns in the stretch last out and was forced out of the money. She meets cheaper company today and I'm goinug to string along. Albuquerque may awake in time to take the place. Irish Play could surprise at 100 pounds.

Fourth race—Centermarch, De-Valera and Pryor is the way I prefer them in this field. They share top weight with 115 pounds. Clocker Mike says that Coin is going to show a flip-flop in form, but I'll have to wait for a better race than that last.

Fifth race—Toano is a consistent miss and that's more than I can say for several members of this field. Gets in with only 106 pounds and I see no reason for mistakes.

Sixth race—Big Gawk, with Arcaro to do the booting, has a good chance in this company and I'm going to ride along with him. Vote Boy, recent sprint winner, may go on at this longer route. Shot Proof is dangerous.

Seventh race—Joan D., in light and an honest filly, gets my call here. She will have Somersault and Sweet Guinea to crowd out of the money.

Eighth race—Knights Hope sprinted in fine fashion last out and should be on edge for this kind of a test. Integrity draws Wall, the money rider. Grandpa's Boy should be in the money circle.

Hogs Rise $1 With Process Tax Outlawed

Marketers Asked More But Buyers Held Price to $10.40.

By the United Press.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Hog prices rocketed $1 higher today at the Union Stock Yards as the market caught the full effect of the Supreme Court's invalidation of the AAA.

Demand for a $1 boost in swine prices from salesmen, who realized they held the whip hand, were opposed vigorously by packers in the early trading, but buyers were forced to concede the advance late in the day. The decision outlawing the processing tax of $2.25 per 100 pounds on live hogs prompted the sensational boom.

A prominent co-operative marketing association attempted to force an advance in prices equal to the entire amount of the processing tax, but buyers balked at these demands and closing prices were 60 cents to $1 higher than yesterday, when gains of 35 cents were recorded in the small number of hogs available after the high court ruling was announced. The top price on choice, fat hogs was $10.40 per 100 pounds, 85 cents higher than before the removal of the tax yesterday.

Railroad Shares Join Utilities and Foods as Trading Favorites; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, Jan. 7.—More bullishness came into security markets. On its own steam or with Treasury support the Government bond market chose to disregard any inflationary possibilities that might lurk in the temptation of Congress to put upon the Treasury some of the dole and benefit burdens hitherto borne by consumers under the processing taxes. Prices were firm. Stocks were bought with more confidence, although interest continued largely in those sections directly affected by the rout of the AAA and the expected collapse of TVA. Turnover in stocks was smaller at around 3,000,000 shares. Commodities were mixed. Cotton and grains were lower. May wheat, unaffected by AAA, was half a cent higher, but other futures dropped an eighth to five-eighths of a cent a bushel.

Second thoughts on the AAA decision left the financial district in an even more cheerful frame of mind than was the case yesterday. So far as commodities are concerned it is granted that the Administration and Congress might do something legal, but still more unwise than the AAA, and cross-currents of that and other sorts ran through the commodity markets. With regard to stocks there was more of a tendency for traders and investors to look beyond immediate doubts, such as a possible reduction in rural spending for consumption goods, and to regard the longer range of business recovery based on natural forces and more freedom from brain busting management.

Stampede.

Confidence in the upset of TVA increased the demand for public utility shares. Commonwealth & Southern, directly in the path of the Government's invasion of privately owned utilities, continued to lead that section of the market. Meanwhile a buying movement developed in the railroad shares, based on a number of considerations. One was the improvement in earnings, another was the filing of a suit attacking the pension act (and any suit against New Deal legislation looks to be a good bet now), still another was the annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which made a plea for legislation designed to regulate motor, air and water competition with the rails, and reviewed progress made.

Conflicting movements in commodity markets cannot be explained offhand, simply on the grounds of the demise of AAA. Most of the excitement was in the hog market, and it was supposed to have been largely of a speculative character. Removal of the processing tax left producer and packer on opposite sides as to what should be done about it. Producers felt the price to the producer should be the previous market plus the tax, which theoretically had been passed on to the consumer. Packers apparently wished to benefit from part of the tax (that part which they had absorbed) and pass on the remainder to consumers, in the hope of increasing meat consumption.

Free Markets.

Bidding for hogs was lively, as today at least the side betting that packers would have to come into the market heavily and pay the old prices plus the tax was in the majority. Whether packers will do so is a question. Another factor was the supposition that wholesale and retail stocks of meats had been allowed to run low in anticipation of overthrow of the processing tax. Eventually the court decision should mean lower meat prices for the consumer, but it will require time to bring the livestock supply much higher, tax or no tax, and regardless of removal of restrictions on breeding and fattening.

With wheat the supposition is that spring planting will be heavier, now that control will be lifted, and the same applies to cotton. Weakness in those markets reflected that view. On both markets the bullish side has the prospect of larger consumption, and of course the possibility that the old benefits will be maintained, but next time from the Treasury, probably along with crop curtailing agreements. Such a law might also be unconstitutional, but that doesn't matter to some politicians to long as it can tide them over another election or wo.

After early skirmishing in which the food stocks and the utilities moved higher, the rails moved into the best price areas they have occupied since 1934. Gains were 1 to 3 points. Santa Fe, D. & H., Great Northern and Union Pacific were the leaders. Low-priced issues also were active and the equipments revived. Utilities also sold into new high ground. United Corporation joined Commonwealth & Southern as a leader. Numerous preferred issues jumped.

Concentration.

Food stocks were less active, being somewhat disturbed by the vagaries of the commodity markets and the uncertainties surrounding tax returns. Most of the baking shares were strong, although National Biscuit was unable to make much further headway. Tobaccos continued buoyant. Sugars and farm implements were neglected. Mail orders canceled most of the early losses. Other groups were neglected until a last hour rally.

Electrical issues were fairly powerful, as were the majority of the industrial standards. Steel held to a fractional gain. Building construction stocks revived a little, but about half the trading took place in the rails, utilities and foods. A few specialties were bought for quick advances, among them being Yellow Cab, Checker, Liquid Carbonic, Minneapolis Honeywell and A. O. Smith.

Bank Holdings.

The feature of this week's statement of member banks of the Federal Reserve system in 101 leading cities is the drop of $148,000,000 in Government bond holdings. That doesn't necessarily mean window dressing (turning of investments into cash) for the year-end statements. Most of the decline took place among the New York banks, where it is the custom to subscribe to Government issues for customers in lump sums and distribute the securities later. In such operations the sequence is a decline in bank holdings of securities. Deposits also rose, reflecting return of currency and Government spending.

Allied Chemical.

Announcement by Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation that the preferred stock would be paid off puts an end to one of the oldest rumors in the Street. That action for years had been regarded as only a question of time. What delayed it apparently was the resistance of holders of the stock, who knew a good investment when they had it. The shares will be called at 120, on February 14, the retirement price to include about two months' dividends at the $7 annual rate. The market was nevertheless caught a little by surprise, as the stock sold at 123⅞ before the news. The next sale was at 122¼, which was still a little expensive, as with the dividend the stock will bring in about $121.20 on the payable date. The common shares meanwhile jumped 5 points.

Bond Prices.

Secretary Morgenthau pointed to the strength of the Government bond market yesterday as proof that the budget message was well liked. If the Government bond market were moving under its own steam, that might mean something. However, the Treasury does not hesitate to step in and buy bonds whenever it thinks support may be needed. It might have done a little "hail to the chief" business yesterday.

Class I Roads Earn 1.85% Net In 11 Months

Operating Income for Same Period of 1934 Was 1.74%.

Class I railroads of the United States for the first 11 months of 1935 had a net railway operating income of $451,701,114 which was at the annual rate of return of 1.85 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday. In the first 11 months of 1934, their net railway operating income was $426,462,593 or 1.74 per cent on their property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

This compilation as to earnings for the first 11 months of 1935 is based on reports from 145 class I railroads representing a total of 237,716 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first 11 months of 1935 totaled $3,154,269,797, compared with $3,014,059,031 for the same period in 1934, an increase of 4.7 per cent. Operating expenses for the first 11 months of 1935 amounted to $2,367,770,363, compared with $2,244,035,154 for the same period in 1934, an increase of 5.5 per cent.

Twenty-six class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first 11 months of 1935, of which eight were in the Eastern District, five in the Southern and 13 in the Western District.

Armour & Co. Sales Gain 21% in Year

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Armour & Co. reported today a net profit of $9,349,000 from 1935 operations which returned a 21 per cent total sales advance over the previous year but involed a 3 per cent decrease in tonnage handled. Profit in 1934 was $10,500,000.

The annual statement, covering the fiscal year ended November 2 last, said the total profit represented 1¾ cents per dollar of sales.

Total sales amounted to $683,000,000 compared with $564,000,000 the previous year but net working capital declined approximately $800,000 from $114,000,000 to $113,200,000. The decline was attributed to expenditures in connection with the acquisition of additional packing plants in conformity with the company's policy of decentralizing operations.

Rally in Wheat Offsets Early Price Declines

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Nearly normal trading conditions returned to the grain pits today, and in some cases fresh downturns of prices were more than overcome by late rallies.

A fair demand from milling interests helped to bring about a moderate advance of May wheat at the last, and served also to steady new crop months. Under such circumstances, less attention was given to misgivings about market effects of the Supreme Court's decision to abolish process taxes and thereby eliminate Government control of domestic grain crop acreage.

Wheat closed irregular at ⅝ of a cent decline to an equal advance, compared with yesterday's finish. May, 1.02⅞@103, corn unchanged to ⅝ off, May 61⅛@62; oats unchanged to ¼ up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Socialite Wins Divorce; to Wed Again in 2 Days

Mrs. Rennert, W. N. Walmsley to be Married in Miami Tomorrow.

Mrs. Maria Teresa Sanchez-Domenech Rennert, beautiful Spanish wife of Hugo Rasin Rennert, prominent Washington and Philadelphia socialite, was awarded a divorce at Reno, Nev., yesterday, the Associated Press reported. She charged cruelty.

Mrs. Rennert is to be married tomorrow at Miami, Fla., to Walter N. Walmsley, jr., United States consul stationed at Havana, Cuba, it was learned by The Post. Mrs. Rennert made her home at the Brighton Apartments. Her former husband is now living at Richmond, Va.

The Rennerts were married at Madrid, Spain, on November 10, 1923. They have an 8-year-old daughter, Maria Elena, who was born in this city. Rennert was formerly connected with the Mixed Claims Commission.

Often called one of the Capital's best dressed women, Mrs. Rennert brought herself into the public's eye in the spring of 1934 when she attempted to bring into the United States an African pigmy named "Gogo."

Gogo, a talented house boy, linguist and musician, only the size of a child of 3 years, had been given to Mrs. Rennert by Gen. Nunez de Prado, her stepfather, who was captain general of the State of Andalusia in Spain. The general had purchased Gogo, a slave, at the island of Fernando Po, off the West Coast of Africa.

The State Department refused to admit Gogo, the slave, to this country.

Doris, Aged 3, Lost As Brother Is Born

Three-year-old Doris Phillips "wants her mommy"—but last night she remained in the Children's Receiving Home while the Police Women's Bureau decided just what should be done.

Doris was found wandering around a house in the 200 block E street northwest Monday night. Occupants summoned police, who took her to the Receiving Home. Hours passed before she was identified. Her hazel eyes flooding with tears, all Doris would say was:

"I want my mommy."

But "mommy" (Mrs. Eugene Phillips) is in the hospital. And Doris has a new baby brother. It was because of the new brother that Papa Phillips left the baby with friends, police say. He took Doris to the E street house to the friends. But they had moved. Papa Phillips left, however, according to reports, but little Doris remained. And that's where the police came in.

Russian Deciphers Ancient Syrian Tablet

Leningrad, U. S. S. R., Jan. 7 (AP).—The Russian expert, I. Ravrevy, announced today he had succeeded in deciphering a 5,000-year-old tablet casting new light on many Biblical events, particularly the flood.

The tablet was discovered in Syria in 1930 by a French expedition and was inscribed in a language heretofore impossible to decipher. Ravrevy said the writing dated back to a remote period of ancient Phoenicia and embodied "many principal elements contained in Biblical stories."

Coast Guard Airmen Save 7 Adrift in Boat

Key West, Fla., Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Coast Guard airmen from Miami today rescued two women and five men adrift in a powerless cabin cruiser 48 miles west of here.

Fears grew when no S O S signals were reported since they were known to be near steamship lanes.

Smith, Asking $250,000 Heart Balm, Charges Former Father-in-Law Forced Daughter to Sue in Plan to Retain Control of Estate.

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 7.—F. Brandon Smith, jr., seeking $250,000 heart balm, charged from the witness stand today his wife was coerced into a divorce through her father's determination to retain custody of her baby daughter, heiress to a portion of the estate of her first husband, Smith Reynolds.

Smith is suing his former father-in-law, Joseph F. Cannon, millionaire Concord business man, for alienation of affections. A verdict of $125,000 damages in a previous trial was set aside by Superior Court Judge W. F. Harding as excessive.

As the first and only witness of the day the young real estate man identified a score of letters written him by his former wife, Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith, years before her marriage to Smith Reynolds in November, 1929, all containing references to her love for him.

He said that their romance continued until two months before her marriage to young Reynolds, was resumed hardly more than a month later, after she had left her first husband, and that they became engaged only a few weeks after her divorce from Reynolds late in 1931. They were married the next spring.

That divorce was followed by Reynolds' marriage to Libby Holman, Broadway blues singer, and within a few months by his mysterious death after a party at his palatial Winston-Salem home.

During his engagement to Anne, Smith said, they planned to build a home here, and to bring her baby, then only a few months old, to live with them. The home was built, largely with Cannon's aid, he testified, and then he said the father-in-law declined to release the child.

Smith contended that Anne finally went home to live in January, 1934, largely through her desire to be with the child—that she continued her protestations of affections for him, but was nervously distraught.

Mrs. Smith, recovering in Florida from a recent operation, had not arrived today for the trial, but was expected later.

She was the chief defense witness at the first trial, declaring she never loved Smith, married him only to establish a home for herself and her baby, and divorced him of her own free will.

Mr. Spake Speaks Up And All Is Confusion

Gastonia, N. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—C. D. Spake declares he is his own uncle. Spake's grandfather, Daniel, married Mrs. Spake's mother, Mrs. Abernethy. That made Mrs. Spake (C. D.'s wife his grandfather's daughter. And that made his wife his aunt. If his wife is his aunt, he reasons, he must be his own uncle.

If you want to complicate the situation, he's figured this out too: His mother-in-law is his grandmother and his grandfather is his father-inlaw. Since his wife is his aunt, his children are his own first cousins.

Farm Hand, 17, Indicted In Employer's Slaying

Concord, N. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—Otis Glenn Rogers, 17-year-old farmhand, was indicted for murder today for the Christmas night slaying of A. Homer Widenhouse, 33, a farmer, Solicitor Charles Coggins said he hoped to call the case for trial tomorrow morning.

Rogers was quoted by Sheriff Ray Hoover as confessing he shot Widenhouse, his former employer, to death from ambush "because he teased me too much."

Twenty-five smaller pupils, occupants of fourth-floor classrooms, were led to an adjoining roof. The others, on the fifth floor, descended fire escapes to the street.

Maxwell Brain Indicates Blow Was Not Fatal

N. Y. Pathologist Reports Embalming Fluid May Have Caused Clots.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

After a two-day study of the autopsy report on Trigg Maxwell, an eminent New York pathologist has come to the conclusion that the blows struck by Edith Maxwell could not have caused her father's death.

The disclosure of the pathologist's findings was made yesterday by Earl Maxwell, following a conference with Charles Henry Smith, an outstanding Virginia criminal lawyer, who has been retained by The Post to fight the conviction of the mountain school teacher.

None of the injuries, mentioned in the autopsy report, the pathologist said, were sufficient to cause the death of Maxwell, who was allegedly killed by his daughter when she resisted an attack by him because she came home at midnight.

Name Not Disclosed.

The name of the pathologist was not disclosed by Maxwell, who has been directed by Smith to return to New York to obtain an affidavit from him.

After a study of the autopsy report by the two Norton, Va., physicians who performed the autopsy, the pathologist said he was unable to give an opinion as to the actual cause of death.

"The autopsy is not complete," he said. "There has been no chemical analysis or miscroscopic examination made. The condition of the organs of the chest and abdomen have not been established and, therefore, lesions of the chest and abdominal organs, which might have contributed to the death of Trigg Maxwell, were not ascertained."

At the trial of the girl, doctors testified that blood clots at the base of the brain caused the death; but the pathologist insists that this condition might have been due to natural causes and not to the blows inflicted by Edith Maxwell with a slipper.

Embalming Considered.

"It is inconceivable that the minor injuries found on Trigg Maxwell, as disclosed in the autopsy report, could have caused his death," the pathologist added.

A second motion for a new trial is scheduled to be argued next week before Judge A. A. W. Skeen in the circuit court at Wise, Va. If this is denied, the next recourse is an appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The Post's fund for the defense of Edith Maxwell yesterday increased to $804.33.

Mr. C. C. Page	$1.00
Mrs. R. H. English	$1.00
Yesterday's contributions	$2.00

Maryland Town Lists 7 Cases Of Diphtheria

County Acts to Prevent Spread of Disease at Jefferson.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 7.—With seven cases of diphtheria reported in the town of Jefferson over the week end, Frederick County health authorities today kept close watch to prevent any spread of the disease.

Dr. E. C. Kefauver, county health officer, said 10 high school pupils, who have been in contact with infected persons, have been excluded from school until the danger of contracting the disease has passed.

Six cases are in the family of Randy Shellhorse at Jefferson. One of the children, a 7-year-old boy, was taken to a Baltimore hospital for treatment. He is suffering from diphtheria croup.

The seventh case is that of Hubert Miller, son of Keller Miller, of Jefferson.

All those affected by the ailment range from 6 to 16 years in age. All are reported getting along satisfactorily.

Dr. Kefauver said the source of the infection was traced to New Jersey, where members of the Shellhorse family reportedly visited recently.

Driver Kills Mother.

MOUNT VERNON is plentiful again—and known by its sightly pre-prohibition square bottle. Maryland straight rye whiskey, bottled in bond under U. S. For really fine whiskey which you can afford, get genuine old Mount Vernon in the square bottle, at the better bars and liquor stores.

WAS IT MURDER!

● "TRAPPED! And the footsteps on the stairs were climbing towards him. He was certain of it, though he felt rather than heard their approach. They were soft, stealthy footsteps, creeping up towards him through the blackness. He was sure that in another moment he would either turn sick or scream at the top of his voice . . or else hurl himself desperately downwards against whatever horror might be ascending. All he did, however, was to close his eyes as if to shut out the very perception of darkness.
